GENERAL NOTICES.

Offices: Salisbury Square, London, E.C.

Telegraphic Address: 'Testimony, London.' Telegraphic Code: 'Via Eastern.' Telephone: Holborn 1966.

Hours of Business: 9.45 A.M. to 5.30 P.M.; Saturdays, 9.45 A.M. to 1 P.M.

GENERAL POLICY, etc.—All communications as to the General Policy of the Society, with regard to Ecclesiastical matters, and any letters to be officially brought to the General Committee, should be addressed to the Hon. Secretary.

CONTRIBUTIONS to the General, Appropriated, Special, or Medical Mission Funds of the Society should be sent to the local Treasurer, or may be paid at any time at the Society's House, Salisbury Square, E.C., or to the Society's Bankers, Williams Deacon's Bank, Limited, Birchin Lane, E.C.; or in Ireland at the C.M.S. Office, 21, Molesworth Street, Dublin. Cheques and Postal Orders sent direct to the C.M. House should be made payable to 'The Church Missionary Society.' Remittances should be accompanied by full particulars as to whether they are to be credited to any Association, or as 'Paid Direct,' and if for the General or any Appropriated Fund.

SPECIAL REQUEST re CONTRIBUTIONS.—The Committee wish to impress upon local Treasurers and Secretaries that at present, while the expenditure is spread fairly equally over the whole year, a large proportion of the income is received during the last few months of the year; and to ask:

1. That efforts may be made to obtain Subscriptions at an early date in the financial year.
2. That at the end of every month all moneys lying at the local Banks or in the hands of Treasurers may be forwarded to the Lay Secretary.

If this were done, a considerable sum would be saved each year in Interest on Loans.

EDITORIAL.—Communications as to literary matters and subjects connected with the contents of the Publications of the Society should be addressed to the Editorial Secretary.

CANDIDATES.—All inquiries as to offers of service in the Foreign Field and the training of Candidates should be addressed to the Secretary of the Candidates Department.

FOREIGN.—Correspondence regarding the ordinary work abroad should be addressed to the Foreign Secretaries. That concerning Medical Missions should be addressed to the Secretary to the Medical Committee.

HOME ORGANIZATION.—The Home Organization Department is under the control of the Home Secretary (The Right Rev. Bishop Ingham), to whom all correspondence should be addressed. He will welcome personal conference regarding any matter connected with the work of the Associations throughout the country. Correspondence regarding 'Own Missionaries' should be addressed to the Lay Secretary.

Arrangements for Sermons and Meetings in connexion with Associations will be made by the Organizing Secretaries for the respective Districts, a list of whom is given on page viii.

For information regarding the work and needs of Educational Missions, application should be made to the Secretary to the Education Committee.

Inquiries relative to the Medical Mission Auxiliary, and applications for Deputations or special literature, should be made to the Rev. H. G. Harding, C.M. House; or if for the North-West of England, to the Rev. W. R. Cole, M.A., 182, Shrewsbury Street, Brooks's Bar, Manchester.

Applications from Gleaners', Young People's, and other Unions for Deputations to Meetings, and ordinary correspondence, should be addressed to the respective Secretaries.

Correspondence with regard to the subject of Missionary Study and in connexion with the Circulating Library should be addressed to the Rev. G. T. Manley, M.A., C.M. House.

Orders for and correspondence regarding the supply of the Society's Publications should be addressed to The Manager, Publishing Department, but cheques and Postal Orders should be made payable to 'The Church Missionary Society.' The Society's Publications may also be obtained through any bookseller, or from the Society's Agencies at Belfast, Birmingham, Bolton, Bristol, Cork, Derby, Dublin, Exeter, Leeds, Liverpool, Manchester, Newcastle-on-Tyne and Nottingham.

Applications for the loan of Lantern Slides, Linen Pictures, Wall Maps, Costumes, Curios for Exhibitions, and Books, and Exhibitions of the Kinematograph should be made to the Superintendent of the Loan Department, Mr. Ernest J. Staples, at the C.M. House.

Except under very special circumstances, there is always one or more of the Secretaries in attendance who may be seen during office hours.

The Committee meet at the Society's House on the Second Tuesday in the Month throughout the year, at Eleven o'clock. (See Regulation xxi. p. xv.)

A Prayer Meeting for friends of the Society is held at the Society's House every Thursday from 4 to 5 P.M.

PRAYER USED AT THE ANNUAL MEETINGS OF THE SOCIETY, AND AT THE OPENING OF MEETINGS OF THE GENERAL COMMITTEE.

ALMIGHTY and most merciful FATHER, we give Thee humble thanks for the light of Thy Gospel. Make us more grateful for this Thy mercy, and more zealous for the salvation of all mankind.

Visit in mercy the Church of Christ; enrich it more abundantly with the grace of Thy Holy Spirit; and bless its endeavours to make known Thy Truth. Unite, as one man, all who are truly labouring for Thee. Disappoint the designs of Satan. Let all Christian Societies live in harmony and love; give them wisdom in all their plans; perfect Thy strength in their weakness; and direct their labours to Thy glory.

The harvest truly is great, but the Labourers are few! O Thou Lord of the Harvest, send forth labourers into Thy Harvest! Fill with Thy Spirit those whom Thou hast sent forth; and enable them faithfully and boldly to preach, among Jews and Gentiles, the unsearchable riches of Christ. Keep them from the snares of the world, the flesh, and the devil; deliver them from all evil; and make them wise to win souls.

Upon all the Native Converts whom Thou hast gathered to Thyself through Thy labouring servants throughout the world pour out Thy Holy Spirit, that as Thou hast begotten them again unto a lively hope, so they may ever be followers of Thee as dear children. Deliver them from all remaining darkness and ignorance; destroy and abolish in their hearts all that remains of Satan's kingdom; grant that their faith and hope and love may grow exceedingly; make them to be ready to every good work, and more especially to exert themselves for the salvation of those around them; that so, by their zeal and faithful testimony, by their holiness and fruitfulness, they may glorify Thy name before their countrymen, and bring in unto Thee from the midst of them such as shall be saved.

Have compassion, O most merciful Father, on all those who have come under instruction, though they be not yet altogether Christians. Convince them effectually by Thy Word and Spirit of their sinful and miserable state; pour upon them the spirit of grace and supplication, and draw them to Jesus.

Take away blindness from the Jews. Let them receive Thee, O Jesus, as their Messiah, and proclaim Thy saving Name among the Gentiles.

Deliver all Mohammedans from the delusions of the False Prophet. O Thou True Prophet of Thy Church, enlighten them by Thy Holy Spirit, and bow them down at the foot of Thy Cross!

Pity blind Idolaters who are kept in cruel bondage by the god of this world. Turn them from idols, that they may serve the Living and True God.

O Thou Almighty Saviour, Who by the right hand of God art exalted, and hast received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, shed forth His light and grace on this dark world!

Cause all Christians, we beseech Thee, to sow bountifully that they may reap also bountifully. O Thou that lovest a cheerful giver, let all grace abound toward them, that they may minister liberally of their substance to the making known of Thy Name!

With these our humble prayers, we join our praises and thanksgiving for what Thou hast already done in making known Thy salvation; perfect Thy work, O Lord; shortly accomplish the number of Thine elect; and hasten the coming of Thy Kingdom.

Be present with us, O Lord, at this time. Give us all a single eye to Thy glory. May Thy blessing rest upon our meeting; and may all our hearts be this day quickened and encouraged to fresh and persevering efforts in Thy Service.

We ask these mercies for the glory of Thy Name, through the merits and mediation of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ; and would ascribe to Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, Three Persons in One God, everlasting praise. Amen.

Our Father, which art in heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, As it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our trespasses, As we forgive them that trespass against us. And lead us not into temptation; But deliver us from evil: For thine is the kingdom, The power, and the glory, For ever and ever. Amen.

PRAYER USED AT THE OPENING OF MEETINGS OF THE COMMITTEE OF CORRESPONDENCE.

Almighty God, our heavenly Father, Who hast purchased to Thyself an Universal Church by the precious blood of Thy dear Son, we give Thee hearty thanks that it hath pleased Thee to call us to the knowledge of Thy grace and faith in Thee, and to appoint our lot in an age and country where the true light shineth. We bless Thee that Thou hast awakened us in some measure to feel our responsibilities. We praise Thee for what we have seen and heard of the power of Thy Word among the Heathen; we adore Thee for Thy many servants who have gone out from amongst us to toil, and suffer, and die in making known Thy salvation; and we thank Thee that Thou dost allow us, unworthy sinners, to unite together in this work of faith and labour of love.

We humbly confess our past lukewarmness in this Thy service, notwithstanding these Thine inestimable benefits and mercies. For our Lord Jesus Christ's sake, forgive us our past negligences, and so endue us with Thy Holy Spirit that we may more earnestly seek Thy glory in the salvation of souls.

Grant us, we beseech Thee, Thy very present help at these our meetings. We ask, most gracious God and Father, for a constraining sense of the love of the Lord Jesus, and for wisdom to direct us in all our endeavours. Increase upon us the spirit of power, and of love, and of a sound mind. Give us faith and courage; give us zeal and patience; give us a single eye to Thy glory; and help us to bear and to forbear. The silver and the gold are Thine, O King of kings! Supply us with what is needful for Thy great work, and make us faithful stewards of Thy bounty, for proclaiming to the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ.

We pray also for all who are united with us in the direction of this sacred cause.

May Thine especial blessing rest upon our Committees, with their Secretaries, throughout the world. Bestow on them the help that we feel so needful for ourselves. Enable them to maintain the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace, and ever to find favour in the sight of all with whom they may have to do.

Especially we beseech Thee to look, O most merciful Father, upon our missionary brethren. Draw out our hearts towards them more and more; and while they are bearing the burden abroad, give us grace to help and succour them by our sympathy and prayers at home. Bless every letter written to them from this house, and all our intercourse with them. We pray for them that they may be filled with Thy Spirit. Grant that the same mind may be in them which was also in Christ Jesus. Let them never lose thei first love. Raise them above the cares of this world. Help them to deny themselves and to endure all things for the elect's sake. Give them the tongue of him that is taught. Clothe them with humility. Teach them to follow peace with each other, and with all men. Support them under spiritual distresses, temptations of the adversary, bodily sickness, domestic anxieties, and hope deferred. And so confirm Thy Word from their lips by the power of the Holy Ghost, that through them multitudes may be turned from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto Thee, our God.

We commend to Thee the missionaries' children entrusted to our charge. Bring them all to a saving knowledge of Christ Jesus. Defend them with Thy heavenly grace that they may continue Thine for ever, and daily increase in Thy Holy Spirit more and more, until they come unto Thy everlasting kingdom. Give all needed grace to those who have the direction of the Home in the discharge of the arduous work with which Thou hast been pleased to entrust them.

We most heartily thank Thee, O Lord, for those whom Thou hast already sent forth through this Society; and we pray for a yet larger outpouring of a missionary spirit on our younger Clergy, on the members of our Universities, on those who are elsewhere preparing for this holy work, on the young men of all ranks and orders throughout our land. And herein do we implore Thy special favour on our Training Institutions, that their numbers may be replenished continually: and that none may go forth from them but such as shall be able ministers of the New Testament, full of faith, and of the Holy Ghost.

We praise Thee, O Thou God of all grace, for the converts, the native catechists, and the native clergy, whom Thou hast granted to us in our several Missions. As Thou hast raised the Native Churches thus far, bring them, we pray Thee, to full ripeness and perfectness of age in Christ. Pour out upon them Thy Holy Spirit. Stablish, strengthen, settle them, and so enlarge their liberality that they may both maintain Thy Word among themselves and may make it known to the regions beyond them, till all the Gentiles hear the glad tidings of Thy love.

And now, O Lord God, be Thou in the midst of us to-day. Give us a constant sense of Thy presence, and may all our undertakings be begun, continued, and ended in Thee, to the honour of Thy great Name, for the sake of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. Amen.

LAWS AND REGULATIONS

OF THE

CHURCH MISSIONARY SOCIETY FOR AFRICA AND THE EAST.

(As revised at Special Meetings of Members of the Society, held on July 2, 1890, and February 12, 1907.)

I. THIS Institution shall be designated 'The Church Missionary Society for Africa and the East;' and shall be conducted by a Patron or Patrons, a Vice-Patron, a President, Vice-Presidents, a COMMITTEE, and such Officers as may be deemed necessary, all being Members of the Established Church of England or of the Church of Ireland.

II. The office of PATRON of the Society shall be reserved for Members of the Royal Family; and that of VICE-PATRON for His Grace the Primate of All England, if, being a Member of the Society, he shall accept the office. The PRESIDENT shall be such Temporal Peer or Commoner as may be appointed to that office, and VICE-PRESIDENTS shall consist of all Archbishops and Bishops of the Churches of England and Ireland who, being Members of the Society, shall accept the office; and of such other persons as, being also Members, shall be appointed thereto.

OF MEMBERS AND GOVERNORS.

III. Annual Subscribers of One Guinea and upwards, and if Clergymen Half-a-Guinea, with Collectors of One Guinea, and upwards, per annum, shall be Members of the Society during the continuance of such Subscriptions or Collections. Benefactors of Ten Guineas, and upwards, in one sum shall be Members for Life.

IV. Annual Subscribers of Five Guineas shall be Governors during the continuance of such Subscription; and Benefactors of Fifty Pounds, and upwards, in one sum, shall be Governors for Life.

V. Subscriptions and Benefactions shall confer the same privileges, whether paid to the Society direct or through an Auxiliary or Association.

VI. The COMMITTEE may appoint such persons as have rendered essential services to the Society, either Honorary Members for Life, or Honorary Governors for Life.

OF GENERAL MEETINGS.

VII. An Annual Meeting of the Members of the Society shall be held in London, on the Tuesday next before the first Wednesday in May; when the proceedings of the foregoing year shall be reported, the Accounts presented, and the Treasurer and COMMITTEE chosen. And whenever any vacancy in the office of Treasurer shall occur, the COMMITTEE may fill up the vacancy, for the interval between the occurrence of such vacancy and the next Annual Meeting.

VIII. The COMMITTEE may summon a Special General Meeting of the Members of the Society, at which not less than Thirty shall constitute a Quorum, at any time, and they shall do so on receipt of a requisition in writing, addressed to the Secretaries, and signed by not less than Fifty Members of the Society, and specifying the object of the Meeting. Ten days' notice shall be given in Three London Daily Newspapers, and in two other Newspapers, of any such intended Meeting, and of the purpose for which it is called; which shall be deemed sufficient publicity.

IX. None of the Laws and Regulations of the Society shall be repealed or altered, nor any new ones made, but at the Annual Meeting or at a Special General Meeting called for that purpose.

X. An Anniversary Sermon shall be preached at some Church in London, by a Clergyman appointed by the COMMITTEE. An Annual Report of the Society shall be printed for the use of its Members.

OF THE COMMITTEE.

XI. The COMMITTEE shall consist of the following, being members of the Established Church of England or of the Church of Ireland:—(a) Twenty-four Lay Members of the Society elected at the Annual Meeting. (b) All Clergymen who are Members of the Society and have been so for not less than one year. (c) All Honorary Governors for Life, and all such other Governors as have been so for not less than one year. In every year so many of the elected Members shall go out of office as, with the vacancies, if any, occurring among them during the preceding year, will make six vacancies, and shall not be re-eligible until the following year. The COMMITTEE shall decide which Members go out of office in each year.

XII. The COMMITTEE shall elect, at their First Meeting in every year, either from among themselves, or from the other Members of the Society (being members of the Established Church of England or of the Church of Ireland), a Committee of Patronage, a Committee of Funds and Home Organization, a Committee of Correspondence, a Committee of Finance, and a Committee of Estimates, and shall have power to fill up vacancies. Each of the said Committees shall keep Minutes of its Proceedings, and shall make such reports of its proceedings to the COMMITTEE as the COMMITTEE shall require.

XIII. The office of the Committee of Patronage is to procure patronage and support to the Society; and to nominate to the COMMITTEE proper persons as Patrons, President, Vice-Presidents, Honorary Life Governors, Honorary Life Members of the Society, and preachers of the Anniversary Sermons.

XIV. The office of the Committee of Funds and Home Organization is to circulate information respecting the Society; to adopt means of obtaining Subscriptions, Benefactions, and Collections in Churches, Chapels, and at Meetings; to take a general oversight of the Associations; and to nominate, from time to time, to the COMMITTEE, suitable persons to act as Agents and Representatives of the Society for these objects.

XV. The office of the Committee of Correspondence is to seek for proper Missionaries, to nominate them to the COMMITTEE, to superintend their instruction when necessary, to recommend their location, and to correspond with them when sent out, and generally to direct the foreign work of the Society. Subject to the control of the COMMITTEE, the Committee of Correspondence may delegate any of their duties to Committees elected from among themselves, and may authorize such Committees to report directly to the COMMITTEE, and may fix their Quorum.

XVI. The office of the Committee of Finance is, generally, to superintend the accounts and financial affairs of the Society, and from time to time to note and to report to the COMMITTEE how far the expenditure corresponds with the sanctioned Estimates.

XVII. The office of the Committee of Estimates is to prepare and submit to the COMMITTEE an estimate of the probable expenditure of the Society.

XVIII. The Committee of Correspondence shall appoint from among themselves, at their First Meeting in every year, a Clerical Sub-Committee, and may appoint at their discretion other Committees, for the examination of Missionary Candidates.

XIX. The COMMITTEE may make regulations as to the conduct of business by themselves and by the other Committees, and subject to and so far as not inconsistent with any such regulations for the time being in force, the COMMITTEE shall receive and deal with the Reports of the other Committees, shall decide upon the countries where Missions shall be carried on, and shall superintend and control the affairs of the Society in general. The COMMITTEE may authorize any Committee appointed under Law XII., and with the consent of the Committee of Correspondence any Committee appointed under Law XV. to deal with and dispose of any matters and classes of matters the consideration of which falls within its province, reporting its action to the next meeting of the COMMITTEE. Subject to the control of the COMMITTEE, every Committee may make Bye-laws for its own government, and may appoint Sub-Committees and fix their Quorum.

XX. The COMMITTEE shall have power to appoint such Officers and Assistants as they shall deem necessary for the well-conducting of the affairs of the Society, subject, in the case of the appointment of Secretaries, to the approbation of the next Annual Meeting. One, at least, of the Secretaries shall be a layman. The COMMITTEE shall also have power to acquire property of every description for the purposes of the Society, and to invest the funds of the Society as they may deem expedient, and to vest all or any portions of the property and funds of the Society in such Trustee or Trustees, or corporate body, as they may in each case think fit.

XXI. The COMMITTEE shall meet on the second Tuesday in every month, and oftener if needful. The other Committees shall meet as often, and at such places, as shall be by them agreed on. All Committee Meetings shall be opened with reading a Form of Prayer composed for that purpose, or one or more suitable Prayers selected from the Liturgy.

XXII. The Patrons, Vice-Patron, President, Vice-Presidents, Treasurer and Secretaries shall be considered, ex officio, Members of all Committees.

XXIII. Five Members shall be necessary to form a Quorum of the COMMITTEE; and Three of each of the Committees provided for in Law XII.; in each case exclusive of the Secretaries. In cases of equality of votes, the Chairman shall be entitled to a second or casting vote. Every Committee may act notwithstanding vacancies.

XXIV. All payments on account of the Society shall be signed by Three Members of the COMMITTEE, in Committee, and the Lay Secretary, or in his absence by one of the other Secretaries.

XXV. The accounts of the Society shall be audited and reported upon by Public Accountants appointed by the COMMITTEE, and Five Honorary Auditors, Members of the Society (of whom not more than two shall be Members of the COMMITTEE), shall be appointed annually by the COMMITTEE for the purpose of considering the Reports of Public Accountants, and of making recommendations thereon, and generally on the Accounts to the COMMITTEE once at least in every year.

OF MISSIONARIES.

XXVI. Every offer for Missionary Service shall be referred by the Secretaries either to the Committee of Correspondence or in the first instance to the Clerical Sub-Committee or other Committee appointed under Law XVIII. to which it shall belong under rules laid down by the Committee of Correspondence; and the Committee of Correspondence shall have power to deal with the offer, both as to the training and as to the nomination as a Missionary of the Candidate. Provided that no one shall be sent out as a Missionary without having been approved by the Committee of Correspondence; and without, as a general rule, having appeared before them.

XXVII. Candidates nominated by the Committee of Correspondence, and accepted by the COMMITTEE, shall receive instruction in such parts of knowledge, and be prepared in such a manner for their future employment, as the Committee of Correspondence shall judge expedient.

XXVIII. Candidates shall consider themselves engaged to go to any part of the world, and at any time that the COMMITTEE shall decide, and be subject to such regulations as may be established by the COMMITTEE for the direction of the Missionaries: respect, however, being had to their personal circumstances, or to any previous stipulation made by them with the Society.

XXIX. Men who have been duly prepared and finally approved for Missionary work, shall go out, either ordained or unordained, at the discretion of the COMMITTEE.*

XXX. The Missionaries who go out under the direction of this Society shall be allowed to visit home, permission having been previously obtained from the COMMITTEE; and after having laboured in the cause of the Society, to the satisfaction of the COMMITTEE, at the Stations committed to their care, until age or infirmity prevent further exertion, such provision shall be made to render their remaining days comfortable as in the judgment of the COMMITTEE is suitable. The COMMITTEE shall have the power to assist also, in particular cases, the dependent Relatives of those Missionaries who, by devoting themselves to the service of the Society, are prevented from contributing to their support. The COMMITTEE shall be further empowered in special cases to make such arrangements with those employed by them as they may think fit.

GENERAL.

XXXI. A friendly intercourse shall be maintained with other Protestant Societies engaged in the same benevolent design of propagating the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

XXXII. All questions relating to matters of Ecclesiastical Order and Discipline, respecting which a difference shall arise between a Bishop of the Church of England abroad and the COMMITTEE, shall, in the absence of any tribunal having legal cognizance of the same, be referred to the Archbishops and Bishops of the Provinces of Canterbury and York, whose decision thereupon shall be binding upon the Society and its agents, and representatives. The proposed reference shall be made by the COMMITTEE, through His Grace the Primate, accompanied by such explanations and statements as the COMMITTEE may deem advisable.

XXXIII. The object of the preceding Law being only to provide a mode of settling questions relating to Ecclesiastical Order and Discipline as to which no provision has yet been made by the Society, it is not to be so construed as in any other respect to alter the principles and practices of the Society, as they are contained in its Laws and Regulations.

XXXIV. It is recommended to every Member of the Society to pray to Almighty God for a blessing upon its designs; under the full conviction that, unless He 'prevent us, in all our doings, with His most gracious favour, and further us with His continual help,' the Society cannot reasonably hope to meet with persons of a proper spirit and qualifications to be Missionaries, or expect their endeavours to be crowned with success.

* The Bishops of the Church of England under the authority of the law of the land ordain and send forth [ecclesiastically speaking] the Society's Missionaries; and in the event of their being appointed by the COMMITTEE to labour at stations within the jurisdiction of a Bishop of the Church of England abroad, it is the practice of the Society to apply to the Bishop for licences, in which are specified the districts to which the Missionaries have been assigned. This is done on the understanding that licences will neither be refused nor when granted be withdrawn from the Missionaries during their connexion with the Society, except for some assigned legal cause.

STATIONS, CLERICAL AND LAY MISSIONARIES, BUSINESS AGENTS AND NATIVE CLERGYMEN,

ON JUNE 1, 1910.

* A STATION is the place at which a clerical or lay missionary or a native clergyman is stationed. The main Stations (where more than one) in the following list are prefaced by a numeral to promote facility of reference in using the index on p. lvi. The post-town of each Station, when it is known, is given in parenthesis after the name of the Station, except in cases where the Station is itself a post-town. Where not otherwise stated, it may be assumed that the Stations which are not numbered have the same post-town as the main Stations after which they appear. For Palestine, where there is no delivery of letters, it is desirable to address letters intended for the Stations which are not numbered to the 'care of' one of the missionaries at the main Station. The figures immediately after the name of the Station or post-town refer to the year in which the Station was first occupied by a European missionary.*

The figures after the names of the European and Colonial labourers show the year of their first sailing for the Society's Missions, or of their reception into connexion in the field. Their University or College is indicated thus: Oxford, 'Oxf.'; Cambridge, 'Camb.'; Dublin, 'Dub.'; Durham, 'Dur.'; Edinburgh, 'Edin.'; Glasgow, 'Glas.'; London, 'Lond.'; Archbishop of Canterbury's Degree, 'Lamb.'; Islington, 'Isl.'; London College of Divinity, 'Lond. Coll. Div.'; King's College, London, 'K.C.L.' After the names of men trained at the Society's Preparatory Institution, formerly at Clapham but now at Blackheath, the word 'Clapham' or 'Blackheath' is placed. In the case of women trained at The Willows, Stoke Newington, at The Olives, South Hampstead, or at the Society's late Highbury Training Home, the words 'The Willows,' 'The Olives,' or 'Highbury,' occur after their names. The letter D. after the name of an ordained man, whether European or native, indicates that he was a deacon on June 1, 1910. The word 'Nurse' after the name of a missionary denotes that she is a trained nurse.

*The mark * before a missionary's name signifies that he or she is specially connected as 'Own Missionary' with, and, as regards personal allowances, is wholly or partially supported by, individual friends of the Society or by the Associations or other bodies whose names are given in brackets [thus ( )]. The terms 'Hon.' and 'partly Hon.,' in parenthesis, after the name of a missionary, mean that such missionary draws no allowances, or only a portion of the usual allowances. In the case of the Colonial Associations (N. S. Wales = New South Wales, Vict = Victoria, New Z. = New Zealand) the missionaries have been selected, and, when necessary, also trained by the Associations, by which likewise they are supported in the field. In nearly all the instances referred to, the Society is responsible for all other than personal allowances, as well as for the expenditure which is involved in the maintenance of the work.*

The mark † denotes that the missionaries to whose names it is prefixed are in local connexion, i.e., that their offers of service were accepted by the Society's representatives in the several Missions, or, in Canada, by the Canadian C.M.S. Missionaries' wives take the status of their husbands as concerns local connexion.

The names of native clergymen are printed in italics. The figures after their names show the date of ordination as deacon. The mark ‡ denotes that the person to whose name it is prefixed is supported by Native Church Funds, which are in most instances aided by the Society.

The maiden names of wives of European and Colonial missionaries, and the year of marriage, when known, are given in parenthesis. In the case of each lady who was a missionary of the Society before marriage, the Mission in which she laboured and the year of joining it are stated; and in the case of ladies who were missionaries of other Societies, the initials indicating the Society ('C.E.Z.M.S.' = Church of England Zenana Missionary Society; 'Z.B.M.M.' = Zenana Bible and Medical Mission; 'F.E.S.' = the late Female Education Society) are given, as well as the country and year of joining. Wives of missionaries are always expected by the Society to lay themselves out to do good among the native women in every practicable way, such as by cultivating familiar intercourse with them, educating children and instructing the adult women.

The names of all missionaries in the field are placed under the station at which they were working on June 1, 1910. The names of those who on that date were at home or on the way home or on the way out are placed under the station at which they last resided, unless, in the case of those on the way out, they have been definitely assigned to some other station. The names under each station are printed in order of date, without reference to nationality, sex, orders, or other difference; except that the Secretaries of Missions are placed first in order at the Stations where they reside, and wives of missionaries are placed immediately after their husbands.

PROCEEDINGS AT THE ONE-HUNDRED-AND-ELEVENTH ANNIVERSARY.

At the Annual Meeting of the Church Missionary Society, held at Queen's Hall, Langham Place, London, Tuesday, May 3, 1910, being the Society's One-Hundred-and-Eleventh Anniversary,

THE RIGHT HON. SIR JOHN H. KENNAWAY, BART., C.B.,

President, in the Chair,

AFTER READING OF SCRIPTURE AND PRAYER,

'The General Review of the Year' was read, and, on the motion of Sydney Gedge, Esq., seconded by G. A. Western, Esq., the following Resolution was adopted:—

That the General Review of the Year, which has just been read, together with the Report, of which an abstract has been presented, be adopted, printed and circulated under the direction of the Committee; that the thanks of the Meeting be given to the Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of Manchester for his Sermon before the Society last evening, and that it be printed and circulated; that Colonel Robert Williams, M.P., be the Treasurer of the Society; and that the Committee be appointed for the ensuing year, with power to fill vacancies.

After which, on a motion by the Chairman, seconded by the Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of Ely, it was resolved—

This Meeting desires humbly to express its gratitude to Almighty God for His blessing during the past year, manifested in the multiplied openings throughout the world, in the conversion of many souls, in the growth of Native Churches, and in the prayers and sympathy of so many earnest friends at home. It has, notwithstanding, to deplore the fact that the Society's Income has still been insufficient to meet its expenditure, and, in view of the increase of the estimates for the coming year and of the urgent need for more adequate equipment of its Missions, it recognizes with sorrow the burden laid on the Committee of devising some well-considered methods for the restriction of the Society's work, in order to secure an equilibrium in its finances; and pledges itself to prayer to Almighty God for guidance of the Committee in their difficult task.

The following Meetings were also held in London in connexion with the Anniversary:—

On May 3 at CAXTON HALL, Westminster, S.W., at 3 P.M. (for women), Lady Coote in the Chair;

And at ROYAL ALBERT HALL, South Kensington, at 7 P.M., His Grace the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury in the Chair;

On May 4 at CAXTON HALL, Westminster, at 7 P.M. (for men), Colonel Robert Williams, M.P., in the Chair;

And on May 6, at QUEEN'S HALL, Langham Place, W., at 7 P.M. (Medical Mission Auxiliary), Professor A. Carless, M.S., F.R.C.S., in the Chair.

Addresses were delivered at these Meetings by the Bishop of Ely, the Bishop of Stepney, Bishop Ingham, the Rev. E. Grose Hodge, the Rev. Harrington C. Lees, the Rev. W. Bryant Salmon, the Rev. W. Temple, Sir W. Lee-Warner, K.C.S.I., Mrs. Douglas Thornton, Miss Helen Bradshaw, Miss A. de Sélincourt, the Rev. R. F. Pearce (Bengal), the Rev. A. W. Smith (Yoruba), Dr. J. H. Cook (Uganda), Dr. T. L. Pennell (Punjab), and Dr. B. Van Someren Taylor (Fuh-Kien).

THE ANNUAL SERMON

BY THE RIGHT REV. EDMUND ARBUTHNOTT KNOX, D.D., BISHOP OF MANCHESTER.

'OH THAT ISHMAEL MIGHT LIVE BEFORE THEE!'—Gen. xvii. 18.

THE faith of the Israelite taught him to trace to a hereditary origin all that made him differ from his brother Semites. He did not account for the variation between the Arab and himself in customs, language and worship by the fact that the Arab had always been and continued to be what Israel himself had once been, a desert-wanderer. He accounted for them by the descent of the Arab from Ishmael, the child indeed of Abraham, but Abraham's child by the bondwoman Hagar. The Arab's exclusion from the Messianic hope, his incapacity for civilization, his intractability, his predatory habits, his banishment from the commonwealth of the nations were therefore all due to this one unalterable fact. Existence had been granted to Ishmael in response to Abraham's prayer, but it was to be for ever the existence of an outcast.

Yet the Scripture itself contained indications of a better hope: 'I will multiply Ishmael,' 'I will make him a great nation.' We, who know that the end of the covenant with Isaac was the reconciling of all mankind to God in Jesus Christ, must refuse to treat the sentence of exile as an irrevocable decree. We cannot but renew from our hearts the patriarch's prayer, 'Oh that Ishmael might live before Thee!'

To-night I do not propose to treat Abraham's prayer for Ishmael as a prayer for Arabia only, but as an intercession on behalf of the whole Mohammedan world, which may all be called in some sense the spiritual descendants of Ishmael. However sincerely many of them may hold Ishmael accursed, we may for our purpose include in one the Moslems of China and Malay, of Persia, Afghanistan and India, of the Turkish Empire and of Africa. We need not dwell on racial or on sectarian divisions. To us Christians they are all adherents of that faith which confronts our missionary enterprise over the greater part of Asia and Africa: worshipping, as we do, one God; opposed, as we are opposed, to pantheism and to idolatry; yet for all that presenting the most serious of all obstacles to the progress of Christianity. From our hearts in some form or other the prayer is continually rising, 'Oh that Ishmael might live before Thee!'

Two principal questions may engage our meditations to-night. The first: Is there any indication that the answer to our prayer for Ishmael is any nearer to-day than in the long centuries that have hardened the face of Islam as adamant against Christianity? And the second: Where, if anywhere, is the point of contact between the two religions, and in what way can we best make use of it?

In attempting to answer these two questions, I am conscious that I am addressing many to-night who are far more competent to answer them than I am. I approach them with much diffidence and craving your patience, as I traverse ground familiar to most of you. A learner from some of you, a fellow-pupil with others, I can but endeavour to voice the sentiments which are animating our prayers and our efforts.

I. Indications that the answer to our prayer is nearer than it was.

In speaking of such indications we must use language of caution and of studied moderation. It would not, for instance, be an indication that the answer to our prayer is nearer than it was, if to-morrow we could announce the conversion of a million of Mohammedans during the past year to the Christian faith. However thankfully we might receive such tidings, it is conceivable that they might be balanced by the conversion of two millions of Pagans to Islam. The inquiry which we suggest is not a statistical inquiry. It is a question of the relation of two great systems of religious belief. Christianity, as we know it, is a religious system permeated and saturated with Greek and Latin thought and philosophy, while Islam is equally an outgrowth of Eastern traditions and mental attitudes. Far as East from West is Eastern from Western thought. Can Christianity offer what the Moslem really needs? Is the Moslem at all likely to accept what Christ has to offer?

The first evidence then that our prayer for Islam is being heard will be some sign that God is bringing East and West into a plane in which mutual understanding and self-interpretation can take effect. So far as the West is concerned, we have evidence that this process is at work. In the effort of preaching the Gospel of Jesus to the nations we find ourselves increasingly forced back on the Jesus Christ of the New Testament, and on the risen and living Christ Who is with us to-day. We are, in fact, unlearning not a few accretions of Western tradition and philosophy, and centring our faith and our good tidings more and more upon Him, the divine power in Whom and by Whom we live, and upon the might of His Spirit. In this presentment the more true to Him that we are, and the more successful in living out His life, the more will our message be intelligible to the East. For of missionaries it is especially true that the more that the Englishman is lost in the Christian, the better will he be understood. Jesus of Nazareth was not a Western but an Oriental. The Christ, the Son of God, took human flesh as an Oriental, lived among Orientals, thought their thoughts and spoke their words. The first indication of a nearer answer to our prayers will be our own truer and fuller conception and presentation of the Christ.

Turning from ourselves to the Mohammedans, our attention immediately is attracted by the remarkable results of Mohammedan propagandism. We think of the Wahhâbi movement in the last century; we think of the rapid advance of Islam southwards in Africa; we think of the invasion of China, of the Malay Archipelago, and even of Southern Russia by the followers of the Prophet. We say to ourselves that a faith which is so active must at least have the all-important hall-mark of vitality.

Undoubtedly we do well to remind ourselves often of these successes of Islam. Had we been able to claim like progress for Christianity, there is little doubt that some of us at all events would have cited this progress as proof of the truth and of the divine origin of the Christian faith. We should have cried, 'See how the Gospel answers to needs the most diverse, and commends itself to all families of mankind.' But the wide diffusion of a religion does not prove its truth. It proves, no doubt, that the religion in question meets some of the religious needs of humanity. It proves also the existence of those needs, and the force with which they assert themselves. It proves further that there is no real foundation for the theory that each nation has for all time its own religion, which is fixed for it almost by a law of nature. The success of Mohammedanism does indeed dispose of not a few of the arguments most commonly urged against the Missions of the Church. But no one who knows the history of religions will allow rapid diffusion to be any guarantee of the permanent worth or truth of any religious worship.

A deeply interesting illustration may here be cited, though I have not time to enlarge upon it. In the early centuries of the Christian Era the religion of Mithra spread at least as rapidly as Christianity. Relics of Mithra worship are found in all parts of the Roman Empire, some of them as far north as Manchester, and even up to the Roman Wall. There is reason to believe that the Emperors gave state patronage to Mithraism, in the hope that it would overpower Christianity. But the religion of Mithra is now known only to a learned few. Its wide diffusion was no proof of its religious truth, while state patronage in the end did it more harm than good. These facts are worth recalling in our conflict with Mohammedanism.

It must also be borne in mind that the propagandist activity of Islam is by no means always religious activity. Without denying to Mohammedan Missions all religious enthusiasm, yet the fact of that propagation is not the quarter in which we must look for proof of the religious vitality of the Mohammedan faith. For it is largely the case that the present forward movement of Mohammedanism is primarily political and commercial. Not only is its agent the trader, but its motive and inspiring power is commerce and opposition to European influence. With us Missions are inspired and promoted by religion, and the trader and statesman are at most allies—sometimes very doubtful allies. With Islam commerce is the motive, and the religious impulse almost an afterthought. It is not, then, to the Missions of Islam that we must turn for our hope that the Spirit of God is moving in the Mohammedan world.

Our hope lies rather in those outbursts of fanatical zeal which Mohammedanism throws up from time to time, and is throwing up to-day. It is found again and again in the most zealous opponents of our missionaries. For the cold omnipotence of the God of Islam can never satisfy the passionate yearning of the human soul after a living God of righteousness. The Motazilite, the Sufi, the Bâb, are all of them in various ways, and at various times, evidences that Islam is not the final answer of religion to the soul of the Oriental. The heresies of Mohammedanism are not exaggerations, one-sided statements, of fundamental doctrine, but revolts from it, alien to its true spirit. Mohammedanism affords in itself no room for the indwelling of God in the human soul. It abundantly satisfies the formalist, but it has no message for the true seeker after God. We welcome, therefore, tidings of fierce opposition; we welcome, in a certain sense, outbursts of fanatical zeal. For among the fanatics will be found those in whose hearts God has set a passionate longing to know the truth.

It is from such material as this that God raises up apostles of nations, prophets into whose lips He puts messages that cannot be gainsaid, evangelists whose feet are beautiful upon the mountains. If only we could persuade ourselves to give up the numerical reckoning of converts; if only we could take ourselves at our true worth as hewers of wood and drawers of water, far too highly honoured by being allowed the meanest service in building the temple of God; if only (adopting another image) we were satisfied to cut down the steep places, fill the hollows, make the rough road smooth, we should not fail to hear in God's own time the heralds of His near approach, we should witness in due course the advent and the triumph of our King.

But since this mystical leaven has been in most ages present in Mohammedanism, its existence does not by itself furnish indications that the present moment contains any special or exceptional elements of hopefulness. These must rather be sought in the concurrence of recrudescence of fanaticism with liberalizing influences of Western thought and politics, affecting Mohammedanism to a degree altogether unprecedented. So long as the Western was nothing but a hated and despised alien, the mystics among the Moslems could entertain towards Christianity no feeling save of contempt. But increasing contact with Western nations is forcing the more thoughtful Mohammedan to adopt a new attitude towards Western ideals.

Quotations in this connexion are never quite satisfactory, yet I venture to adduce two, which appear to be very noteworthy. The first is from a speech by the Aga Khan, delivered a short time ago at the College of Aligarh: 'The ideal before us,' he is reported to have said, 'is to make this institution a great centre of research and learning, and a source of moral influence for Mussulmans from the Atlantic to the great wall of China. The object of this college is . . . . to produce men morally and intellectually equipped for developing the resources of the country by becoming captains of commerce and industry, leaders of men, and moral teachers of their people. . . . Our community is not only backward morally, intellectually and materially, but even more, spiritually, in the true sense. . . . We want among the students that atmosphere of self-sacrifice, true devotion, pity for suffering, that sense of dependence and responsibility towards an infinite power, the light of which can only be known through our emotions, and whose influence must permeate every movement of our lives.'

The second is from a sermon preached recently in the Mosque of St. Sophia, in Constantinople. The preacher, Eshreef Edir Bey, said: 'In an epoch when all inhabitants of the earth are advancing into new realms of science, in a period when all cities and all nations are going through a final ideal, let us escape from this laziness which has caught us in its grasp. Let us free our lives from this dark veil of ignorance. Let us deliver our minds from obstinacy and bigotry. Let us lift up our eyes from the self-admiration and egotism which for many years have been absorbing our attention. Let us see the wonderful achievements in art and industries, and let us observe the immense strides which have been taken in the royal path of science. Let us take our steps accordingly; for we must confess that we are very far behind. Let us think of the purpose of our creation and of the duties of life.'

These quotations illustrate, however inadequately, what I mean by the special opportunities of the present moment. The coincidence of religious enthusiasm with ideals of learning and conduct confessedly borrowed from Christianity—that is what constitutes the uniqueness of the occasion.

To these must be added—though I mention them very briefly—political influences which are affecting the very centre of Mohammedan life, the Turkish Empire. Islam is a polity as well as a religion. It is the polity of rulers, not of subjects. Islam has no room for the equality of men of different religions in one political system. Its cardinal maxim is, 'One faith, one nation.' With all his efforts to be loyal to the religion of his ancestors, the young Turk, desirous of consolidating and uniting Turkey, is hard put to it to settle the questions of education, of marriage and, generally, of the treatment of women, of equal civil rights for himself and the other subjects of the Turkish Empire on principles equally agreeable both to the Koran, to Christianity and to modern democracy. Versatile as Islam has shown itself in the past, the new problems are taxing that versatility even to the breaking-point.

If it should be thought such political considerations are but remotely connected with the progress of the Church of God, that will not be more than a passing objection. For surely the Old Testament, and for that matter the New Testament also, are full of proofs of the direct and intimate relation that the kingdoms of the world bear to the establishment of the kingdom of Christ. Is not the Assyrian called the rod of God's wrath, and Nebuchadnezzar, as well as Cyrus, God's servant? Does not the political background of our Lord's ministry reveal to us what St. Paul meant by 'the fulness of time'? Was not Cæsarism, humanly speaking, indispensable to the spread of Christianity?

It is this meeting of religious zeal with Western ideals, and that at the very heart of Mohammedan life, intellectual and political, which constitutes the unique character of the opportunity at this moment set before the Church of Christ. So far as we can judge, on the use made of it in the next decade depends to a large extent the future of the religious progress of the world.

I use very deliberately, and with the belief that I am speaking well within the mark, both expressions, the 'next decade,' and 'the future of the religious progress of the world.' For God, if we may say so with reverence, does not suit the course of the world, or even the progress of His Kingdom, to our inertia. The Church has lost opportunities before and may lose them again. Very stern is the command, 'Buy up the opportunity.' We are far too apt to assume that the progress of Christ's Kingdom upon earth must be one long and unchequered career of triumphant advancement. We love to sing:—

> So be it, Lord; Thy throne shall never,
> Like earth's proud empires, pass away;
> Thy kingdom stands, and grows for ever,
> Till all Thy creatures own Thy sway.

There is no foundation in Scripture or in fact for such a belief as the two latter lines convey. 'The gates of Hades shall not finally prevail against the Church of Christ.' That is true. But though the Kingdom of Christ shall not pass away, it may, by the unfaithfulness of Christ's subjects, be reduced within very narrow limits, and it has been so reduced more than once. Have we ever considered how small was the proportion of the Christian to the non-Christian world at any one of the following epochs: at the date of the battle of Tours, or at the time of the Crusades, or when Constantinople was taken, or even so lately as the siege of Vienna? The great spread of Christianity in the two or three last centuries has been due more to the rapid increase of certain families of the human race than to the actual winning of non-Christian races to Christianity. Who is to guarantee that the European races, not a few of them markedly declining in their birth-rate, containing already a large proportion of disbelievers in religion of any sort or kind, who is to guarantee that these races will continue to extend the Empire of Christ? That Empire depends—for anything like permanent and effective progress—on the fidelity of the Church of Christ, and the response which the Church makes to God-given opportunities.

Our prayer becomes more urgent the more vividly we call to mind the great battle which has to be fought with the world's unbelief, and our need of every available force to meet it. There are three religions of the Book—Christianity, Judaism and Islam. In what relation do they stand to the rest of the faiths and of the unbelief of the world? At the heart of the three religions of the Book is belief in a personal God, Whose existence, or at all events Whose personality, the rest of the world denies. This is the supreme question of all religious questions. This is the Armageddon upon which the greatest of all religious controversies must be brought to an issue.

The remembrance of this situation will surely inspire our prayer, 'Oh that Ishmael might live before Thee!' with a feeling different from the traditional animosity against Islam, which is far too conspicuous in the greater part of Christian literature. The Church has not yet recovered from the shock of the discovery that Islam seriously intended to dispute with Christianity the possession of even the Christian world. The claim when first it was made appeared to be one of outrageous audacity. But it was made good by the overrunning of Christian countries, the conversion of Christian churches into mosques, the enslavement of Christian captives. Then there was aroused in Christendom a feeling of hatred and contempt which is manifest in all the earlier literature of the controversy, and is reflected in the attitude of Moslems to Christians to-day. But to thoughtful observers Islam at least shares with Christianity the world's battle against pantheism, atheism and idolatry. The God of Islam is one God, a personal God to Whom reverence and worship are due. He is a God Who is all-merciful and yet a righteous Judge. I am not unaware how, as Christians, we should qualify these admissions. But I am not thinking of them from the Christian point of view. They express at least part of the truth as against Buddhists and agnostics. We shall do no harm to our faith by admitting the elements of truth which remain in Mohammedanism, and we shall long all the more to make the Moslems fellow-heirs with ourselves of the fulness of the promises in Christ Jesus. We shall see that the bringing back of the great Semitic races of the world to Christ would be an incalculable addition to our strength in the war that lies beyond. For the Semites have ever been, and probably always will be, the apostles of the world. The progress, therefore, of materialism and unbelief may be regarded as a call from God to exchange any survivals of the old-world hatred and contempt for Islam for a spirit more in accordance with the mind of Christ, for a spirit of sympathy and brotherly love.

II. So far our thoughts have been directed to indications of the opportunity afforded by the divinely ordered drawing together of East and West. We have seen that both the fanaticism of Islam and its liberalism in different ways invite us to hope for the dawn of a new era: the former, as indicating religious restlessness, the stirring of the waters by the Holy Spirit of God; and the latter as driving home upon the intelligent Mohammedan the insufficiency and inadequacy of his faith to meet the conditions of modern thought and of modern political life. But does this unrest present any special opening for Christian Missions in Mohammedan lands, and if so, where and how?

Where, if anywhere, is the point of contact between the two religions, and in what way can we best make use of it?

So approaching Islam, we find that we have one great missionary project in common with it, the conversion of Africa, for which racial affinity gives the Arab great advantages over ourselves. The importance of this enterprise it would be difficult to exaggerate. Comparatively few Europeans have as yet taken into account what must be the result of the introduction of Africa into the fellowship of the nations. Slowly we are learning that Africa has had its days of past greatness, and therefore may have its days of greatness again; slowly we are discovering the fine intellectual capacities of the Negro races; slowly it is dawning upon us that there is in the Dark Continent a great nursery of the human race, the children of which are growing up to manhood, and that their manhood must mean a vast alteration in world-values. The 200 millions of Africa are not godless races. As they emerge from barbarism they will leave their idols and their fetishes behind them. They cannot fail to adopt one of the world-religions. Practically their choice lies between Islam and Christianity, and at present the decision is vastly in favour of Islam.

It is not unnatural that this should be their first decision, for, as I was saying, the Arab is not separated from the Negro by the great gulf which separates the black from the white races. There are many other circumstances which favour the Moslem propaganda in Africa, but this one is probably the greatest. The physical repulsion which makes real equality of race at present impossible is a very serious matter. If our faith in Christ cannot break down the middle wall of partition between white and black, Christianity will be condemned of failure where it has boasted its greatest strength. The doctrine of the Incarnation will have been tested and found wanting. It is not enough that we are willing to preach Christ to the Negro. Can we offer him as full a brotherhood as the Arab offers to him in Islam? The answer to this question lies very near to the heart of the great missionary problem.

When it pleased God in the earlier days of the Church to bring about a reconciliation between Jew and Greek, indispensable for the spread of the Christian faith, that reconciliation was effected at Alexandria. The earlier steps towards this reconciliation were indeed brought about at Ephesus, but unquestionably the Christian School at Ephesus had been moulded by the Alexandrian Apollos. The influence of Alexandria was felt from the first. It may be traced in the Epistle to the Hebrews, and not less certainly in the Gospel according to St. John. In the second century the same influence was even more strongly marked, and Alexandria became the interpreter of Christianity to Antioch, to Corinth and to Rome.

In seeking a centre for a second and not less important mediation —that which must be effected between Christianity and Islam—our thoughts turn naturally to the near neighbour of Alexandria—that is, Cairo. There is the geographical meeting-point for the three great Continents—Europe, Asia and Africa—there is the neutral ground where Christians and Moslems stand practically on an equality; there is one of the chief stations of the whole world's traffic. The small beginnings already made at Cairo are full of encouragement, as others can tell you better and more effectually than I can. But it is the privilege of advancing years to dream dreams, to look into the land of promise on which we ourselves shall not set foot, and to behold accomplished by others that which our faithlessness or timidity has failed to effect. Forgive me, therefore, if I make use of this privilege, and try to tell you things which I hope and believe will shortly come to pass.

I see, then, at Cairo not a college but a great Christian University, not ashamed of the good old motto, 'Dominus illuminatio mea.' The University is furnished with all the professorial chairs, museums, and laboratories that a great University ought to have. It has not been founded by any one Church, nor even by any one country. The Christians of Canada and of the United States, who understand the foundation of Universities better than we do, have joined with us and with all the Protestants of Europe to found it. Among its savants are some of the most learned men of the world, drawn from all nations for the purpose and with the object of building up a great Christian University to defend and to inculcate the Christian faith hand in hand with the advancement of scientific discovery. Professors, too, of other Universities winter there and join in the teaching work from time to time. The doors of the University are opened to both Christian and non-Christian students. Round the University are grouped colleges founded by Churches or Societies maintaining a healthy rivalry in studies, and, it may be, as at Srinagar, in athletics also. There the missionary on his way to Moslem countries passes some years in the study of Arabic and of the Mohammedan controversy. There the future native pastor from Uganda and from Sierra Leone, from Lagos and from the Cape, meets the outgoing missionary and becomes his fellow-student, not of the Bible only but also of the Koran. To the same college flock the pastors of Native Churches in India, and hereafter of Persia. The whole place is alive, and throbs with intellectual activity. East and West—Asia, Africa, America, Europe, Australia—are all represented in this great inter-Continental University. All together sit at the feet of Jesus Christ; all join in interpreting Him and His Word one to another; all combine to make Him known to their non-Christian fellow-students. The lingua franca of the University is Arabic; the University sermons are preached in Arabic; and the prayers of the inter-collegiate prayer-meetings are Arabic prayers.

You tell me that heresies will spring up at such a University; there will be doubts, questionings, disputations. But these things must be so long as God wills that we should live in a world where our intellectual powers are not perfected, where we know in part, where we see in a mirror darkly. Out of these questionings will come fuller knowledge: to honest inquirers God will reveal His Christ, it may be, more fully than to any of us. But in any case we may be sure that so great a prize as we are seeking, viz. the winning of Islam to Christ, will call for sacrifices far larger and more real than sacrifices of money. Lives the very choicest, intellectual gifts the most splendid, wrestlings with doubt the most agonizing, must all be borne by those who would offer to any purpose Abraham's prayer, 'Oh that Ishmael might live before Thee!' Mohammed has his college at Cairo; why should not Jesus Christ have one on a far nobler scale?

My brothers, our attention has been fixed on great revolutions that are happening under our eyes, and others still greater which we anticipate. They are workings of divine providence, and it is our duty to read as carefully as we can the signs of the times. We find Islam giving distinct proof that for the backward races of humanity it has a strange and powerful fascination. We find also that in contact with the more advanced races of the East it holds its own, and in some cases even wins converts. Where it touches the West it has shown some power of incorporating Christian beliefs and practices, but it has held its own against Christianity as a system. It has utterly refused to be absorbed by it. We Christians marvel that under any circumstances or by any minds the claims and character of Mohammed should be preferred to those of Jesus Christ. But we do not always remember that to the Mohammedan Christian teaching, as he knows it, appears to be at once puerile, blasphemous and indecent. His very reverence for God makes Christian doctrines abominable to him, while the lives of Christians are at many points shocking to his sense of propriety. This mutual repulsion will not pass away, so far as we can foresee, until some of the most cultured of Christians and of Mohammedans have interpreted one to the other the systems which they profess. It is as important that we should try to understand Mohammedan objections to Christianity as that we should make them understand our objections to Mohammedanism. Nay, more, we need to discover with sympathetic minds the secret of the attractiveness of Islam as a religious system, and to know what are the cravings to which it ministers and the spiritual needs which it satisfies. Some of those cravings and needs may be carnal, but it is not likely that a purely carnal religion would have gained such a grip on the world, or retained its hold so long. We must seek to know Islam at its best as well as Islam at its worst.

We must also bring to this study not one or two students working independently in distant corners of the world, knowing only the Mohammedanism that is near them. We need the philosophic acumen of Germany and Holland, the swift penetration of America, the intellectual grasp of Scotland, the sympathy of Ireland, as well as the practical sagacity of England; we need all that is best in the scholars trained in Presbyterian, Congregationalist and other Nonconformist schools, as well as English Churchmen, to be united in this study and to join in interpreting Christ to the Mohammedan. We must unlock the old treasures of the ancient fathers, perhaps even some of the subtleties of the schoolmen—not because of any mistrust in the Bible, but because in many cases we shall find there interpreters of the Word, who are in closer touch with Oriental thought than ourselves. Patiently we must strive to bring the Moslems to be fellow-learners with us at the feet of Jesus Christ, until the Holy Spirit shall be pleased to remove the veil that hides from their hearts the glory of the crucified Redeemer.

Let it not be counted a strange thing that we should use such aids or adjuncts to the simplicity of the Gospel. To do so is not in any way to deny or to derogate from the power of the Word of God. That Word by itself—without human interpreter or commentator—still finds its way to hearts prepared to receive it. But no one can read that Word attentively without consciousness of its direct relation to questionings of Jewish and Hellenic thought. Behind it lies a background of controversy with rabbis, of controversy with philosophers, of controversy also within the Church itself. Now it is the divinity of our Lord Jesus Christ that is questioned; now the reality of His human nature; now the authority of Mosaic legislation. The teaching of the Gospel is bound to lead inquiring minds far into the deepest problems that can exercise the human intellect. Our faith has nothing to fear from these questionings. It certainly is not for any Protestant Church to silence inquiry or to fall back upon authority. To meet authority with authority—even if it be the authority of the Koran with the authority of the Bible—is not enough, until the atmosphere has been created which makes the authority of the Bible clear, until it has been shown what we mean by that authority, and why the Bible is authoritative, what is, in fact, the relation of the written to the living Word. We live in that atmosphere because of the labours of apologists and interpreters who have gone before us, because our whole literature and laws are saturated and permeated with Christian thought. But the Mohammedan has lived in an intellectual atmosphere not only different from ours but repugnant to it. We have to make ourselves intelligible to him, and that is why we plead for this great intellectual effort. What is needed is the mental preparation, which at the time of the first preaching of the Gospel St. Paul found provided for his labours through the providential dispersion of the Jews throughout the Greek and Roman world. Surely it is better that the Church should provide this preparation than that we should leave the mutual interpretation of East and West to the untiring and enterprising efforts of agnosticism and materialism.

I cannot conclude without praying forgiveness of God and of you, my brethren, for anything that I have said amiss. Nothing could have induced me to stand in this place, knowing my personal unfitness, save your call, and a double bond of filial piety. From my honoured father, so long in your service, I learned to believe in the future of Africa; from my honoured father-in-law, whose grave still calls to us from Muscat, I learned to pray for the Mohammedan world, and to believe in its conversion to Jesus Christ. I have lived to see a partial fulfilment of their prayers—the beginning, as I believe, of a still greater fulfilment, if we have faith and courage to use the opportunity which lies before us. For, as believers in prophecy, looking out from the social and political unrest around us, we turn from the dreary pantheism of the modern world, from the 'edite, bibite' of the 'Rubáiyát' of Omar Khayyám, which is the expression of the faith of its moneyed aristocracy. We turn, also, from those who would wreck modern civilization without changing the passions of the human heart. We turn from all these to the prayer that we learnt at our mother's knee, 'Thy kingdom come,

Thy will be done.' Faith assures us that there is a vital connexion between the gathering in of Abraham's sons into the Church of Christ and the setting up of the Kingdom of God upon earth. Hear the words of the Psalmist: 'The Kings of Tarshish and of the isles shall bring presents: the kings of Sheba and Seba shall offer gifts. Yea, all kings shall fall down before Him: all nations shall serve Him. For He shall deliver the needy when he crieth; and the poor, that hath no helper. He shall have pity on the poor and needy, and the souls of the needy He shall save.' We are not forgetful then of the work that lies around us at home when we take up into our lips the prayer of Abraham. We are moving on the path of social reform when we promote missionary enterprise. The two are connected by the Word of God, and who shall sunder them? As patriots, no less than as Churchmen and Christians, we cry, 'Oh that Ishmael might live before Thee!'

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE.

General Review of the Year.

[READ AT THE ANNIVERSARY IN QUEEN'S HALL, MAY 3, 1910.]

'. . . I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto Me.'
(St. John xii. 32.)

THUS the Lord gathers up in one sentence the fulfilment of Creation's hope, the burden of Messianic prophecy, the promises of His Kingdom and Coming. For even then the world had been judged and its prince overthrown. Even then, with the hour of agony so close, the answering voice from heaven had given the pledge of glory. The Christ on His way to the Cross was already the Christ victorious and enthroned.

Here lie the deepest motives and the strongest forces for the Church in her mission to the world. For the Lord sends His envoys even as He was sent; and only by the witness of the Cross in word and life can they win the hearts of men. Here they have no competitor: before this the world-religions must all one day cry, as the heathen emperor of old, 'Thou hast conquered, O Galilean!'

But more than this will follow. As men are drawn to Him, so they will be to one another. The mission-field bears no more hopeful fruit of the Gospel, preached even by disunited Churches, than the yearning of Christians in so many places to draw closer together around the Person of their One Lord. For this reason, among others, the Committee rejoice to welcome the World Missionary Conference shortly to be held in Edinburgh. They believe that, after its long and careful preparation, it will not only place the whole conception of Christian Missions on a stronger and more scientific basis, but that in bringing together the representatives of so many Churches and Societies in brotherly conference, it will do much towards the solution of the problem how to reduce their divisions, to consolidate their forces, and to present a united Christianity to the non-Christian world. The difficulties which are now pressing on this and kindred societies add greatly to the urgency of this problem.

The World Missionary Conference.

At the Committee meeting in July last the financial position of the Society and its consequent policy were under long and earnest consideration. Having weighed the urgent needs of the Missions, which the supply of recruits was yet unable to meet, and also the necessity of larger expenditure due to the increased cost of living and of educational demands in various fields, the Financial situation.

Committee sanctioned an increase on these accounts above the sum of £370,000, at which the total expenditure had been fixed in the previous year, and they expressed their willingness to send out recruits to a number not exceeding that of the average losses by deaths and retirements. This involved an expenditure of not less than £385,000, and it was clear that the financial equilibrium could not be maintained without a large increase of income. The situation was so grave that the Committee invited a number of their leading friends throughout the country to meet for prayer and conference. This Conference, representing thirty out of thirty-seven English Dioceses, agreed with the Committee in the expectation that the existing work of the Society could not be maintained unless the supplies for the current year were adequate to meet its needs. At the same time the Conference realized that the closing of stations or the abandonment of Missions would be disastrous to the work of God which the Society was doing; and, believing that the resources of Christian people were far from being exhausted, it urged that an effort should be made to raise the income to such an amount as would be sufficient for the year's needs and something over to provide for the greater efficiency of the work already undertaken.

Local Associations.

The Committee thankfully acknowledge that as soon as the facts were made known through the Home Organization Department, many of the various Associations throughout the country at once decided that they would make special efforts to raise their share of the funds needed. The result is that the Associations have sent up £227,000 as compared with £215,000 last year. Had the Committee been able to inform the supporters of the Society of their need at an earlier date the response would doubtless have been even larger. New Associations have been formed for the Dioceses of Rochester and Gloucester, and for the Archdeaconries of Coventry, Worcester, Lincoln and Dorset; and others whose inauguration was reported last year are now in thorough working order. They are appointing their own Deanery Secretaries, and the Committee believe that the time is coming when these Associations with their officials will materially relieve Salisbury Square of some of the work of its home organization. There is no question that the supporters of the Society are taking a keener interest in the details of the work, and there is evidence of an increased sense of responsibility and a determination to see the Society through the difficulties that have beset it during the last few years.

Receipts and disbursements.

The income actually received during the year has been £374,233. After the necessary adjustment of the Appropriated Contributions of this and former years (using former gifts applicable to this year, and retaining this year's gifts applicable to future years) and the application to certain special needs of £8,913 from the Pan-Anglican Thankofferings, the total amount available against the year's Expenditure was £390,335. That Expenditure amounted to £385,613, leaving an apparent surplus of £4,722. But £10,002 has been applied, under contract, towards the Debenture Stock Sinking Fund, causing a final deficit of £5,280. (The Sinking Fund now amounts to £29,209 against the whole Debenture Stock of £80,440.) Even this result has only been reached by severe curtailment in the field during several years under almost every head of expenditure except as to the number and the allowances of missionaries. The pathos of the position can only be fully understood by those who have read through the many hundreds of annual reports from the missionaries in the field. The call for reinforcements is always prominent, but never, perhaps, has it come with such frequency and urgency as in the letters of the past year. Two broad facts are presented from almost every part of every land. The first is the need of far more and better trained teachers and evangelists from among the people of each country, and consequently the need of competent men and women set free to train them. The other fact is that not only are there openings everywhere, but there is in many places a readiness both on the part of individuals and of masses to receive the Gospel, such as the past has never shown and the future may never repeat.

So much interest has been aroused throughout the country during the past year by the study of Islam, its history, its principles and its results, that in reviewing the foreign work of the Society it is natural to turn first to those lands where Mohammedanism prevails.

Palestine

The hopes which were raised by the recent exchange of despotism for a liberal Constitution in the Turkish Empire have not had much fulfilment in Palestine. From one or two places come reports of more friendly relations between Moslems, Jews and Christians, more freedom of opinion and more interest in Christian truth. But in most parts no improvement is seen and the moral insensibility of Islam is unaffected.

Persia.

The political crisis through which Persia is passing does not seem to have had any ill effect on the Mission. Indeed, so far as it has checked the influence of the mullahs and encouraged liberty of thought, the results have been good. Though brigandage prevails outside the towns, it is in rare cases that the missionaries have suffered. But the mind of the people is awakening. Over against what one worker has described as 'the awful lovelessness of Persia' and the barrenness of Islam, Christian lives bear witness to the abounding grace and love of Christ. But here, too, opportunities have been lost. Five years ago the Bakhtiaris, who now influence the Government, besought the missionaries for teachers. What might have been the result to-day had these people been evangelized? Medical missions have done much to break down opposition, and the next step must be steady teaching to give strength and permanence to what has been begun. The Mission suffers a heavy loss in the retirement of Bishop Stuart, who, with rare devotion (after many years in India and in his New Zealand episcopate), when, at the age of sixty-seven, he might well have claimed a time of rest, gave himself again to the trials and hardships of an Eastern life, and now only withdraws from the work in which for fifteen years he has so earnestly laboured because health compels him to return home.

Egypt.

In Egypt, where Islam comes into closer touch with the Western world, and is being taught to respect Western order and justice, the record of the past twelvemonth is more hopeful. The patient labours of unproductive years are now bearing fruit. The number of converts and of inquirers has considerably increased. In hospital and school, by the printing press and by social intercourse, an effective witness for Christ is being borne by a band of devoted workers, worthy colleagues of Douglas Thornton and Thora Bird who have passed to their rest.

Advance of Islam in Africa.

A different picture is presented in other parts of Africa where Islam meets Paganism. The westward march of the former, which has been watched with anxiety for some years, continues unchecked by any adequate Christian force. West Africa shows no such obstacle to its advance as that which the Uganda Church has presented. Bishop Tugwell and others report that in town after town through Nigeria and the Yoruba Country, where a few years ago hardly a Moslem was seen, now their mosques abound. The fact that British protection opens the door as much to Mohammedans as to Europeans should kindle in British Christians a deeper sense of their responsibility and move them to more earnest efforts for the rescue of the pagan tribes of the Protectorate from a spiritual tyranny which knows no Saviour, which is the pledged foe of Christ and His Gospel, and which introduces evils worse than those it finds. Few people at home realize with what inadequate forces this tremendous invasion is being met. The picture which Archdeacon Melville Jones gives of one district may describe many. Churches are springing up everywhere, built by the people. They have no teacher; only one of themselves acts as a leader; they assemble regularly for the worship of God; they try to teach one another to read; they want to become Christians; but how can they except they be taught? 'I hardly know,' he says, 'whether to rejoice or be alarmed. If only there were enough teachers all these people might be saved from Paganism and the worse bondage of Islam; but if we lose the opportunity, a weak and impure Church will be formed, with no power to stem the tide, and it will be far harder to reclaim it afterwards than to begin and plant a new Church.'

West Africa.

The full consideration lately given in the Society's monthly Review to the Report of the Commission to inquire into the West African Liquor Traffic makes it unnecessary to refer further to the matter in this review than to state the fact that many of those most competent to form an opinion are far from satisfied with the conclusions of the Report, and believe that time will correct the verdict, as it has done in similar cases.

Death Bishop Elwin.

A great sorrow has fallen on the Church of Sierra Leone by the death of its devoted Bishop, whose gentle spirit and unselfish life have left his people an ideal to be treasured and followed. The appointment of the Rev. Canon J. Walmsley as his successor is a matter for much thankfulness.

Uganda

That prosperity has its perils is as true for Churches as for nations. It is no wonder that some of the missionaries in Uganda speak sadly of reaction. New ideas, new temptations, new ways of living, and even the influence of ungodly foreigners, have brought serious hindrances to spiritual life. On the other hand, many bright instances occur of godly zeal and the power of the Gospel. One missionary records a revival through the ministry of an earnest young African clergyman in a district known as the worst in Uganda; and the chiefs had already raised a considerable fund to send their sons to the capital for Christian training. In another district, which was evangelized but a few years ago, witchcraft and other evil practices have been abolished by the local parliament.

It is perhaps in the Mengo High School and the King's School at Budo that the best hopes for the future of Uganda are centred. It is most gratifying to hear of the high tone which prevails, the purer life and the stronger sense of honour. The future leaders of Uganda are trained also to use their hands as well as their brains. 'There is not a boy,' says the head-master, 'who could not build his own house. The boys are not Europeanized.' Not less important is the work of the Mengo Hospital, where European, Indian and African alike receive healing of the body and of the soul, from the German scientist, who there found his Saviour on his death-bed, to the young son of a Busoga chief, stricken with the deadly African sickness, yet going cheerfully to his home that he might give his last days to telling his people of the Christ Whom he had learnt to love.

The public press has reported the visit of Mr. Roosevelt to Mengo. Nothing could have been better than his talk to the boys of the High School, or his address at the opening of the new wing of the hospital, when he referred to the words of St. James, as containing what he called 'a little good applied theology,' such as he found in evidence in the system practically applied there.

New Church Constitution.

The event of most general interest has been the first meeting of the Diocesan Synod under its recently adopted Constitution. Nineteen years after his consecration, Bishop Tucker had the joy of presiding at this remarkable gathering, when 300 African clergymen and laymen, the elected representatives of 70,000

Christians, belonging to various tribes, which but a few years ago were sunk in the grossest Paganism, and some of which had been at deadly enmity with one another, knelt together with their European brethren in holy fellowship at the Table of the Lord. The organization of the Church is complete, and includes Diocesan, District and Parochial Councils, Women's Conference and Courts of Appeal. Both men and women, if communicants, are electors. Besides the ordained ministry of the Anglican Communion the Uganda Church recognizes the offices of Reader, Teacher and Woman Teacher.

East Africa.

From East Africa comes the same sad call for more workers, both native and foreign. 'Handicapped by the scarcity of agents,' say several missionaries. 'Must have a larger staff of native workers,' writes another, 'and some one who will make it his special work to train them.' One whose band has grown to six pleads that at least twenty are needed to reach the villages open to them. Two ladies write of the 70,000 Giriama, among whom they are the only missionaries. Yet many of the letters tell of brighter facts, such as the hearty sympathy of European settlers on the uplands; the fierce savage cleansed of his war-paint, transformed in feature and character, a gentle and devout disciple of his new-found Saviour; or the pious custom in many once heathen families of a household offertory, not once a week, but known as 'God's daily portion fund.'

India.

The thoughtful student of Indian problems must often have occasion to put two questions to himself. What would India have become, even under British rule, if the old exclusion of Christian Missions had been maintained? And, What might not India be to-day had British Christians given their best and done their utmost for the great land which in God's providence has been entrusted to their care?

The sedition and unrest which have attracted so much painful attention do not seem to have affected the Society's work. From every part of India missionaries report respectful attention and willingness to listen to the claims of Christ. Not only are there many striking cases of individual conversion, such as of high-caste Brahmans, Mohammedan moulvis, and others who have had to part with wife and children and to endure reproach and persecution, which would try the faith of the staunchest Christian, but there are also movements towards Christianity in many places among groups and masses of people, and those not only of the lowest classes. 'In the students' world,' writes a member of the Allahabad Hostel staff, 'the change has been very remarkable; there is less bitterness and wild denunciation, more readiness to see both sides, and to remedy their own failings, rather than to spend time in decrying the failings of others.' It is a fact that should be remembered that the first person to seize the treacherous assassin of Sir Curzon Wyllie was an Indian student who had been five years in the Oxford and Cambridge Hostel. Another old hosteller, writing in a recent number of their magazine, tells how he had there learnt 'to work disinterestedly without a selfish motive for anything, especially in work of a public cause.'

Indirectly also the influence of the Gospel is showing itself in other ways, such as the new interest which Hindus and Mohammedans in several parts of the country are taking in what are known as the 'depressed classes,' and the general demand for higher education of women, which is creating a keen rivalry with mission-schools. Gratifying as such facts are, they cannot satisfy Christian ideals. Without Christ neither social reform nor even education can rescue the lost or lift men to God. In the present crisis therefore of India it is impossible to exaggerate the importance of educational work as an evangelizing agency. At the recent opening of the new Edwardes College at Peshawar, the outcome of many years of steady work, the Bishop of Lahore gave an admirable address to this effect. He urged with much force that while all education encouraged unity among races and classes, only that which was given on a religious basis and in which the lives of the teachers were also the lesson books of their pupils could be of any use in the formation of character, or for drawing men into true harmony. It was in this respect and also in the closer association between teacher and taught that the mission schools and colleges gave advantages which those of a non-religious character could not possibly offer.

Colleges and schools.

The Committee have heard with much pleasure that a generous gift to St. John's College, Agra, by a member of its staff will make the erection of the much-needed buildings possible, and enable that institution to carry on its excellent work with still greater efficiency and hope. How Christian education can develop, even in lads the most demoralized, purity and honour, manliness, unselfishness and zeal, to a measure probably unknown in any English public school, and readiness to assist the weak and afflicted, may be read in the article on Srinagar School and its social service in the April number of the Church Missionary Review.

The increasing requirements of Government, both in North and South India, will add largely to the expense of mission-schools. But the Society must not shrink from this or allow the education it gives to be outstripped by that which excludes Christian teaching. At the same time it cannot shut its eyes to a caution given by some of its educational missionaries that Indian boys and girls may be crammed with much that will not be of the slightest use in their future life. There is grave danger in the policy which says, 'East is East, but let us see how much West we can make it.' Industrial Missions might to some extent correct this tendency. Those of the Society are naturally small and sporadic, but it is pleasant to note that the name of one who has done much in this direction among women in South India (Mrs. Cain of Dummagudem) has been added to those of eight other missionaries of the Society who have been honoured by the Government with the Kaisar-i-Hind medal.

The growth of a missionary spirit among Indian Christians, though slow, is increasing. Not only in Madras but in many other places there are well-organized bands of voluntary evangelists; some Churches maintain their own missionary catechists, and others assess themselves at a fixed proportion of their monthly earnings for the support of their own ministry. Several cases are noted of men who were willing to give up good positions and receive less than a half of their former salaries to become mission-workers. Alas! in almost every instance there were no funds to employ them.

Under-manned stations.

In the face of such encouragements it is beyond measure distressing to read, from almost every station, of openings which cannot be entered, requests for instruction which cannot be granted, offers to build schools and pay for teaching which cannot be accepted, inquirers neglected, populous towns and villages unvisited. Thus a missionary in South India writes: 'There are 125 villages in this district where we have adherents without one resident teacher!' The Secretary of the Bengal Mission speaks of 'the dire extremity into which that Mission is declining—a decline which seems inevitable through lack of reinforcements.' He describes one district. 'Here,' he says, 'we once had four to six evangelists working round three or four strong centres. Just when the seed was beginning to spring up and converts to come, our forces are withdrawn and one man is left to do the work of all.'

A picture of the Gond Mission is typical of many. An area of 6,000 square miles, in the many villages of which 650 Christians are scattered; crowds of Heathen are ready to listen; much friendliness is shown; many are anxious to be taught. The staff for this vast work consists of two Europeans (one a clergyman, the other a layman) at opposite corners of the district, a little band of five catechists and nine school-teachers. Imagine an English county with its supply for spiritual and educational needs reduced to this level!

A devoted worker in the United Provinces who has bravely struggled with loneliness and discouragement may well ask, when writing of the Christians in his district, 'Has the Church done her duty to these poor folk? I have grown tired of appealing for help to enable me to teach those whom my predecessor baptized, but who since then have been left to themselves.' He would have baptized many more, but he had no one to teach them. An Indian clergyman in charge of an important post writes: 'Just at the very time when large and effective doors are opening, and we are eager to enter them, a stroke of the pen from Salisbury Square puts an end to our advance.' Such testimony could be multiplied a hundredfold. Can it be wondered that reports come also of Hindu revivals, of Arya Samaj successes, of Roman aggression, and of opportunities lost which can never be recovered?

Ceylon.

Even in so condensed a review the splendid ideals and the successes of Trinity College, Kandy, Ceylon, must not pass without a word of hearty recognition. The best hope of Eastern lands lies in such efforts to educate a generation of Christian patriots, men trained in the discipline of service to become leaders of their own people, men who in the love of God have learnt the righteousness which alone can exalt a nation.

Notwithstanding a spasmodic revival of Buddhist activity, which has been well met by Christian apologists, missionaries' letters speak of increasing interest, the breaking down of old prejudices, and the consistent lives of many Christians. The most serious drawback, as everywhere else, lies in the insufficiency of workers. The retirement of the oldest Ceylonese pastor, who writes his forty-first annual letter, is a reminder of the many years that modern Missions have taken in their development. It is gratifying, therefore, to note that an important forward step has been lately taken in the appointment of six Ceylonese gentlemen (four clergymen and two laymen) as members of the governing body of the Society's Mission.

The Far East.

St. Andrew's Day, 1909, is memorable for the consecration of four missionaries of the Society as Bishops in the Far East, two of them being Canadian clergy. Bishop Andrews returns to his old diocese in Hokkaido, Bishop Lea follows Bishop Evington in Kiu-Shiu, Bishop Banister takes charge of the new Diocese of Kwangsi-Hunan, and Bishop White goes to the new Diocese of Ho-Nan, an outgrowth of Canadian Church Missions.

China.

In this connexion one of the most interesting events in China during last year was the meeting at Shanghai in March of fifty representatives of the Anglican Communion in that country. There were present eight bishops (six English, two American), twenty-six clergymen (fourteen foreign, twelve Chinese), and sixteen Chinese laymen. Many important questions of organization and order were discussed, but the main work of the Conference was the drawing up of a tentative Constitution and Canons for the General Synod of what will be the Anglican Church in China. A smaller but not less valuable evidence of the growth of the Church in China has been the adoption of a regular Constitution for the Diocese of Fuh-Kien. In both these movements it is satisfactory to know that the Chinese themselves are taking an active part.

In the creation of Provincial Parliaments the same year has witnessed another development of national life. A missionary present at a sitting of the new Fuh-Kien Parliament writes hopefully of its probable influence, and reports the interesting fact that three of its leading members, a Vice-President, a Chairman of Executive, and a Secretary, are Christians. Most of the enlightened men in Fuh-Kien have been educated in Christian schools, and the value of their counsel is felt. Indeed, it is impossible to exaggerate what such education in the present crisis means for the future of China. The Committee rejoice in the remarkable success and expansion of St. Stephen's College, Hong Kong, and they regard the foundation of the proposed University in that place, and of others elsewhere, as an object of supreme importance for the welfare of the nation.

A 'Boxer' outbreak in Western China caused some alarm, but was quickly suppressed. The Christians were steadfast, and the remark of a catechist was characteristic of the general feeling, 'I am not afraid. I have God. He is responsible for me, and I have peace.'

Much might be written, but can only be said here in a sentence, of the admirable work both of doctors and nurses, and also of the lady missionaries engaged in schools, evangelization and the systematic training of Bible-women, inquirers and catechumens.

On the whole the outlook in China is distinctly hopeful. Opposition to Christianity is rare; courtesy and readiness to listen to the teacher are common. The attitude of the Government and the press (for that is now an important factor) is neither for nor against the message of Christ. Notwithstanding an effort to stimulate Confucianism, all religions are coming to be judged on their merits, and therefore that of the world's Saviour has no cause for fear, if only His people obey His call.

Japan. Christians in Japan have lately kept the Jubilee of Protestant Missions in those islands. They have done so not only by meetings and services among themselves, but by preaching campaigns for non-Christians. At a gathering of missionaries in Tokyo, Bishop Honda, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, one of the most thoughtful of Japanese leaders, said, 'We need you with us for years to come, not as organizers and administrators, but as spiritual leaders.' This is true. While on the one hand there is almost everywhere much readiness to learn, the proportion of those who know anything about Christ is extremely small. The Japanese man in the street, still less the countryman, has probably as little idea of the Gospel as the British peasant has of Buddhism. Even those who oppose Christianity are often no better informed. Unitarianism and materialism are destroying native religions and hardening educated people against any other. The social character of the nation, in which individuality has been so long suppressed, changes but very slowly. Although many striking cases of conversion among all classes are reported, more zeal and a higher spiritual life among the Christians are much to be desired.

No wonder that the importunate cry for 'spiritual leaders' comes from Japan. Every diocese is grievously understaffed. One worker pathetically asks, 'How would Christians in Penzance like to be dependent on the visit of a parson from London twice a year for Holy Communion, or those in Cork on one in Belfast who had to look after the whole of Ireland ? '

In Japan as in China the influence of cultured Christian women is shown in striking ways. Besides such excellent work as is being done by ladies in the Osaka school, in hostels for women, in personal visitation of the families of professional and official classes, several lady missionaries have been invited to give addresses or to teach in Government schools.

Though the number of Chinese students in Japan is much less than a few years ago, there are still far more in Tokyo than the one missionary and his wife assigned to that work can possibly reach. They have had much encouragement; sectarian difficulties have been removed, not a little by the tactful kindness of Bishop Cecil Boutflower; and both men and women have been drawn to Christ, whose future influence in China may be far wider than can now be conjectured.

The Committee cannot pass from this brief review of Missions in Eastern lands without giving a very hearty welcome to Bishop Ingham after his long missionary tour. They are deeply thankful for the safety and health given to him and Mrs. Ingham, and for the many evidences of what his visits have meant for the missionaries and the Native Christians by his counsel, his sympathy and his encouragement.

North-West Canada.

Popular interest has naturally been lately directed to the far North-West of Canada, into which so large a population of colonists is pouring. On behalf of these immigrants the English Archbishops have recently issued an earnest appeal, but none the less do Missions to the Heathen of that land deserve the warm sympathy and prayers of Christians at home. The lonely worker (such as he who for eighteen years has had no holiday), with hardships and discouragements which few know elsewhere, seeing his Indian people decimated by disease, tempted by drink, pushed aside by the white man, their old occupations gone, has too often only a tale of sorrow and shame. Yet every Bishop writes more about his brave clergy and their faithful flocks that remain than he does of his own trials and dangers, such as those from which Bishop Stringer has been so mercifully preserved through a terrible experience.

Home affairs.

The Society will learn with grateful pleasure that its Missions will benefit largely by the distribution of the Pan-Anglican Unappropriated Thankoffering. The Committee charged with the allocation of that Fund have made generous grants to agencies and institutions in the Society's mission-fields; besides which C.M.S. Missions will share in the benefits conferred by other grants for more general purposes in India, China, Japan and Canada.

Although the resignation did not fall within the year under review, the Committee cannot omit some record of their deep sorrow at losing on account of health the greatly valued services, altogether honorary, of their Lay Secretary, Mr. R. Maconachie.

The Committee feel that on account of its exceptional character, the Missionary Exhibition held last year in London deserves a grateful, if brief, reference. In the hearty co-operation of hundreds of workers, in its admirable organization, in the spirit of Christian fellowship and prayer which pervaded every part of the undertaking, and in the spiritual results, probably far larger though less tangible than the £1,000 which formed its net proceeds, the Committee humbly recognize the good hand of their God, and thankfully acknowledge the sympathy and help of so many warm friends.

Candidates. The number of new missionaries accepted has been forty-six. A considerable impetus to the number of offers and inquiries was given by the Exhibition, and the Home Preparation Union has increased in its membership, and is reaching and helping more and better educated persons than formerly. Among those who have been accepted there have been six doctors and eighteen clergymen and men to be ordained shortly; but it is sad to record that all accepted candidates have been notified that their being sent out will depend on the sufficiency of funds for that purpose.

Obituary. The Committee mourn the loss by death of an exceptional number of veteran friends, whose interest has been life-long: Dean William Lefroy, the Reverends Richard Dandy, Canon William Eliot, Canon Andrew Robert Fausset and Edward Lombe, Dr. Robert Needham Cust, Mr. Miles MacInnes, Mr. Henry J. Martyn, Mr. Edward Wells and Mrs. Armitage; and they also record with a special sense of their loss the death of five fellow-workers who had been trusted members of the Committee: the Rev. Henry Trotter, the Rev. H. C. Squires, the Rev. G. F. Whidborne, Mr. Charles R. Ford, and Mr. George Maddox.

The Committee close this review by returning to the sacred words with which it opened—'. . . I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto Me.' They press a personal application. If it was by the Cross that Christ won His Crown, if by the love that led Him to die He still constrains the hearts of men, it must be the same for His people also. His joy will come to them only as it came to Him. Through surrender and sacrifice they will learn what He learned, of Whom it was written, 'He shall see of the travail of His soul and be satisfied.'

Home Operations.

The work of the C.M.S. at its headquarters is carried on, under the direction of the Committee, by an Hon. Clerical Secretary and seven other Secretaries. Three of the last-named belong to the Foreign Department, which is concerned with the actual work abroad; one is responsible for the oversight of all matters connected with the training and acceptance of candidates for service; another has charge of the Editorial Department; and one is assigned to the Home Organization Department, which is divided into a number of sections, dealing respectively with the Supply of Deputations for sermons and meetings, the Distribution of Publications, the Gleaners' Union, the Medical Mission Auxiliary, Missionary Study and the Circulating Library, Work among the Young, Women's Work, and the Loan of Lantern-slides, Curios, etc., for use at C.M.S. meetings and exhibitions. Several of these sections have also an Assistant Secretary. The Society's Medical Missions are administered by a Medical Committee, which has its own Secretary. In addition there is a Medical Missions Wants Department which aims at furnishing the Society's hospitals and dispensaries with the various requisites for their work. The Lay Secretary is head of the staff at the C.M. House, and has charge of the Society's finances.

The Society's work in the country is in the charge of Associations for dioceses, archdeaconries or smaller areas, which carry on their work with the co-operation and assistance of the Organizing Secretaries. Invaluable help is rendered by a large number of honorary workers in connexion not with these Associations only, but also with branches of the Clergy Union, the Laymen's Union, the Gleaners' Union, the Ladies' Union, the Young People's Union, the Home Preparation Union and Study Bands in all parts of the country.

The Hibernian Church Missionary Society has its own organization and officers. A few Associations in Scotland are banded together to form the Scottish Auxiliary.

The World Missionary Conference.

UNION and co-operation are regarded by many careful observers as among the signs of the times. They are fostered in the commercial world as conducive to success and wealth by increasing efficiency and minimizing waste. In the religious world the movement is less clearly defined. Different Churches, however, are in some degree drawing together; where organic unity is as yet impracticable, forces are joined from time to time for special efforts or the advocacy of particular duties, while conferences are held with a view to placing under contribution the experiences of the various bodies for the common benefit. Such conferences have often been held in connexion with the work of Foreign Missions. In some cases they have been exclusively of Church of England Societies and organizations, such as the Pan-Anglican Congress in 1908; in others, they have been more general in character. As these pages are passing through the press what is in some respects the most important Conference as yet held, the World Missionary Conference, is in session at Edinburgh, putting the finishing touches to a searching investigation of the plans and methods of the whole missionary enterprise, and co-ordinating missionary experience from all parts of the world.

'Africa and the East.'

The great event of the year 1909 in the home operations of the Church Missionary Society was the holding in the Royal Agricultural Hall, Islington, of a missionary loan exhibition, under the title of 'Africa and the East.' It was the first actually to be undertaken by the Society. As long ago as in 1882, an exhibition was held in Cambridge, organized by the late Rev. J. Barton and the late Mr. H. G. Malaher, then Secretary of the Missionary Leaves Association, and of late years others have been held in Birmingham, Bristol, Liverpool, Sheffield, Belfast, Dublin, etc.; but all those efforts were initiated and carried through by local friends with the help of Mr. Malaher, to whom the growth and success of the movement has been chiefly due, and other Societies had a share in them, though a less conspicuous one than the C.M.S. But 'Africa and the East,' in the organization of which Mr. T. H. Baxter, the present Secretary of the Missionary Leaves Association, took a leading and invaluable part, was not only a distinctively C.M.S. exhibition, undertaken on the responsibility of the Committee, but was also on a larger scale than ever attempted before, the preparation for it occupying eighteen months. The opening ceremony was performed on June 8, by the Archbishop of Canterbury, and from that date until July 3 (Sundays, of course, excepted), it was daily visited by large numbers of people, many of whom were drawn from distant parts of the country. The proceedings of each day began with a short service, after which some prominent clergyman or layman gave a brief address, and then the army of 8,000 stewards and other workers, who had been carefully trained for their duties, addressed themselves to the explanation of the exhibits to the visitors. One of the most prominent and popular features of the exhibition was an African Village, which occupied two-thirds of the Gilbey Hall, and contained exact representations of a large Yoruba compound, a couple of devil-houses, the hut of a Temne chief, the church at Ilofa in the Yoruba Country, a mosque, etc. The attendance on a moderate estimate exceeded 250,000, and after all expenses had been met, a sum of about £1,000 remained, together with a large stock of curios and costumes to the value of at least £500. Throughout the proceedings a high spiritual tone prevailed, and the experience of the Candidates' Department showed that in many cases a deep impression, leading to inquiry concerning personal service in the mission-field, was made by what was seen and heard.* The principal features of the exhibition were afterwards reproduced on a smaller scale in Liverpool, from September 27 to October 9, and were visited by more than 72,000 persons, the total receipts exceeding £4,200.†

Almost immediately after the close of the Exhibition at the Agricultural Hall the Committee had to arrive at a decision as to the course which they would pursue, in view of the financial position, with respect to the dispatch of recruits to the mission-field. The situation was serious, for it had become evident that larger allowances to the missionaries and native agents and increased grants for educational establishments in India (if Government grants were to be retained), amounting in all to about £15,000 per annum, were imperative. Eventually the Committee decided that the missionaries already accepted, and any who might be accepted before the autumn might be sent out, so long as the total of recruits dispatched did not exceed the average losses by death, retirement, etc.* The adoption of this course accentuated the necessity of exercising special care to keep down the expenditure, and the Estimates Committee in November had the painful duty of reducing the estimates received from the Missions by no less than £33,000, but even then the estimates as passed for 1910–11 stood at £397,000.† With a view to bringing the seriousness of the situation before the Society's friends and helpers in the country a Conference of officials and members of the provincial C.M.S. Associations was held at the Church House, Westminster, in November, at which the position of affairs was clearly set forth, and the effects in the mission-field of curtailment of expenditure were explained. The Conference declared that they 'could not encourage the Committee to maintain the existing work, and to add any necessary increase of equipment, if the finances of the current year prove seriously inadequate to meet the needs of the year'; and they proposed that for the immediate need a Sufficiency and Efficiency Fund of £50,000 be appealed for, to be raised by March 31.‡ This appeal was afterwards authorized by the Committee.

* See C.M.S. Gazette, July, 1909, pp. 193, et seq., Aug., pp. 228, et seq., for an account of the proceedings and a report of many of the opening addresses. The final report of the Executive Committee of 'Africa and the East' was printed in ibid., Nov., p. 332.

‡ An account of the Conference was given in the C.M.S. Gazette, Jan., 1910, p. 2. Cf. also Church Missionary Review, ibid. pp. 56, 57.

To the adverse balance on the year's working has to be added £30,642, the adverse balance carried forward from previous years, making a total of £35,922.

The Society's income.

The ordinary receipts of the year amounted to £278,117, as compared with £279,145 in 1908–9. Legacies to the General Fund showed a falling off of a little more than £20,000, a large one of £24,500 having been received in the previous year; but on the other hand the amount sent up by Associations (£227,543) was about £12,000 in excess of that in 1908–9, though still some £9,000 below the figure of 1906–7. Appropriated Contributions actually paid in during the past year amounted to £94,116 (in addition to a grant of £2,000 from the Pan-Anglican Thankoffering Committee), of which £36,893 (besides £6,000 of a bequest, which has been funded) was contributed to support the Society's medical missions. But the amount of Appropriated Contributions available towards the expenditure of the year exceeded by some £9,000 the amount actually received. The explanation of this is that when friends appropriate gifts towards specific objects it frequently happens—as, for example, when the gift is for the support of a missionary recruit who sails at the end of the year—that such gifts or a portion of them cannot be used on that object during the year in which they are given; a balance has to be carried forward. Consequently, in any one year the amount received in such gifts rarely corresponds with what the Society derives from them towards that year's expenditure; sometimes more is used than has been received, sometimes less. It only remains to add regarding the income that £8,913 was derived from the Pan-Anglican Thankoffering of £22,648, earmarked by the donors for the Society, and received during the year 1908–9; the Committee set aside a portion of this sum to meet the expense of urgently required buildings in the mission-field, and used the amount mentioned on that object during the past year.

Self-sacrificing gifts.

The gifts made to the Society, both small and great, have in many cases involved real self-sacrifice to the donors. Instances have been recorded month by month in the C.M.S. magazines; here it must suffice to mention the action of the parish of St. Helen's in doing with one curate less in order that the stipend saved might support another missionary in the field; the raising of £285 during Thankoffering Week in the parish of St. John's, Monkstown, in the diocese of Dublin, where, but a few weeks before, a C.M.S. 'gift day' had been observed, as the usual missionary sale of work could not be held, and £76 had been specially contributed; * the collections at the C.M.S. anniversary at St. Matthew's, Croydon, which amounted to £250, notwithstanding the loss of several friends by death or removal and a great falling off in the incomes of many of the people, some of whose gifts were 'intensely moving in their revelation of devotion to Christ'; special contributions in another parish amounting to nearly £150 and including £1 from a parlourmaid, after the observance of the Day of Prayer in February, 1910; and a striking instance of sustained liberality on the part of two small parishes in Buckinghamshire, containing a population of less than 200, which in the last seventy years have subscribed nearly £1,400 to the funds of the Society. Here may also be mentioned the facts that, in addition to the Pan-Anglican Thankoffering of £223,045, the voluntary offerings of the Church of England for foreign work, including contributions for Missionary Colleges, Studentship Associations, &c., in the year ending Easter, 1909, amounted to £887,684, as compared with £882,297 in the previous year. In the year 1898–9 the total was £772,446. These contributions, therefore, during the decade have increased on the average by £11,543 per annum, and the advance has been most rapid during the latter part of the period.*

Candidates.

It has already been intimated that one result of the Exhibition, 'Africa and the East,' was that a number of inquiries were made concerning the conditions of work abroad. The total number of such inquiries in 1909–10 was 647 (360 men and 287 women), as compared with 629 (396 men and 233 women) in 1908–9. The number of cases dealt with by Committee was 180 (eighty-six men and ninety-four women); fifty-three (seventeen men and thirty-six women) were accepted for training; and forty-six (thirty-one men and fifteen women) were accepted for service, either after training or as qualified when they offered. The corresponding figures for 1908–9 were: cases dealt with by Committee, eighty-eight men and 102 women; accepted for training, twenty men and twenty-eight women; accepted for service, twenty-eight men and thirty-three women. Of the forty-six accepted for service in 1909–10, seventeen men and two women were already qualified when they offered; ten and seven respectively were accepted after training; and four men and six women by Colonial Associations or in local connexion. Of the thirty-one men accepted, eighteen were clergy or to be ordained before sailing for the mission-field, and six were medical men; twelve of them were graduates, seven from Cambridge, two from Liverpool, and one each from London, Edinburgh, and New Zealand. Two of the women also were graduates; one was a qualified doctor and three were trained nurses. Two of the Colonial candidates have subsequently had to withdraw. The following list gives the names of the remaining forty-four, together with their colleges or training institutions, the places from which they offered

Training institutions.

Islington College had thirty-three men in residence during the whole or part of the year, and thirteen men were in the Preparatory Institution at Blackheath, making a total of forty-six men under training; ten more than in 1908–9. In 1909 six Islington men took the diploma of L.Th., which is now required by Durham University of theological students of affiliated colleges before they can enter upon the period of residence required for the degree of B.A.; and one of them gained the first place in the Bishop of London's examination and accordingly read the Gospel at the ordination service in St. Paul's Cathedral on Trinity Sunday. The number of women candidates under training at the close of the March term, 1910, was thirty-two, nineteen fewer than twelve months before. The Home Preparation Union was joined by 300 new members in 1909, a larger number than in any previous year. The annual Report of the Union states that in the twelve months ending September, 1909, nine men and eleven women members were accepted for training, and four men and five women were accepted as missionaries on the staff. The Union is a valuable corrective to the ignorance of the Bible which is shown by many who make inquiries concerning service in the mission-field, an ignorance so common as to have called forth a memorandum from the Candidates' Committee on the subject.*

Resignations of Prebendary Fox and Mr. R. Maconachie.

Although they have been tendered since the close of the period under review in this Report, mention must be made of the resignation, in both cases on medical grounds, of Prebendary H. E. Fox of the office of Honorary Clerical Secretary, after fifteen years of strenuous work, and of Mr. R. Maconachie of the office of Lay Secretary, which he has filled as an honorary worker for two and a half years. The Committee, in their minute accepting the resignation of the former, said:—

They rejoice that Mr. Fox has been privileged to see considerable expansion during his term of office in the Society's work, both at home and abroad, in some measure resulting from the Centenary celebrations, in which he took so energetic a part. The Committee recognize that in the retirement of Mr. Fox, himself the son of a missionary, many missionaries and their children will lose a devoted and most generous friend, who has shown to them and to others ungrudging sympathy and hospitality; and the Secretariat will be deprived of a genial colleague, whose brotherly spirit and quiet humour have often, as the Committee are assured, lightened the burden of daily official work.

The Committee for their own part, while cherishing affectionate and grateful recollections of his close association with them during these fifteen years and of the wise counsel he has often given them, are not forgetful of his self-denying devotion to the missionary enterprise, which has manifested itself for many years and in various ways: in his forming in 1887 one of the earliest winter mission parties which the Society sent out to India; in the cheerful surrender of no less than five of his children to foreign missionary service; and in his brilliant advocacy of the cause in all parts of the country, not infrequently involving serious physical strain.

In expressing their appreciation of Mr. Maconachie's services the Committee passed the following minute:—

They place on record their very hearty appreciation of the generous and invaluable services which Mr. Maconachie has rendered to the Society for the last two and a half years as Honorary Lay Secretary and for seven and a half years as a member of the Committee. He brought to this work the ripe experience in Indian official life, together with all the zeal and thoroughness of one filled with love for the great cause of Missions. He has discharged the duties of his office with an earnestness and self-denial which, the Committee fear, have overtaxed his too-willing powers.

Other changes in the Home Staff.

The Rev. H. G. Grey, the Society's Punjab missionary, has been acting as Honorary Secretary (pro tem.) to the Educational Committee. The vacancies among the Assistant-Secretaries, caused by the resignations of the Revs. J. C. Duncan and A. C. Stratton, which were recorded in last year's Report,* have been filled by the appointment of the Rev. H. Pegg, Curate of St. Andrew's, Whitehall Park, and previously Chaplain of Christ Church, Madras, as Secretary of the Gleaners' Union, and of the Rev. R. Bulstrode, M.A., Curate of St. Peter's, Paddington, as Assistant-Secretary in the Candidates' Department; while the Rev. H. G. Harding, Curate of St. Paul's, Canonbury, and formerly (from 1897–1904) a missionary of the Society in Palestine, has succeeded the Rev. E. W. Cox (now Vicar of Holy Trinity, Oxford) as Assistant-Secretary for the Medical Mission Auxiliary. Among the Organizing Secretaries the following have resigned their charges: The Rev. A. A. Parry, Dioceses of Ripon and Wakefield; the Rev. G. F. Grace, Diocese of Norwich; the Rev. Dr. C. Neill, Dioceses of Gloucester and Worcester; and the Rev. P. G. Wood, Dioceses of Hereford and Lichfield. The Diocese of Southwark has been added to the London and Essex district, the Archdeaconry of Surrey to that of Salisbury and Winchester, the Dioceses of Lichfield and Worcester to the Birmingham district, and the Diocese of Hereford to the Gloucester district. The Diocese of Rochester has been attached to the Chichester and Canterbury district, and is under the charge of the Rev. T. McClelland. New appointments have been made as follows: The Rev. A. R. Fuller (late missionary in Japan) to the Dioceses of Manchester and Chester; the Rev. B. W. Isaac to the Dioceses of Oxford and Peterborough; the Rev. F. Pring Rowe to the Diocese of Norwich; the Rev. J. W. Augur, B.A., to the Dioceses of Ripon and Wakefield; and the Rev. W. R. Park, B.A., to the Dioceses of Gloucester and Hereford. The Rev. W. S. Price, who for many years has rendered valuable help as an honorary worker in the Diocese of Norwich, has retired from his post, having resigned his living on account of advancing years.

Summer Schools.

Two Summer Schools were held in 1909. The first was at the Royal Agricultural Hall during 'Africa and the East,' and the second took place at Bray, Co. Wicklow, from September 4 to 10; both were well attended.† The Society's Anniversary and Valedictory Meetings were on the same lines as in previous years, and in addition February 16, 1910, was observed by the Committee and by many friends in the country as a special Day of Prayer.*

In the work of the Home Organization Department three things stand out conspicuously—the development of missionary study, the growth of the movement among young people, and the continued and increasing success of the Medical Mission Auxiliary. There can be no doubt that the great Loan Exhibitions in London and Liverpool and the necessity for preparation in order to qualify to act as stewards at them lent a distinct impetus to the systematic study of missionary work. The number of study circles registered at headquarters at the end of April, 1910, was 545, as compared with 249 at the same date in 1909, and the corresponding numbers of members were 5,012 and 2,644. These figures show an increase of 118 per cent. in the number of circles, and of ninety per cent. in that of members. In several cases information has been received indicating that practical work for Foreign Missions has been undertaken, and even that offers of service have been made as a result of missionary study. The Young People's Union has continued to grow steadily,† and at the end of 1909 it had 500 branches with a membership of 17,000, as compared with 400 branches and between 14,000 and 15,000 members twelve months before. In addition there were 475 Sowers' Bands with a membership of about 15,000, making a total of 32,000 young people (one-third of them boys) connected with the Union. Among the young as well as among their seniors a marked extension of systematic missionary study has taken place, and there were in all 633 Junior and ninety-five Intermediate Study Bands, exclusive of a number in schools and elsewhere not registered under the Y.P.U. The Rev. A. L. Leeper, M.A., and Miss G. E. Padwick have been appointed as helpers in the Department. The available income of the Medical Mission Auxiliary was £39,227, and the expenditure (including £5,400 for new liabilities taken over from the General Fund) was £39,113, leaving a balance in hand, after defraying the whole cost of the medical missions, of £114.

Work among the Young.

Medical Mission Auxiliary.

In the Women's Work Section great importance attaches to the increased interest of educated women in missionary problems, and their desire to qualify themselves for a fuller use of their influence in social circles. A marked advance has also taken place in the number of women locally appointed to membership of Archidiaconal Committees. A number of Conferences on 'Thought, Discipleship and Prayer' were held by headquarters' workers in the autumn of 1909. In connexion with the Girls' Movement, for which Miss Rickard, who has now been obliged to retire in consequence of ill-health, has done much during the past seven years, Study Bands have been a main line of work; some of the groups of girls contribute largely to the funds of the Society, one, with a membership of fourteen, having paid in over £80 for the past financial year. The work of the other C.M.S. Unions, though most useful, has presented no special features.

C.M.S. Literature

The principal new publications of the year have been The Reproach of Islam (C.M.S. edition) for adults, of which 9,000 copies have been sold; The Story of Islam (C.M.S. edition) for Junior and Intermediate courses, of which over 4,000 copies have been sold; Missions and the Minor Prophets, the Scripture Study book for the year; and Talks on Egypt, an addition to the series of 'Missionary Instruction for Young People.' In connexion with 'Africa and the East,' the following books were specially prepared: Aunt Africa, for children; Edith Stanton's Opportunity; Other People's Prayers; 'Lepers Sought His Face'; The Tell-Tale Club; and two series of penny booklets for adults and children, together with a penny Story of the C.M.S. Other new publications have been: Thought and Discipleship, a selection of addresses given at the London Summer School, and Puck, M.P., written for children on the year's subject for study.

Obituary.

During the year the Society has suffered the loss by death of nine Vice-Presidents, nine Honorary Life Governors, and two Honorary Life Members. The Vice-Presidents were the following: the Bishop of Lincoln (Dr. King), the Bishop of Hull (Dr. Blunt), the Bishop of Sierra Leone (Dr. Elwin), Bishop Anson (formerly of Qu'Appelle), Bishop Awdry (formerly of South Tokyo), Bishop Sumner (formerly of Guildford), the Dean of Norwich (Dr. W. Lefroy), Dr. R. N. Cust and Mr. Miles MacInnes.

The Honorary Life Governors called to their rest were: the Rev. R. Dandy, the Rev. T. Y. Darling, the Rev. Canon W. Eliot, the Rev. Canon A. R. Fausset, the Rev. Herbert James, the Rev. E. Lombe, Mr. H. J. Martyn, Mr. E. Wells, and the Rev. G. F. Whidborne.*

The Honorary Life Members who died were: Mrs. Armitage and Mrs. C. L. Burrows.

The missionaries, whether retired or on the active list, and the native clergy who have died during the year are mentioned in connexion with the Missions to which they were attached.

The office of Vice-President has been accepted by the Archbishop of Sydney (Dr. Wright), the Bishop of Norwich (Dr. Pollock), the Bishop of Barrow-in-Furness (Dr. Watson), the Bishop of Moosonee (Dr. Anderson), Dr. Andrews (Bishop in Hokkaido, Japan), Dr. Banister (Bishop in Kwangsi-Hunan), Dr. Lea (Bishop in Kiu-Shiu), and Dr. White (Bishop in Ho-Nan), and the Committee have appointed to the same office the Earl of Feversham. The following have been appointed as Honorary Life Governors * : Dr. E. J. Bellerby (Margate), Col. J. E. Broadbent (Reading), T. F. Victor Buxton, Esq. (Waltham Abbey), the Rev. S. T. Dawson (Harrogate), the Rev. A. R. Ebbs (Melbourne), the Rev. H. Fisher (Higham, Nuneaton), W. Macpherson, Esq. (Leeds), the Rev. F. W. Mervyn (Dublin), the Rev. Canon A. J. Moore (Holywood, Co. Down), the Rev. J. O. Parr (Worthing), the Rev. Canon Denton Thompson (Birmingham), J. D. Tremlett, Esq. (Dedham), and Theo. Walker, Esq. (Leicester). The Committee have also added the following to the list of Honorary Life Members : Mrs. F. J. Chavasse (Liverpool), Mrs. Hankinson Cox (Norwich), Mrs. C. J. Procter (Islington), and Lady M. B. Smith-Dodsworth (Clifton). Patronage.

* Since 1882 the number of Honorary Life Governors has been limited to 100, but in view of the increased magnitude of the Society's home work the Committee have raised the limit to 120.

The Colonial Associations.

THE Colonial C.M.S. Associations in Australasia were set on foot as a result of a visit from the Rev. R. W. Stewart and Dr. Eugene Stock, who were sent as a deputation by the Committee of the Society in 1892. The New South Wales C.M. Auxiliary, which had existed since 1825, was then reconstituted, and new Associations were formed for Victoria (with which Tasmania and South and West Australia afterwards combined) and New Zealand. These Associations accept, train and send forth candidates for missionary work in C.M.S. and other fields, and are responsible for their support. They have sent to the C.M.S. field sixty-one missionaries (excluding wives of missionaries), viz., twenty-two from the New South Wales Association, thirty from the Victoria Association, and nine from the New Zealand Association.

In Canada, Wycliffe College, Toronto, formed a Missionary Association in 1888, which maintained men in Japan and in North-West Canada. In 1895 this gave place to a Canadian Church Missionary Association, afterwards called the Canadian C.M.S., and the missionaries previously sent out by Wycliffe College were added to the Society's staff. The Canadian C.M.S., like the Australasian Associations, selects its own missionaries; but financially it is now an integral part of the Missionary Society of the Canadian Church. It has sent twenty-two missionaries to C.M.S. fields.

In 1895 several parishes in Cape Colony which supported the C.M.S. formed themselves into a South Africa Association, which is analogous rather to diocesan or archidiaconal associations in England than to the Australasian Associations. The Association is responsible for the personal allowances (in whole or in part), of a number of missionaries in the same way as parishes or unions in the United Kingdom having 'own missionaries.' Candidates for missionary service are sent to England for training and acceptance.

The West Indian C.M.S. Council, which was constituted in 1897, selects West Indian agents for service in West Africa, and superintends their preparation at the Mico College in Jamaica. It is not responsible for their support.

I. NEW SOUTH WALES.

THE staff of the New South Wales C.M. Association in the mission-field has been reinforced by the Rev. G. H. Cranswick, who has joined the South India Mission; Miss E. S. Jackson, who has been assigned to East Africa; and Miss Alice Kendall, who is labouring in the Fuh-Kien Mission. It now consists of two clergymen, three laymen (one of them a doctor), three wives of missionaries, and eight single women. Five of these are working in Africa, two in Egypt, one in Palestine, three in India and five in China. In addition the Association maintains a Chinese clergyman and two lay agents who labour among the Chinese in New South Wales. There was a deficit of £500 in the year ending March 31, 1909 (the last of which a report has been received), bringing the total indebtedness of the Association up to nearly £2,000. Special efforts are now being made to liquidate this debt.

Dr. Wright, the Archbishop of Sydney, has accepted the office of President of the New South Wales Association, and the Rev. S. M. Johnstone, B.A., Th.L., has been appointed General Secretary for one year. The home organization is singularly complete. Besides the ordinary parochial branches there were (in March, 1909) seventy-six branches of the Gleaners' Union, with 1,900 members; ninety-five Sowers' Bands, among which are included thirteen branches, with 350 members, of the Girls' Missionary Band, and six branches, with 125 members, of the Boys' Missionary Band; and a Women's Department, in connexion with which is a Nurses' Missionary Union, with forty-one members. The C.M.A. depôt in Sydney is a valuable adjunct of the work.

II. VICTORIA, SOUTH AUSTRALIA, WEST AUSTRALIA, AND TASMANIA.

Two new names have been added to the list of missionaries of the above Association in connexion with the C.M.S., viz., those of Miss G. L. Bendelack, a trained educationist, who is working at St. Stephen's Girls' College, Hong Kong, and Miss Z. E. D. Parry, a trained nurse, who is now in the Persia Mission. Besides the missionaries labouring in connexion with the C.M.S., the Association has others engaged with the C.E.Z.M.S. in India and China, and others working among the aborigines in South Australia and Victoria, making a total of thirty-seven missionaries. It also maintains two clergymen and a catechist for work among the Chinese in Victoria. Four men and five women were in training at the end of 1909.

The Bishop of Tasmania has been appointed a Vice-Patron of the Association, the Rev. Canon Sadleir a Vice-President, Mr. T. Woodward the Hon. Treasurer, and the Rev. G. E. Lamble Hon. Secretary for the Diocese of Wangaratta. The available income for the year was £5,656 and the expenditure £5,823. The missionary depôts in Melbourne and Geelong made good profits, and a new depôt opened at Hobart promises to be useful.

III. NEW ZEALAND.

THE New Zealand Association has three missionaries on the C.M.S. staff, viz., Miss E. B. Giffard, of the Western India Mission; Miss E. Baker, of the South China Mission; and Miss M. L. Pasley, of the Japan Mission. In addition it has a couple of missionaries working under the C.E.Z.M.S. in India and South China respectively; four ladies engaged in work among the Maoris (a grant being made towards the support of a fifth), to which another candidate, whose acceptance was recorded last year, has been appointed, her health not permitting her to go abroad; and a clergyman and a layman engaged in the Melanesian Mission. The Rev. F. C. Long, M.A., New Zealand University, has been accepted for service.

Thanks largely to a sum of £300 derived from the 'H. and W. Williams Trust' the finances of the Association stood in a much better position at the end of the financial year 1909 than they did twelve months before. The sum of £95 which had been withdrawn from the Reserve Fund in 1908 to meet an adverse balance, was repaid, and the credit balance, which stood at £19 in January, 1909, was £139 at the end of December. The Rev. A. J. Carr has resigned his position as Secretary.*

IV. CANADA.

Two former missionaries of the Canadian C.M.S. have been consecrated, viz., the Rev. A. Lea as Bishop in Kiu-Shiu, and the Rev. W. C. White as Bishop in Ho-Nan, where a new Canadian Mission has been undertaken, to be administered as well as supported by the Canadian Church. There was a fear at one time that Dr. White's consecration might have to be delayed, as the House of Bishops, in appointing him, made it a condition that the Primate must be notified that the means for the support of the bishopric were reasonably secure before proceeding to consecrate. A congregation in Quebec thereupon resolved to deny themselves the luxury of a new organ, and to devote the money to the Ho-Nan Mission; one or two individual Churchmen contributed large sums; and one of them, the Hon. S. H. Blake, undertook to be responsible for any deficiency at the end of the first year in the funds of the Board for this purpose.

The Canadian C.M.S. has on its rolls the names of six clergymen and their wives (one of the latter a doctor), two medical men and the wife of one of them, and six single women, in connexion with the C.M.S., and one single woman who is working in South America. Four men and three women are in training. There are twenty-seven branches of the Gleaners' Union in Canada, with a membership of 1,091.

V. SOUTH AFRICA.

THE income of the South Africa Association in 1909 was £1,225, about £42 less than in the previous year. The personal allowances (in whole or in part) of fifteen C.M.S. missionaries are now provided by the Association—two in Africa, one in Persia, three in India, one in Ceylon, seven in China, and one in Japan. A candidate from South Africa, Miss I. Lindley, whose name appeared on the list of accepted candidates in last year's Report,† is now at work in Japan as an honorary missionary.

* The Rev. G. Maunsell, a former missionary of the C.M.S. in New Zealand, died at Auckland on December 23, 1909. A son of Archdeacon R. Maunsell, who went out to New Zealand as a missionary in 1835, he was educated in England at the C.M. Children's Home and the C.M. College. He was ordained in 1864, and joined the Mission two years later. His main work was at Opotiki, in the Napier diocese.

The Rev. W. Goodyear, who has been working among the Maoris since 1878, first under the C.M.S. and latterly under the Maori Mission Board, reports the baptism of one of the leading men of the so-called prophet, Rua, and mentions that there are many candidates under preparation for baptism. See C.M.S. Gazette, March, 1910, p. 88.

Missions.

THE WORLD.

THE present century has witnessed a marvellous awakening among the nations. Japan, after long years of resolute isolation, has become a world-power; Corea, another 'Hermit Nation,' has welcomed missionaries, and the Gospel ferment has stirred, it has been said, 'every fibre of her being to a new life'; China's awakening baffles description; India is alive with new national aspirations; Persia is in the throes of the birth of freedom; in Turkey one of the last citadels of religious intolerance has, in theory at least, fallen to the ground; old Egypt is quickly giving place to a new Egypt; and Morocco is experiencing forced reforms. The influence which European nations now exercise over so large a portion of the world involves a profound modification both of the conditions of life and also of the thought of the peoples who come within its range. Mr. James Bryce, King Edward's Ambassador to the United States, speaking at Washington in May, 1909, gave expression to the responsibility which this fact casts upon the Church of Christ. Referring to the races brought into touch with material civilization, he said:— An awakening among the nations.

> Their traditions and beliefs, their old customs, and everything that was associated with them and depended upon their beliefs and their customs, are rapidly crumbling away and disappearing. What I want to put to you is the supreme importance at this moment of our doing what we can to fill that void which we have made—to give them something to live by, instead of that by which they have lived heretofore. Now, when the old things are passing away from them, is the time for us to give them something new and something better by which they may live, and through which they may come again into a better progress than they ever could do in their ancient ways. This is the time for us to give them the one supreme gift which the world has ever received, and in which we believe the safety and future hope of the world lie—a knowledge of the life and the teaching of our Lord Jesus Christ.

The magnitude of the crisis appears to be but imperfectly realized in many quarters at home. One of the Committees of the Lambeth Conference reported that the home dioceses needed 1,000 additional clergy, and that the 104 oversea dioceses called for 576. But in England and Wales there are 22,000 clergy of the Church of England; in the oversea dioceses 4,700. The report, therefore, as the Bishop of Bombay has pointed out, in effect declared: '22,000 clergy are not enough for 32,000,000 people in England and Wales, give them a thousand more; and 4,700 clergy are not enough for (let us say) 360,000,000 (the population of the British Empire outside the United Kingdom), give them 600 more.' He added: 'Where is the consistency of this? Which require more clergy, 32,000,000 or 360,000,000? Which require more clergy, 32,000,000 mostly Christians, at least in name, or 360,000,000 mostly non-Christians?'

Statistics of Protestant Missions.

The total missionary force of Protestant Christendom in 1909 has been estimated in the Missionary Review of the World at 21,834 foreign missionaries (including 6,833 wives of missionaries), 5,929 ordained natives and 87,343 native lay helpers. As compared with those of the previous year these figures show an increase of 1,960 in the number of foreign missionaries, 930 in that of ordained natives, but a decrease of 6,613 in that of native lay helpers. The statistics are encouraging, for in the case of British Societies the number of foreign missionaries has grown by 929, whereas in 1908 it fell by thirty-six, while the American and Canadian figures have risen by 1,066 instead of by 702.*

SIERRA LEONE MISSION.

THE PAST HISTORY.

Africa was the earliest field entered by the Society. Its first two missionaries were sent in 1804 to the Susu tribes on the Rio Pongas. In 1816 the Society's efforts were concentrated upon the Colony of Sierra Leone, which, after the abolition of the slave trade in 1807, had become the depôt for Negroes rescued from slave ships by the British cruisers. Much blessing attended the labours of W. A. B. Johnson and other missionaries, and in 1822 nearly 2,000 of the freed slaves, adults and children, were in the mission-schools, several thousands were attending public worship, and some hundreds had become sincere Christians. The work continued to prosper, but at a great cost of life, fifty-three missionaries and missionaries' wives dying between 1804 and 1824. In 1842 a Parliamentary Committee attributed the 'considerable intellectual, moral, and religious improvement' of the people to 'the valuable exertions of the Church Missionary Society more especially.' Port Lokkoh, in the Temne Country, was occupied from 1840–50 and re-occupied in 1875; Ro Gbere was occupied in 1896; the Yalunka Country, near the northern boundary of the British Protectorate, in 1897, and Falaba, the chief town, seven years later; and Katimbo, in the Limbah Country, in 1900. A serious rebellion took place in the Temne Country in 1898, during which the Rev. W. J. Humphrey, of the C.M.S., and several American missionaries were put to death by the insurgents.

In 1852 the Bishopric of Sierra Leone was founded, and each of the first three Bishops—Vidal, Weeks, and Bowen—died within three years of his consecration. Since then the following have succeeded to the charge of the diocese: Bishops Beckles (1860), Cheetham (1870), Ingham (1882), Taylor-Smith (1897), Elwin (1902). Bishops Weeks, Bowen, Taylor-Smith and Elwin were previously C.M.S. missionaries. The last named died in 1909, and the Rev. Canon J. Walmsley has been appointed to the see.

In 1860 the Sierra Leone Native Church was organized on an independent basis, and undertook the support of its own pastors, churches and schools, aided by a small grant from the Society, which ceased in 1890. In 1876 it took over the outlying Missions established by the C.M.S. in the Bullom and Mendi Countries, and in 1908 it assumed responsibility for the remainder of the C.M.S. work in the Hinterland, with the aid of some financial help from the Society. More than 150 African clergymen have been ordained on the West Coast (including the Yoruba Country and the Niger). Several of them have been Government chaplains.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK.

The Society's work in the Mission is now confined to Freetown, the capital of the Colony and Protectorate of Sierra Leone, where it has a College, affiliated to Durham University, a Grammar School for boys, and the Annie Walsh Memorial School for girls. Its staff consists of one European and five African clergy, one layman, two wives of missionaries, and two single women, besides twenty-five African lay agents. There are thirty clergy and 128 lay agents connected with the Sierra Leone Native Church.

Death of Bishop Elwin.

THE Church and Colony of Sierra Leone have been sadly bereaved by the death of Bishop Elwin at Freetown on November 10, 1909. He was born in 1871, and after graduating at Oxford (Merton College) and reading at Wycliffe Hall, he was ordained in 1894. Two years later he went out to Sierra Leone as Vice-Principal of Fourah Bay College. He subsequently became Principal, and also Secretary of the Mission, and held both posts until he was appointed Bishop of Sierra Leone in 1902. The earlier years of his episcopate were overshadowed by many difficulties, but he met them all with hopeful faith.* The Rev. Canon J. Walmsley, Vicar of St. Ann's, Nottingham, has been appointed as Bishop Elwin's successor.

Ordination of African clergy.

The staff of British missionaries in Sierra Leone has been diminished by the transference of Miss A. W. Elwin to the Punjab Mission. On the other hand, the names of five African clergy—the Revs. Christian Leopold Franklin Cole; Thomas Sylvester Claudius Johnson, B.A., L.Th., Durham; Ernest Hutchinson George Nylander, L.Th., Durham; Ralph Lemuel Pinkney, L.Th., Durham; and Benjamin Layard Thomas, B.A., L.Th., Durham—have been added to the list of native clergy on their ordination.

Educational Work.

Fourah Bay College.

During the last two years Fourah Bay College, Freetown, where so many of the clergy connected with the C.M.S. in West Africa have received their training, has been the subject of anxious discussion, and the possibility of being obliged to close it has even been faced. There is some prospect of money being available from the Pan-Anglican Thankoffering for the partial endowment of an institution for the training of clergy in the Diocese of Sierra Leone, and presumably Fourah Bay College would be used for the purpose, but the death of Bishop Elwin has brought negotiations about this matter to a standstill. During the past year, with a view to raising funds for the endowment of the college as affiliated to Durham University, the Mayor of Freetown called a public meeting, at which a resolution to attempt to raise the requisite capital sum was passed, and canvassers were forthwith appointed. The college was without a Principal in 1909, but the work among the eighteen students was efficiently carried on by the two African tutors, with some help from Mr. J. Denton, the Secretary of the Mission, and from the head-master of the Cathedral day-school. Three men proceeded to their B.A. degree, and one to his M.A. degree. Three of those whose ordination has been mentioned were tutors at the Grammar School.

Grammar School. The alumni of that institution are scattered all over West Africa, many of them occupying positions of considerable influence. There was a slight increase in the number of girls at the Annie Walsh School, but the boarders, though more numerous than in 1908, were fewer than in many previous years, owing to the fact that other schools have been opened at various places on the West Coast. The people of Freetown and the neighbourhood do not often send their daughters as boarders, since there are few openings for educated women, and the prospect of a financial return for the outlay on education is consequently remote.

Evangelistic Work.

The services of a native-born Temne man, long resident in the Colony, were obtained for the work among the Temnes which is carried on in connexion with the Bishop Crowther Memorial Church at Cline Town, and his efforts to win his fellow-tribesmen were attended with success. One or two people gave up some stones, believed to possess the power of bringing good fortune in any enterprise, and a string of sebbehs (charms), used to ward off evil. 'Lucky' stones given up.

In the Sierra Leone Native Church there was evidence that a determination existed to put an end to the unhappy spirit of faction which has been prevalent. The work of the Church in the Limbah and Falaba district of the Hinterland was attended with some encouragement.* Sierra Leone Native Church.

WESTERN EQUATORIAL AFRICA MISSIONS.

THE PAST HISTORY.

A large proportion of the freed slaves gathered at Sierra Leone at the beginning of the nineteenth century had been carried away from the Yoruba Country, which lies a thousand miles to the east. About the year 1840 many of them, having by that time become Christians and traders on their own account, returned to their fatherland. The result was an invitation to the missionaries to go thither, and the establishment of stations at Badagry, 1845, and Lagos, 1852, on the coast; and at Abeokuta, 1846, Ibadan, 1853, Oyo, 1858 (reoccupied 1887), and other towns and villages in the interior. More recently, Ode Ondo, 1876, Oshogbo, 1900, and Owo, 1908, have been occupied.

In 1841 a Government naval expedition, accompanied by a C.M.S. missionary, the Rev. J. F. Schön, and by Samuel Crowther, a liberated negro slave, explored the River Niger. In 1854 a second expedition penetrated up the stream 500 miles, finding the natives everywhere ready to receive Christian teachers; and in 1857 Mr. Crowther accompanied a third expedition, undertaken for commercial purposes, and laid the foundation of the Niger Mission by establishing three stations. One of these was Onitsha. Other stations were subsequently occupied, viz., Bonny, 1866; Brass, 1868; Asaba, 1875; Idumuje Ugboko, 1902; Oka and Kaiyama, 1904; Ebu, 1906; and Patani, 1907.

The first station to be occupied in Northern Nigeria was Lokoja (1865), whence the work has spread to other places in the immediate neighbourhood. In 1890 a party of missionaries went out under the leadership of the Rev. J. A. Robinson and Mr. G. Wilmot Brooke, with the idea of residing at Lokoja and thence making an effort to reach the Mohammedans of the Hausa States. The climate shortly proved fatal to both the leaders, and drove the rest home. In 1900 Bishop Tugwell led a party to Kano, and though they were not permitted to stay in that town they did not leave the country. The Basa Country was occupied in 1897; Bida, 1903; Zaria, 1905; Kuta and Mokwa, 1906; and Katsa, 1909. In 1907 the Cambridge University Missionary Party (as C.M.S. missionaries) began work at Panyam, in the Bauchi Highlands.

Samuel Crowther was consecrated Bishop of the Niger Territories in 1864. He laboured zealously in the Mission till the end of 1891, when he died at Lagos. In June, 1893, the Rev. J. S. Hill succeeded Bishop Crowther, receiving the title of 'Bishop in Western Equatorial Africa.' Two experienced African clergymen, the Revs. C. Phillips and I. Oluwole, were consecrated as his assistant-Bishops at the same time. Bishop Hill died in January, 1894, and the Rev. H. Tugwell was consecrated the following March. In 1900 the Rev. James Johnson, a third African assistant-Bishop, was consecrated. Bishop Phillips died in 1906. Lagos was included in the diocese of Sierra Leone until 1898.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK.

The Western Equatorial Africa Missions are carried on in several clearly defined districts, viz., in the Yoruba Country and in the Lower Niger districts, which are in Southern Nigeria; and in Northern Nigeria.

I. In the Yoruba Country the pastoral work is almost entirely entrusted to African clergy, of whom there are thirty-eight. At the three oldest stations—Lagos on the coast and Abeokuta and Ibadan in the interior—District Councils have been formed, and the clergy are appointed by local authorities and maintained independently of the C.M.S. Those Councils, moreover, are responsible to the Diocesan Synod for the evangelistic work in their districts, while the Lagos Council has missionary work, largely self-supporting, in the Ijebu Country. At the other centres—Oyo, Oshogbo, Ode Ondo and Owo—evangelistic work is largely in the hands of the Society.

All the educational work, with the exception of a Training Institution and a Grammar School at Abeokuta and some elementary schools, is maintained by the C.M.S. The chief institutions are a Training College for men at Oyo, a Training Class for evangelists at Oshogbo, a Boys' Grammar School and a Girls' Seminary at Lagos, and a Girls' Training School at Ibadan. In this connexion may be mentioned also the Book Depôts at Lagos, Abeokuta, Ibadan and Ijebu Ode. Medical work is represented by dispensaries at Abeokuta and Oyo.

Labouring under the supervision of Bishops Tugwell and Oluwole, the Society has seven European and nine African clergy, three laymen, five missionaries' wives, ten other women missionaries and ninety-one African Christian lay agents at work in the Yoruba Country. There are twenty-eight African clergy and 211 Christian lay agents in connexion with the Lagos, Abeokuta and Ibadan District Councils.

II. On the lower reaches of the Niger the work is carried on by the Niger Delta Pastorate (which has its headquarters at Bonny, and is manned and financed by Africans) save at Kaiyama and Patani. Higher up the river there are a number of stations and out-stations in Southern Nigeria, the chief being Onitsha, Oka and Ebu on the east of the Niger, and Asaba and Idumuje Ugboko on the west. At nine of these places the pastoral and evangelistic work is undertaken by the Onitsha Council, and at the remainder by European, West Indian, Sierra Leonian and native agents of the Society.

There is a training class for men at Oka and one for girls at Umudi Oka, and Young Womens' Homes at Obusi and Idumuje Ugboko; a number of elementary schools are also carried on. Medical work is maintained at Iyi Enu.

The European clergy in the Niger Mission number eight; lay missionaries three (one a doctor); missionaries' wives six; other women missionaries ten (one a nurse); and there are, besides Bishop Johnson, eight African clergy, of whom five work under the Niger Delta Pastorate. The African Christian lay agents, exclusive of those in connexion with the Delta Pastorate, number fifty-seven.

III. The Mission in Northern Nigeria is among the Hausa people, who are practically entirely Mohammedan, at Zaria; the Nupé and Gwari peoples, who are partly Mohammedan and partly pagan, at Lokoja, Bida, Katsa, Kuta and Mokwa; and the Basa and Yoruba peoples, who are mainly pagan, at Lokoja and the other stations around the confluence of the Niger and the Binue. Work has lately been commenced at Panyam and Kabir, in the Bauchi Highlands, among the Sura and Angass tribes, who are entirely pagan.

A Training Class for evangelists is carried on at Kpata, and there is medical work on a small scale at Zaria. The staff is composed of eight European and two African clergy; four lay missionaries, of whom two are doctors; two missionaries' wives; and fifteen African Christian lay agents.

The liquor traffic.

Appointment of a Government Committee of Inquiry.

An important event of the year under review has been the publication of the Report of the Committee appointed by the Government to 'inquire into and report upon the facts connected with the importation of trade spirits into Southern Nigeria and with their sale and consumption.' The inquiry was ordered in response to the representations of a deputation organized by the Native Races and Liquor Traffic United Committee, which waited upon the Secretary of State at the Colonial Office in July, 1908; at one time it was proposed to appoint representative missionaries on the Committee, but the idea was abandoned, and the Committee eventually consisted of Sir Mackenzie D. Chalmers, K.C.B., C.S.I., Captain C. H. Elgee, Resident at Ibadan, and two members of firms engaged in trade with Southern Nigeria. The conclusions of the Committee were summed up in the following words:—

Their conclusions.

There is absolutely no evidence of race deterioration due to drink. In Southern Nigeria mortality is high and disease is rife, but drink is only an insignificant factor in producing these results. There is hardly any alcoholic disease amongst the native population, and with the exception of one or two isolated cases we found no connexion between drink and crime. On the occasions of feasts and festivals the natives often drink more than is good for them, both of trade spirits and native liquors. Individuals injure themselves both morally and physically by indulgence in drink, but the people generally are a sober people, who are able to drink in moderation without falling into excess. There appears, however, to be a tendency among some of the natives who have received a certain amount of European education to acquire drinking habits, but the prohibition of the import of 'trade spirits' would not do much to diminish this evil. As education progresses this tendency will doubtless be carefully watched. The expert evidence taken in England shows that there is nothing to complain of as regards the quality of the spirits imported into Nigeria.

Extent of the liquor traffic.

These conclusions and the evidence upon which they were based have been carefully examined in the pages of the Church Missionary Review; * here it must suffice to place on record one or two bare facts established by the evidence. The amount of spirituous liquors imported into Southern Nigeria in 1908, chiefly from Holland (seventy-two per cent. of the total) and Germany (twenty-six per cent.), was 2,767,629 proof gallons,† more than two-thirds being gin. This quantity was rather less than that imported in 1903, although in the intervening period the country had been increasingly opened up to trade; but on the other hand the duty had been repeatedly raised, and the tendency of that is to lower the consumption for a time. The evidence on these and a few other matters is briefly presented in the Church Missionary Review as follows:—

We have arrived therefore at these results: (a) That into Southern Nigeria, with a population of 7½ millions and an area of 77,000 square miles, there is being imported from Hamburg and Rotterdam spirituous liquors in quantities which bear approximately ‡ the same ratio to the population reached as do the home-made and foreign spirits consumed in the United Kingdom to its population. (b) That notwithstanding the increase of duty since 1905 from 3*s.* to 5*s.* per gallon, there has been no appreciable fall in the amount of spirits imported; the people have to pay for about the same quantity of spirits, and of the same quality, some £120,000 more than they paid three years ago, and they pay it. (c) That the quality of these spirits is about the same as that of the spirits consumed in our public-houses at home, which are responsible for a large proportion of the indigence which fills our workhouses, the insanity which fills our asylums, and the untold misery which so many of our homes wot of. And (d), that the retail trade is to a large extent unregulated.

Ten thousand persons in pawn in one town through drinking habits.

Two statements made by C.M.S. missionaries in their annual letters may here be noticed. The Rev. T. Harding says that the Bale of Ibadan was asked whether he thought there were as many as 1,000 persons in pawn in Ibadan owing to debt incurred through drinking at funerals, marriages and idol feasts. His answer was, 'Ten thousand!' and he added that it would be difficult to find a compound in the town where one or more persons had not been pawned on that account. And the Rev. H. Proctor incidentally remarks that, on the lower reaches of the Niger, cases and bottles of gin are the standard by which most things are valued, including wives!

Another and increasing hindrance to the progress of Christianity is Mohammedanism.* Hausa traders are entering the Province of Bauchi in the wake of the white man, and though the majority of them are only nominally Mohammedans, yet some are in earnest; the pagans copy their manners, and there is but too much reason to fear that they may soon imitate their religion as well. Mr. A. E. Ball, writing from Katsa, gives a graphic account of the position in that district. He says:— The advance of Islam.

This is a pagan district, and the villages round about are still really pagan, but under Mohammedan influence. There are mallams at work in all, and if these people are to be won for our Master we must lose no time. It is an out-and-out fight with Islam. There is a big village called Edo Roga about a mile and a quarter from here. The chief is a pagan and so are most of his people. They are from Old Kipo, and well remember Bishop Crowther and his workers there. Some of them were actually ransomed from the Bida Moslems after their raids into the district, and most of them have sought refuge in the mission-compound. Yet to-day they have adopted Mohammedan names, many wear Mohammedan charms, and they will soon be joining in the mosque services. On Sunday mornings I go there to preach, and the people come out in good numbers to listen. The mallams are always present, and I have been told that they also are preaching to the people and using the substance of my addresses, adding their own tenets and trying to persuade the people to accept their creed. We are praying and fighting, and I personally feel as though I were engaged in a life-and-death struggle for the souls of these people. It is the same in each of the other villages. A 'life-and-death struggle.'

Mr. Ball's words refer to a point which should be carefully borne in mind, viz., that for the first time in their history the pagan districts are being overrun by Moslem traders; as Mr. Ball says, 'but for the protection afforded by the British Government, they would never have dared to go to the pagan tribes, embittered as they are in spirit by the persistent drain upon their population made by the incursions of Mohammedan slave-raiders in bygone days.' The protection of peaceful traders cannot be objected to by anyone, but, alas, there are some respects in which the Government seems to have departed from its professed principle of religious neutrality, and actually to favour Mohammedanism. Dr. W. R. S. Miller says that pagan recruits for the army and pagan freed slave children are circumcised; that little pagan boys and girls, saved from slavery, are handed over to the care of Moslem Emirs, with the probability of their becoming Moslems, and of some being members of Moslem harems; that the Government subscribes to the building and repairing of mosques; that Government officials attend Mohammedan festivals as representatives; and that as strong pagan tribes, who for generations successfully held out against the Mohammedan raiders, are reduced, they are brought The Government favours Mohammedanism.

under the rule of their former enemies.* In Southern Nigeria, also, the spread of Mohammedanism is unchecked. In the district lying east of Oka there are towns where Mohammedan quarters have been established, and 'all the subtle influences of the Moslem are being brought into play unchallenged' by Christianity, and although, so far as is known, no Ibo-speaking person has as yet embraced the religion of the false prophet, yet within the last two or three years a Mohammedan township has sprung up at Onitsha and is rapidly growing, and in the hinterland on the west of the Niger the traders of that faith are everywhere to be met with.†

The 'subtle influences of the Moslem.'

But while the facilities of communication and the enforcement of peace by the strong arm of the British Government tend to the spread of Mohammedanism, the same power is suppressing many of the worst cruelties of Heathenism. In some parts of the country, however, they are not yet quite extinct. Human sacrifices are still offered at times in the remoter districts, and although it has been made criminal to throw away twin children, yet the mothers too often evade the law by neglecting them to such an extent that they slowly starve to death.‡

Human sacrifices still offered.

Death of the Revs. I. A. Braithwaite and J. Boyle.

Two of the African clergy have been called to their rest. The Rev. I. A. Braithwaite, who was ordained in 1896, and latterly has worked in the Ijebu Country, passed away on March 24, 1909; and the Rev. J. Boyle, of the Niger Delta Pastorate, died almost suddenly from acute pneumonia on July 14, 1909, while on a visit to England in connexion with the Society's Exhibition, 'Africa and the East.' Educated at Fourah Bay College, Sierra Leone, Mr. Boyle was schoolmaster at Bonny from 1874 to 1881, when he was ordained by Bishop Crowther and stationed in that town. In 1889 he was placed in charge of St. Stephen's Cathedral, and in 1892 he joined the Niger Delta Pastorate.

Reinforcements.

The Mission has been reinforced by the Rev. Edward Thomas Pakenham, of Islington College, L.Th., Durham, who has been assigned to the Yoruba Mission; and Mr. John Crofton Fox, B.A., Trinity College, Cambridge, M.R.C.S., L.R.C.P. Dr. Fox is the son of the Hon. Clerical Secretary of the Society, and a brother of the Rev. G. T. Fox, of the Northern Nigeria Mission (to which Dr. Fox has been assigned), and of Mrs. Arthur Lankester and Miss E. F. Fox of the Punjab Mission. Mrs. W. H. Elwin, of the Japan Mission, is his half-sister. The Committee have accepted the resignations of the Rev. W. P. Low and Miss F. M. Dennis

The following Africans have been admitted to deacon's orders, and their names added to the list of native clergy connected with the C.M.S.: the Revs. James Adeneye Cole, B.A., L.Th., Durham, Isaac Emmanuel Akande, Alexander Babatunde Akinyele, L.Th., Durham, and Alphonso Cukwuma Onyeabo.

THE DIOCESAN SYNOD AND ITS DISTRICT COUNCILS.

THE fourth Session of the Diocesan Synod was held at Lagos in May, 1909. The attendance of delegates was better than at any previous session, and an excellent tone prevailed. The missionary meeting, which is a feature of the Synod week, was more successful than any other which has taken place at Lagos in recent years.

Lagos District Council and Missions.

The Lagos District Council, with which some 3,850 Christians are connected, is responsible for the work of the Missions in the Ijebu Country. At Igbokoto, in the neighbourhood of Ilaro, the labours of a Christian sawyer resulted in forty-two inquirers coming forward.

Abeokuta District Council.

The Abeokuta District Council set itself with vigour to the task of raising a sum of £2,000 for permanent premises for the Grammar School which was opened in 1908. Meetings were held to arouse the interest of the people, and each of the congregations devoted one day in a certain week to gathering stones for the building. The Y.W.C.A., which is worked by Miss C. L. Rankilor, has a membership of thirty-seven, but a good deal of difficulty was experienced in getting hold of the elder girls, who often leave the town at their most impressionable age. The Scripture Union makes steady progress; ten new branches were formed during the year and 238 fresh members enrolled.

Ibadan District Council.

From the township of Aremo, under the Ibadan District Council, advance 'numerically, financially, intellectually and spiritually' is reported. Forty-nine adults were baptized, some having to endure severe private persecution in consequence, and the Christians showed much zeal in visiting the farms, where a number of inquirers came forward as a result of their work. Seventeen persons were baptized in the Kudeti pastorate.

Niger Delta Pastorate.

Harvest Thanksgiving services are important occasions in the Niger Delta Pastorate. At St. Peter's, Okrika, they were held on January 16, 1910. It is estimated that 2,650 people, including eleven chiefs, were present at the morning service, and 2,800 at that in the afternoon. Most of the Church members are said to have been away from their homes at the time, but their absence was compensated for by the presence of many Heathen. The gifts amounted to £134, and £25 of that sum, on Archdeacon D. C. Crowther's suggestion, was forwarded to the C.M.S. as a token of gratitude to the Society for having sent the Gospel to the country.

I. YORUBA MISSION.

Evangelistic Work.

A CALL for further advance was the leading characteristic of the Yoruba Mission. Some was made, but yet more is urgently required. Advance was made by the occupation of Owo in the Ekiti Country, which lies to the east of the other stations in the Mission. Its occupation had been contemplated twelve months earlier, but the necessity for retrenchment prevented it, since no funds were available for the erection of a mission-house.* Through the appeals of some missionaries on furlough to private friends the needed money was obtained, and the Rev. and Mrs. H. F. Gane took up their residence at the town in December, 1908. The attendance at the Sunday services soon increased, and on Easter Sunday, 1909, fifteen adults were baptized.† Extension was represented also by the opening of a new out-station at Offa, in the Oshogbo district, a step towards the important Moslem town of Ilorin, where a leading Mohammedan has invited the Rev. A. W. Smith to take up his residence. Other out-stations were occupied in the Ode Ondo and Ilesa districts, notably at Ikoya, in the Ikale Country, where the king, who formerly favoured human sacrifices and persecuted the converts,‡ now welcomes Christian teachers 'with open arms and heart,' and among the Mahins who inhabit the Igbekun lake districts.

Occupation of Owo.

New out-stations opened.

Call to further advance.

But the advance made was small as compared with the advance which is urgently called for. In the Ekiti Country something akin to a mass movement towards Christianity is in progress. The old idol-houses are falling into ruins; place after place is asking for teachers; new churches are springing up everywhere. Archdeacon F. Melville Jones, who made a tour in the country in the autumn writes:—

New churches springing up everywhere.

> In the course of a day's journey we would sometimes pass through four or five villages and find in each of them a small church recently built, and as the news of our coming spread, a congregation assembled and we would meet perhaps half-a-dozen baptized converts, a dozen persons who could read the Bible, and possibly twenty or thirty who were learning to read. There is no teacher; one of their number acts as 'leader'; they have given up idolatry, they assemble for worship on Sundays, they teach each other to read, and they want to be Christians; but of the deeper meaning of Christianity, of holiness and purity of life and real love for Jesus, they have but little understanding. How can they have unless they be taught?
> At one place, called Ushi, a truly remarkable movement has taken place. I was called upon to dedicate a new church. It is a really fine large building. There were 760 persons present at the opening service; a good many of these were from the villages round. So great has been the movement towards Christianity that the idol house in the fetish grove in that part of the town has fallen down in decay, the worshippers of bygone days having forsaken

An idol-house falls into decay.

* The circumstances were detailed in the Annual Report, 1907–8, p. 32.

† The story of one of the converts was given in the C.M.S. Gazette, Sept., 1909, p. 269.

‡ Some converts who were brought before him had all their goods confiscated because they would not deny Christ. See Annual Report, 1905–6, p. 44.

their old shrine and built the church instead! Besides building the walls of the church with their own hands, the converts subscribed £33 to buy the timber and pay the carpenters for the necessary skilled labour, and all this without any outside help. Now who is the pastor of this large and growing congregation? There is no pastor! Who then is the catechist to look after their needs? There is no catechist! Perhaps then there is a well-trained Scripture reader? No! A young man of no education, who is a candidate for training as a Scripture-reader, is their 'leader.' The nearest native pastor is distant some three days' journey, and has an overwhelming number of out-stations to supervise, and will only be able to visit the place once or twice a year.

It is much the same in the Ikale Country, where two new churches are in building, and there are about 100 adherents, and in the Ilesa, Ijesa and Oshogbo districts; while for the country between Owo and Oshogbo the following details are given: 'A——, church being built; no teacher. B——, church and teacher. C——, church erected; no teacher; catechumens asking for baptism. D——, church erected; no teacher. E——, church and teacher; a large new church nearly finished. F——, church being built; no teacher; the king is sending his children to the leading Christian for instruction.' The openings referred to have been brought about in many cases by the action of small bands of Christians or even of individual Christians, who, leaving their homes for another part of the country, build little churches where they go and gather around them a number of Heathen, to whom they impart such instruction as they can. The motives of the non-Christians in their readiness to be taught are mixed, and it may be, as one missionary remarks, that 'to call oneself a Christian is fast becoming the fashion in the Yoruba Country.' But, however that may be, the facts remain that teachers are being asked for in large numbers, and that in the face of the rapid spread of Islam it is all-important that these men and women who are so ready to learn should be taught about Christ before they are influenced by the emissaries of Mohammedanism.

'To call oneself a Christian becoming the fashion.'

Adult baptisms were numerous at many stations. Besides those (and some others) already mentioned as having been received into the visible Church at Owo, 169 adults (seventy-five of them on Easter Day, 1909) were baptized in the Ilesa district, including eight youths, the firstfruits of Ogotun. The young men of that town in the course of their travels became convinced of the advantages of reading, and a Christian man from Ife, who happened to be trading there, 'did not hide his light under a bushel, but read his Bible to them.' They then asked him to teach them, offering to assist him in every possible way. He consented, and they learned with avidity. At length a catechist from another place visted them, and prepared some for baptism, with the result stated. The firstfruits were also gathered in at Siloko, where a native of a town beyond Sapele, in the Benin district, was baptized in the summer. About 150 others, most of them adults, were received into the visible Church in the Ode Ondo district, and twenty-four adults at Aiyesan and its out-stations, while a few were expected to be baptized at Ogbomoso at Christmas. Among the inquirers mentioned are the two Heathen, the cloth-weaver and his wife, who were in the African village at 'Africa and the East,' and who have declared their intention not to return to idolatry.

Baptisms.

Book-shops.

Valuable work is done by the Bookshop at Lagos with its branches at Abeokuta, Ibadan and Ijebu Ode. An edition of 5,000 copies of the Yoruba Bible was disposed of in a few months, and the receipts at Abeokuta exceeded those of 1908 by £100. The literature in the vernacular has been increased by the publication in Yoruba of Sweet Firstfruits, a Life of Jacob Fadipe and some Mohammedan tracts.*

Educational Work.

Training male agents.

Girls' Training School.

Eleven of the forty students in the Training College at Oyo left to take up posts as schoolmasters in the Mission, and nine of the members of the Training Class for Scripture-readers at Oshogbo, which was larger than ever before, completed their course. There is another training class for evangelists at Ode Ondo with eight members. At the Girls' Training School at Ibadan a spirit of worldliness and a love of dress are becoming increasing snares to the Christian girls, and the discipline of the home and the industrial work in which they are called to engage is not always to their taste. Notwithstanding these hindrances a great improvement was seen in many of the girls, and a former pupil is spoken of who originally entered the school as an 'absolutely untaught, unclothed, penniless little heathen child, practically alone in the world, who had been living by what she could get anywhere, amidst much sin.' Now she is married to a Scripture-reader; her home is 'clean, tidy, and well ordered, and the people living around her look up to her with great respect.' The school was full throughout the year; it will accommodate forty-five girls, and nearly that number of applications for admission had to be refused. Among the inmates were five Hausa girls, including Eve, whose story was narrated in last year's Annual Report,† and who, though not openly, has embraced Christianity. The Grammar School at Lagos celebrated its semi-centennial in December, 1909; among those present was Mrs. T. B. Macaulay, the widow of the African clergyman who was the first Principal of the institution, while the sermon at the Thanksgiving Service which was held was preached by Archdeacon D. C. Crowther, the only survivor of the five boys who attended when the school was first opened. The Girls' Seminary has eighteen boarders, besides nearly 100 day scholars. In the summer several of the girls were taken up-country to Ilaro, where the school supports a catechist who is working under the Lagos Church Missions, and their interest in the spread of the Gospel was greatly fostered by what they then saw.

Medical Work.

The visits of the out-patients at the Abeokuta Dispensary numbered over 12,000, and a few in-patients were received as well. One of the latter, a Fulani slave and a Mohammedan, professed to accept Christ as his Saviour. Regular visits were paid to the Leper Asylum, where one Mohammedan gave proof of a real change of heart.

Pastoral Work.

Some persecution befell the converts at certain out-stations in the Ode Ondo and Ilesa districts, but, being faithfully borne, tended to the furtherance of the Gospel. Many of the Christians in the Mission, as has already been indicated, were diligent in witnessing to others of their faith;* the number of Christian marriages increased; and at several places the gifts of the natives were large. Thus £23 was contributed by the adherents at the out-stations in the newly-occupied Owo district, and nearly £250—more than double the amount raised in 1906—was given to the funds of the Ondo Provisional Church Council, besides considerable sums raised by the people at Ondo, Ilesa, etc. for their own Church Missions.

Large gifts.

II. NIGER MISSION.

Evangelistic Work.

Opening up of the Ibo Country.

THE Ibo Country, which extends from the neighbourhood of the Binue River in Northern Nigeria to Bonny in the Delta, and from the Cross River in the east nearly to Benin in the west, is rapidly opening up. Only five or six years ago the whole of the country away from the Niger on both sides was a blank to Europeans and was known to very few of the natives at the river stations, and with the frequent occurrence of petty wars travelling was a matter of considerable risk; but now the country can be traversed in peace and safety, and the dawn of civilization is breaking. The changes which have taken and are taking place throw, incidentally, a tremendous responsibility upon the Church of Christ, for they are accompanied by a desire for instruction in Christianity which, probably, has not been paralleled in the past history of the Mission. In one or two regions, it is true, the prospect was overcast. Disaffection and hostility, which necessitated a punitive expedition, in the course of which the mission-house was destroyed, prevailed in the autumn at Ogwashi, a few miles from Asaba; and at another out-station the chief was antagonistic, and an outbreak of sickness led some of the inquirers to join the Heathen in making 'medicine' to drive it away. It appears possible, moreover, that a period of persecution and difficulty may be at hand. The General Report of the Niger Mission says :—

* See also C.M. Gleaner, Feb., 1910, p. 28.

Persecution anticipated.

The fear of the Government has to some extent been superseded by a recognition of the fact that the methods adopted by the Government in connexion with the establishment of Native Courts and the investment of head chiefs with power over persons and property never wielded by individual men in former times, leave a wide margin for the exercise of oppression and also for the rehabilitation of Heathenism under the protection of the Government. This state of affairs calls for serious thought and unceasing prayer.

But for the most part the story is one of unbounded opportunity. From all regions comes the cry for teachers. If the following instances are read with a map open it will be seen how widespread is the demand. From Patani, on the lower reaches of the Niger (which is in the Ijo and not the Ibo Country), notwithstanding the facts that the men frequently leave their homes for long periods, and that the women are the leaders in superstition, the Rev. H. Proctor writes: 'Wherever we go there is a cry for teachers'; and Mr. G. E. Reeks, who visited a number of towns where a missionary had never before been seen, says, 'The people in many places seemed ready to receive the Gospel, if only teachers were forthcoming,' and of another district observes: 'The people are willing and anxious to receive the Gospel.' From Ebu, some seventy miles to the north-east, the Rev. E. Dennis reports 'open doors and ready listeners to the message everywhere'; while concerning an itineration in the district between Ebu and Onitsha, the Rev. F. G. Payne says that in almost every town he was welcomed heartily, and that he was often asked to stay or else send a teacher. He adds :—

'Willing and anxious to receive the Gospel.'

Cannibals learn to pray.

Take one case, a town called Awo, which we were told was hostile and cannibal. For two or three days we tried in vain to find any one willing to show us the way there, and then, in answer to prayer, we met some Awo men in a market and they led us to their home. It is true of them, as of the people of almost all these towns, that they are cannibals, but they received us well; we spent the night there, and in the morning we had a great crowd listening eagerly. Before we left we taught some of them the short prayer which we try to teach in most places we visit, so that they may have something to take the place of their idol-worship: 'God our Father, have mercy on me, forgive my sin, show me Thy way, for Jesus' sake.' More than a month later I visited this place again for an hour or so and found several men who were able to repeat the gist of what we had taught them, and daily used this little prayer. This is but one of several cases among the twenty or thirty places we have visited in this neighbourhood.

Still proceeding northwards Oka is reached. From that station the Rev. C. Brown made a tour in the country lying to the north-east, and he reports, 'The people told me that for seven days' journey beyond them the Ibo language was spoken—a vast district, as far as I know, entirely unvisited by the Gospel.' And he goes on to say, 'The country is opening rapidly, and on all sides there is a call for teachers.' And lastly, the Rev. J. C. R. Wilson tells of a widespread desire for instruction in the district around Idumuje Ugboko, on the western side of the Niger. A call for teachers on all sides.

The mistake must not be made of supposing that the people are always actuated by a real desire to embrace Christianity when they beg that teachers should be sent to them. In some cases it is probable that they are influenced by hopes of gain, and in others by a desire to 'learn book' and so fit themselves for the new opportunities which civilization presents, and in others, again, by a wish to ingratiate themselves with the missionaries. In some cases advantage has been taken of the willingness of the people to receive instruction. A new station, which, however, has since been abandoned on account of the hostile attitude of the people, was opened at Ihala, about equidistant from Onitsha, Oka and Ebu, a place with a dark reputation. Mr. Payne, who took up his residence there, wrote in November :— A new station at a dark place.

> Although a human sacrifice was offered only a month ago and the head brought at night into the compound where we live, and although drunkenness is awfully prevalent, and although raiding and murder and slavery are not only names but terrible realities of daily occurrence, and although wealth is might, and might is right, both in and out of court—yet God is working in ways we can see, and I believe He is working even more in ways we cannot see. A small beginning has been made by means of a school, and I have found that any little medical or surgical help I can give affords plenty of opportunity for speaking about the Lord Jesus.

Another place which has been occupied (as an out-station) is Nobi, eighteen miles south-east of Onitsha, where the people put up a small room to serve as a school, and in nine months raised nearly £19 to pay for a teacher.* Moreover four new out-stations were opened in the Ebu district early in 1910. Unhappily the retirement of Miss F. M. Dennis has prevented the redemption of a promise made to the people of Emi, another town in that district, that women missionaries should be sent to live among them, though in reliance on that promise the natives have performed the (to them) formidable task of erecting a suitable dwelling for European ladies and providing other buildings necessary for the work. Out-stations opened.

The great desirability of taking advantage of the opportunities which now present themselves is emphasized by the success which has attended the Mission during the last decade. To give but two instances. The Rev. J. Spencer, the African pastor at Asaba, on the western bank of the Niger, speaks in his annual letter of Onitsha Olona, one of the out-stations in his district. Three or four years ago, he says, the communicants never numbered as many as a dozen; now there are always between sixty and seventy, and at Akwukwu, another out-station, a similar happy state of affairs Success of the Mission.

prevails. Again, Bishop Tugwell writes concerning Nnewi, in the Onitsha district :—

Opposition broken down.

This town was notorious some years ago for the wild character of its people and for their opposition to the Gospel ; the people were also cannibals. A few years ago, however, Miss Wilson visited the town, and settled in their midst, living in a little native hut, and by her love and teaching winning the confidence of the people and thus breaking down their opposition. The number of inquirers increased so rapidly that it was soon found necessary to place native evangelists at two or three centres in the town. To-day there are five churches in the town, built by the people, an evangelist being in charge of each congregation.

Baptisms.

The reports of the missionaries are occupied chiefly with a description of the openings by which they are confronted, but there is some mention of baptisms. The first baptism of an Ijo convert in his own country took place at Kaiyama ; at Ebu seven young men were received into the visible Church ; fifteen persons at Idumuje Ugboko ; and twelve women at Umunya. These women had been members of a training class, the equivalent of the station classes in China, in which domestic and Christian instruction is given to the wives of Christian men, who through press of household duties are not able to attend regularly the classes held by the native evangelists in their own towns. Since the class was established in 1905 more than seventy women have received at least three months special preparation in it, and their homes are found to be in striking contrast to those of non-Christians.

Young Women's Homes.

The Young Women's Homes at Obusi and Idumuje Ugboko are intended for unmarried girls who are Christians or inquirers. At Obusi the applications for admission were far more numerous than could be granted, but at Idumuje Ugboko the accommodation was not nearly full. Mr. Wilson gives his estimate of the reason for the lack of candidates at the latter station as follows :—

One of the causes appears to be that the girls are under a minimum of restraint at home and grow up independent and 'cheeky,' and the young men are unable to compel obedience from their fiancées if they decline to submit to the necessary restrictions. Another cause seems to be the rule that the girls' keep must be met by money payment or by a supply of yams, for some of the men are too selfish or too lazy to agree to this.

Several of the inmates of the home at Idumuje Ugboko, which has since been removed to Ani Ofu, two miles away, gave evidence of a real change of heart, and two were expected to be baptized in January, 1910.

Educational Work.

Training Institutions.

Eighteen men were in residence at the Training Institution at Oka, where the Rev. A. C. Onyeabo, whose ordination has been recorded,* was formerly a student ; about twelve of them were receiving a three years' course to fit them for work as school teachers, and the remainder were being prepared to act as evangelists.

* Page 37.

The number of inmates of the Girls' Training School at Umudi Oka increased, and seven of them received baptism. Besides these institutions there are a number of day-schools in the Mission with more than 2,000 pupils, considerably more than half of whom are unbaptized. Although this branch of the work does not lend itself to much description it is of great value, and the Rev. S. R. Smith, the Secretary of the Mission, characterizes it as 'very hopeful.'

Medical Work.

A large number of people availed themselves of the Medical Mission at Iyi Enu, but many of them failed to show gratitude, and demurred when asked to render any little service in connexion with the hospital. A few of the patients appeared to embrace the truth, and in the course of an itineration, Dr. A. E. Druitt met a former cataract patient who was witnessing brightly for Christ at his distant home.*

Pastoral Work.

Crowded congregations thronged the churches at some of the stations on special occasions, and the missionaries speak of an increase in the number of Christian marriages in one part of the Asaba district, of the loyalty of the converts during the troubles at Ogwashi,† of growing liberality at Idumuje Ugboko, and, above all, of the excellent service rendered by many of the native agents, who, Mr. Smith says, 'visit assiduously, and never seem to tire in the work of personally recommending the Lord they serve.' On the other hand there is a tendency among some of the people to 'make baptism the goal of their efforts,' and a few cases occurred in which suspensions were necessary because of breaches of the seventh commandment. But it must be remembered that the conditions of life in Southern Nigeria constitute a sore temptation to sins of the flesh. They also make the problem as to the future of the Christian boys and youths a pressing one. At Christmas more than fifty boys applied for positions as pupil teachers, but only half of them could be accepted. A few are able to enter the Industrial Mission at Onitsha, and a few more may get appointments in the Government Public Works Department, but the remainder are obliged either to give up all idea of doing any kind of skilled work, or else to seek posts under the Government at Burutu or Warri, where there is practically no Christian influence.

Baptism sometimes regarded as the goal.

Literary Work.

During the year under review Archdeacon T. J. Dennis saw through the press the 'Union Version' of the Ibo New Testament, and the first consignment reached the Mission in August. With the assistance of representatives of the United Free Church of Scotland Mission and the Niger Delta Pastorate, and of a helper from the Onitsha district, he has since completed a translation of the Old Testament to the end of the first Book of Samuel.

III. NORTHERN NIGERIA MISSION.

Death of a West Indian agent.

THE Society's staff in Northern Nigeria, which so far as European missionaries are concerned is smaller than it was three years ago, was diminished in 1909 by the illness and subsequent death of Mr. P. T. Gordon, a West Indian agent, who had laboured at Kutigi for two years with much acceptance, and had won for himself a place in the affections of the people.

Educational Work.

The Class for Pupil Teachers, which had been conducted by Mr. Gordon, was removed to Bida in August; it had fifteen members. The Watney Training Institution, also, which had five students, was transferred from Kpata to Lokoja. One of the young men, a Basa, was sent to take up work temporarily at Katsa. The number of pupils at the school at Lokoja grew until it exceeded 100, but it afterwards fell off owing to a decision that the children should not be taught English until they were able to read in their own language. The school at Bida dwindled down to a couple of boys, and at Panyam it was difficult to ensure anything like regular attendance.

Evangelistic Work.

Three Mohammedans baptized.

At Zaria, where the Rev. and Mrs. G. P. Bargery were alone for the greater part of the year, there was an 'open spirit of inquiry and a willingness to learn' about Christianity, wonderful for a purely Moslem town. Two men and a woman, the wife of Mallam Fati,* were baptized, and three others would have been but for various difficulties. One of those kept back was Mallam Fati's sister, the hindrance in her case, Mr. Bargery says, being that she is the second of her husband's two wives, and that thinking her position contrary to Christian law, in order to remove any possible impediment to her baptism, she 'divorced her husband in the native way.' A young mallam who for three years has been reading with Dr. Miller took his stand definitely on Christ's side, while others became inquirers; both these and the Christians were fearless in bearing their witness to their Lord.†

Occupation of Katsa.

In the districts where some of the people are Mohammedans and some pagans, a notable event was the occupation of Katsa, on the Niger, opposite Egga, a place which within the last ten or twelve years has grown from a village to a large town, and which has a station on the Baro-Kano railway, now under construction. It is only a mile and a quarter from Kipo Hill, where an African clergyman was stationed by Bishop Crowther from 1874–86. Mr. A. E. Ball, who took up his residence at Katsa in the spring of 1909, endeavoured in vain to start a school, but he was more successful in his dispensary work, and had an average of about fifteen patients every day the dispensary was open, some of them hailing from distant places. At Bida the missionaries are shut in by what the Rev. J. L. Macintyre terms a 'solid wall of opposition,' and it is almost impossible to induce the people to listen to the Gospel unless some attraction such as the lantern or the phonograph is offered them. Through the lack of English missionaries Mokwa and Kuta had to be left in the charge of inexperienced African workers; this was the more to be lamented seeing that the Gwaris around the latter station are characterized by a bitter hatred of Mohammedans, engendered by what they have suffered at the hands of slave raiders, which makes it important to give them the Gospel before their antagonism to Islam fades away. At Kpata and in the Basa Country generally there is little to show for the work which has been carried on for many years, and the old 'passive-resistance' spirit is still dominant. A bright account comes from Lokoja and Kabba. Through the continued liberality of the Christians from Sierra Leone and Lagos as well as of those native to the stations, the work there is carried on without expense to the Society, save for the salaries of the European missionaries. The Rev. F. H. Lacy writes :—

* Mallam Fati was referred to in the Annual Report, 1907–8, p. 49, and 1908–9, p. 47.

† A striking instance of brave confession of Christ before an Emir was given in Church Missionary Review, July, 1909, p. 397.

A 'solid wall of opposition.'

A 'passive-resistance' spirit.

In the Kabba district men come in from many villages to buy reading-books and Bibles, and tell of twenty and thirty men gathering together to learn to read under the instruction of one of their own members who has previously learnt elsewhere, and then hearing God's Word and seeking His blessing in prayer.

I used to wonder when I saw how the Mohammedans carried their religion about with them whether the Christian native would do the same: he does. We pray for him and we pray for those he teaches that the Holy Spirit may definitely ground the weak in the faith, and keep them along the straight line of truth where the instructed teacher is lacking. In Lokoja itself there is a very hopeful number of Yorubas meeting every night for night school and religious instruction, some seven of whom have already been baptized.

The Christian native carries his religion with him.

The Yorubas display a great thirst for knowledge; a large number of primers, Bibles and Prayer-books in their language were sold at the Lokoja bookshop, and there was also a run on some Arabic gospels which had been in stock for some time, fifty copies being sold in ten days.

Sale of Arabic gospels.

The Suras, who are reached by the Cambridge University Missionary Party from Panyam in the Bauchi Highlands, are entirely pagan, and find it hard to grasp the idea of a God Who takes an interest in individuals and is to be loved and served, so foreign is it to their conception of an unapproachable Supreme Being. Their confidence is gradually being won, however, and they listen attentively to what is said, but the missionaries experience a difficulty in teaching them owing to the fewness of words in their language to express abstract ideas of right and wrong. Some opposition was shown at Kabir, where work is carried on among the Angass tribe, and it was deemed expedient to withdraw the African agents from that place for a time, but the Rev. J. W. Lloyd and Dr. J. C. Fox have since taken up their abode at that station.*

Literary Work. A new translation into Nupé of parts of the Prayer-book was made by Mr. Ball, who also revised a translation of Old Testament stories in that language, made by the Rev. A. W. Banfield, of the Mennonite Brethren in Christ Mission at Shonga.

* Some notes on work in the Bauchi Highlands were printed in the C.M.S. Gazette, Oct., 1909, p. 305.

EAST AFRICA MISSIONS.

THE PAST HISTORY.

In 1844 Dr. Krapf, having lately been expelled from Abyssinia, established himself at Mombasa, where two years later he was joined by the Rev. John Rebmann, who opened the station at Kisulutini (Rabai) in 1846, and laboured on the coast for twenty-nine years. Their remarkable journeys into the interior led to all the subsequent geographical and missionary enterprise in East Africa. It was chiefly through the Society's efforts that the Parliamentary Committee of 1871 was obtained, which led to Sir Bartle Frere's Mission to Zanzibar in the following year. In 1874 the Rev. W. S. Price, formerly in charge of the Asylum for rescued slaves at Nasik, Western India, was sent out; some 200 African Christians from among the freed slaves who had been under his care were collected as the nucleus of an industrial colony; land was purchased for a settlement, which was named Frere Town, in honour of Sir Bartle Frere; and 500 rescued slaves were, in 1875, received from H.M. cruisers, and housed, fed, instructed, and led to work for their living. Stations were opened in the Taita Country in 1883; in the Chaga Country, at the base of the snow-capped mountain Kilima-Njaro, in 1885, whence the station was removed in 1892 to Taveta, within the British sphere of influence as fixed by treaty with Germany in 1886; at Jilore, in the Giriama Country, in 1890; at Kabete and Nairobi, in the Ukamba Province, in 1900 and 1906 respectively; and at Keradhimo (1904) and Kahuhia (1906), in the Kenia Province.

When in 1876 a mission party was sent up country to establish a Mission in Uganda, the route adopted was from Bagamoyo, on the coast opposite Zanzibar, through Ussagara, Ugogo and Unyamwezi; and intermediate stations between the East Coast and the southern shore of the Victoria Lake were established at Mpapua and Mamboya, both in the Ussagara hills, in 1876 and 1880. The Ussagara-Ugogo Mission was extended by the occupation of Berega and Mvumi in 1900; and Kongwa in 1904.

For these Missions a new bishopric was established in 1884, with 'Eastern Equatorial Africa' as the title of the See, and the Rev. J. Hannington was consecrated the first Bishop in that year. He was murdered in Busoga in October, 1885, by the orders of Mwanga, king of Uganda. Bishop Hannington's successor, the Rev. H. P. Parker, previously a C.M.S. missionary in North India, was consecrated in 1886, but his episcopal career also was of brief duration, for he died from fever in March, 1888. He was succeeded by the Right Rev. A. R. Tucker, who was consecrated in 1890. In 1897 the diocese was divided into two, the portion of the original diocese which fell within the Uganda Protectorate as then constituted forming the diocese of Uganda, and the remainder becoming the diocese of Mombasa. Bishop Tucker elected to retain the interior division, viz., the diocese of Uganda, under his own episcopal supervision, and in 1899 the Rev. W. G. Peel, formerly a C.M.S. missionary in South and Western India, was consecrated Bishop of Mombasa.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK.

The Society's work in East Africa has developed considerably since the formation of the diocese of Mombasa, and is now carried on in two distinct sections by the Bishop of Mombasa, fourteen European clergy, three doctors, nine other laymen, nineteen missionaries' wives (one of whom is a doctor), and twenty-one women missionaries. With these are associated three African clergy and 132 African Christian lay agents.

I. (a) In British East Africa the stations by the coast—Mombasa, Frere Town and Rabai, and in lesser degree Jilore—are of long standing. Here are the chief educational institutions of the Mission, viz., a Divinity School and a Boys' Hostel at Frere Town, and a Normal School and the Buxton High School for boys at Mombasa. Medical work is carried on at a hospital at Mzizima, on the island of Mombasa, and at several dispensaries. Much care and thought are expended on the pastoral care of the converts, many of whom are liberated slaves.

(b) Proceeding inland about a hundred miles there are stations at Sagalla and elsewhere in the Taita Country. Other stations have been opened of late years farther from the coast at Nairobi, the capital of British East Africa, and elsewhere in the Ukamba Province, and at Keradhimo, Kahuhia and other places around Mount Kenia. At all these the work is mainly evangelistic. There is a medical mission at Kahuhia.

II. In the German East Africa Mission, which is situated in German territory, elementary schools are prominent at Berega, Kongwa, Mvumi, Bugiri, and their out-stations. Medical work has long been maintained at Mamboya.

United Missionary Conference.

A CONFERENCE of the representatives of the various missionary societies working in East Africa was held at Nairobi from June 4 to 11, 1909, and was attended by forty-five missionaries, delegates from the C.M.S., the African Inland Mission, the Friends' Industrial Mission, the American Friends' Society, the Church of Scotland Mission, the Seventh Day Adventists, and the United Methodist Free Church Mission. The proceedings were characterized by a remarkable spirit of unity. One of the subjects discussed was that of a common Native Church for East Africa, and there was a general assent to the following propositions, viz., that in such a Church (1) the Bible should be accepted as the standard of belief, and that what is not contained therein, or cannot be proved thereby, should not be taught as necessary to salvation; (2) The Apostles' and Nicene Creeds should be accepted as an expression of the faith of the Church; (3) The two Sacraments should be duly administered; (4) There should be a rightly ordered and properly safeguarded ministry in the Church.*

Reinforcements.

The Mission has been reinforced by the Rev. Jesse Charles Green, London College of Divinity, Curate of St. George's, Tufnell Park, N., and formerly a member of the C.M. House staff; Miss Effie Emily Jackson, of the New South Wales Association; and Miss Agnes Lilian Thwaites, trained at The Olives, a daughter of the Rev. W. Thwaites, formerly of the Punjab Mission. The Committee have accepted the resignations of Misses V. K. Bestall and E. O. Thurlow, and Mr. J. A. Bailey has retired on the expiration of his agreement, having taken up work in Mombasa under the East Africa Industries, Limited.

I. BRITISH EAST AFRICA MISSION.

Literary Work.

THE Rev. H. K. Binns continued his work on a fresh translation of the Old Testament into Swahili as spoken in Mombasa, and an Old Testament catechism in that language was completed and sent to press. The revised Swahili (Mombasa) Prayer-book was published during the year, and met with a ready sale. Miss F. I. Deed made good progress in translating the Prayer-book into Kigiriama. In the interior a Translational Committee has been formed, with representatives from the three Societies working among the Kikuyu-speaking people, and under its auspices the Rev. H. Leakey has begun to translate the Epistles of St. John.

1. THE COAST DISTRICTS.

The Divinity School at Frere Town was closed during the year under review owing to the absence of the Rev. J. E. Hamshere on furlough for the greater part of it, but a few lads were under training at the Normal School at Mombasa. The Buxton High School in that town fails to attract very many African Mohammedans, and they form only twenty per cent. of the pupils; they are, indeed, far more fanatical and obstinate than the Indian Mohammedans, who are also found in large numbers in Mombasa; one of the former, Salimu by name, who has been in the school for six years, was baptized in 1909. The certificated teachers engaged in the elementary schools at Frere Town worked loyally and well, and have an excellent influence over the children, and the pupil-teachers showed a healthy spirit of emulation. Some of the monitresses were trained in kindergarten methods with success.

Buxton High School.

Baptism of a Mohammedan pupil.

There are two classes of native doctors in East Africa—those who make use of native medicines, herbs, etc., and possess a certain amount of surgical skill, and those who resort exclusively to incantations with a view to driving out the evil spirits to which, they believe, all diseases are due. But though the former class are really successful in working some cures, there is obviously abundant scope for the beneficent work of a qualified medical man, and the hospital at Mzizima, with its three branch dispensaries, attracted 376 in-patients and recorded some 52,000 visits of out-patients. Besides the religious teaching given to all the patients, special classes were conducted for 'readers,' both men and women, and one or two of them appeared to be in earnest in their search after truth.*

Medical Work.

Evangelistic work in Mombasa is on a smaller scale than a few years ago when, before the Buxton High School was opened, there were two married missionaries and five women missionaries, as compared with two unmarried missionaries during the latter half of 1909,† and efforts now are concentrated on influencing the up-country natives, who, in the ordinary course, drift into Mohammedanism. Preaching in Hindustani in the market-place was set on foot, and Miss E. Good, of Frere Town, visited some of the women of Mombasa, but had little to cheer her. An itineration, the expenses of which were defrayed by the African congregation at the Cathedral, was made in the Digo Country, on the mainland south of Mombasa, by two mission agents accompanied by a couple of private Christians. The Rev. J. E. Hamshere also itinerated from

* Details of the medical work were given in Mercy and Truth, Jan., 1910, pp. 12–15.

† On the other hand the Government has plenty of applications for service. The Rev. D. A. L. Hooper was told by a Government officer that 1,700 men have written down their names as desirous of appointments as police officers in the country, and over 3,000 as assistant district commissioners.

Frere Town, and found the reader placed among the Chonyi tribe to be working faithfully and earnestly. At Vitengeni, in the Rabai district, there was a good deal of unrest, which affected the work; but at Kaloleni the congregations were larger, and in the Giriama Country, containing 70,000 people, there was much anxiety to learn about Christ. The chief man of one district begged for a teacher, and at Malindi, an Arab town on the coast, about a day's march from Jilore, the Mohammedans were willing to listen to the Scriptures. When a Christian from Kaloleni visited the town some of the old men invited him and a companion to read the gospels to them on the verandah of their mosque—an opportunity of which they were prompt to avail themselves.

Baptisms.

Six persons, who, as children, were brought to the missionaries during the famine of 1899, were baptized at Frere Town, and others were desirous of receiving that rite, but it was thought best to defer them. Among other inquirers were a Kikuyu lad at Frere Town and twenty young fellows who were admitted to the catechumenate in the Cathedral at Mombasa on one Sunday. Three of these belonged to Mombasa, and the remainder came from all parts of the country—two were Wataveta, one a Mvusha from Kilima Njaro, four were Wanyamwezi from nearer the Victoria Nyanza, two were Wakavirondo, one a Mkikuyu, three Wateita, one a Mkamba, and two hailed from the banks of the River Juba. At Kaloleni two young men and their wives were enrolled as catechumens, another man was admitted as an inquirer, and some old men appeared to be breaking loose from Heathenism, notably one who pulled down the memorial posts erected outside his home to the memory and for the worship of the spirits of his deceased relatives.

Pastoral Work.

Although there were a good many cases of backsliding among the Christians at Rabai,* and the things of the world bulk too largely in the estimation of the converts in the Mission, yet there is much to give rise to thankfulness. Mr. Binns, who has laboured in the Mission since 1875, says :—

A marvellous change.

> The change in the country is marvellous. The difference in the attitude of the whole people towards the religion of Jesus Christ, the beautiful growth in grace in many, the happy Christian homes, the sight of Christian mothers taking all their little ones to morning prayers in church every day—very early, too, at six o'clock—the hearing voices raised in prayer in our prayer-meeting, the meeting with so many at the Lord's Table—these things cause me to thank God and take courage. It is interesting also to note that some of our best spiritual agents are the sons of some of those first Giriama Christians of whom Mr. Price wrote in 1875, and whom I was privileged to visit in 1876.

Many of the agents of their own initiative agreed among themselves to discountenance the native dances, which are so prolific a source of evil,* and testimony was borne to the good work of the African agents at Jilore, who have but little supervision, by a Government officer on survey duty; he wrote to the Rev. D. A. L. Hooper saying that he was generally opposed to missionary work, but he was so impressed by what he had seen at Jilore that he would like to contribute Rs.20 to the funds of the Mission. Among the private Christians, too, there were cases of simple faith and of steadfastness.

2. THE INTERIOR.

Educational Work.

The little school at Chawia, in the Wusi district, where the chief, Mwandango by name, is one of the most regular pupils, did not grow as much as had been expected, and special difficulty was met with in inducing the girls to attend. The missionaries at Keradhimo had the same experience as concerns the girls, but the school as a whole increased greatly and outgrew the accommodation of the place in which it was held. At Nairobi, too, the number of boys desiring to be taught was so great that it became a problem how to deal with them, from the point of view both of space and also of staff. The result of the teaching in the day-school and the night-school at that station was seen in sixty-two boys placing themselves under definite instruction with a view to baptism, twenty-three of whom were admitted to the catechumenate. Seven or eight of these were expected to be baptized early in 1910. They showed a good deal of liberality in their contributions, and, besides their gifts in the church offertories, they raised Rs.175 towards building a school—a considerable sum, seeing that the great majority of them only earn about ten shillings a month.

Sixty-two mission school-boys become inquirers.

Medical Work.

The hospital at Kahuhia had on the average about eighteen in-patients, and some twenty-five visits of out-patients were recorded daily. Dispensary work is carried on also at Sagalla, where it has brought many within the sound of the Gospel; at Kabete, where the people regard the Saviour as only for those who can read, and where one day each woman who had come for treatment, on being questioned separately as to whether she had sin in her heart, returned a reply in a strong negative; and at Keradhimo, where the majority of the patients, though indifferent to what was said, were less irreverent than before during the dispensary services.

No sin in their hearts!

Evangelistic Work.

The Sunday services at Sagalla and at its out-stations were well attended by the Heathen as well as the Christians, and a number of the former expressed themselves as desirous for baptism, while at Kasegau, a place in the district which could only occasionally be visited, the African agent was received with open arms, and as many as 500 persons sometimes assembled for a service. The classes, however, were affected during the latter half of 1909 by the scarcity of food, which caused the young men and even the boys at school to wander far afield. Thirteen adults were baptized at Mbale. Among them was a man who, having been a polygamist, had to put away his second wife; unhappily she became embittered against Christianity in consequence, discontinued her attendance at services and classes, and ultimately was married to an out-and-out Heathen. The work in that district was very uphill. The people seemed to give themselves up to heathen practices; dances were held in every direction; there was so much excitement that it was almost impossible to find any willing to listen to the Gospel; and strong opposition was experienced, chiefly at the hands of the women. Miss A. M. Barnett writes:—

* See Annual Report, 1908–9, p. 53.

Wives favour polygamy.

As polygamy is the general custom of the Wadabida, the wives fear their husbands being influenced by the Gospel, knowing that if they wish for baptism, all the wives but one must be put away. Therefore they use all their influence to hinder the children from coming to school, and any who come forward for instruction—any who are real inquirers have to endure a good deal from their heathen relatives, who persistently do all they can to cause them to return to their heathen ways, and, alas! in several cases they succeed.

A young lad who has been my house-boy for some time was thus led astray. We thought him really in earnest and desirous of following Christ. He had voluntarily been teaching a cripple boy, and was being prepared for baptism. Yet that boy, absolutely unknown to us, had been pestered by his relatives, and now he has gone back, entering into the worst heathen ceremonies, even taking an oath that he will never come to be taught again.*

Catechumens preaching to others.

At Wusi, although the number of baptized Christians is but small, there are many earnest inquirers, who are characterized by a love of prayer, by the custom of making thankofferings, and by zeal in evangelizing their neighbours. Twelve of the men in a catechumen's class, most of whom but a short time since were worshipping idols and the skulls of their ancestors, go round on Sunday afternoons to the various districts, dressed in their blankets, to gather the people together and tell them about the Saviour. The women are harder to reach than the men, but in the villages they are more ready to be taught than they were.

Baptisms at Kabete.

Distinct progress was discernible in the Ukamba Province, farther inland. At Nairobi not only was there encouragement, as already indicated, in connexion with the school, but the services attracted an increasing number of the Heathen, and a class for women was held with a certain measure of success. These women are very degraded, for there is 'nothing to draw them to Nairobi but sin,' nevertheless several of them asked for baptism. Moreover, in the Kabete district, notwithstanding a great deal of opposition from the chiefs and elders of the district, a woman, her son, and two grandchildren were baptized in one village; in another the mother of two Christian men; and in a third a man and his wife, of whom the Rev. H. Leakey writes:—

* See C.M. Gleaner, March, 1910, p. 42.

How well do I remember my first meeting with this man in February, 1902! He was in full dance dress. His head and shoulders were smothered in rancid grease mixed with bright-red clay dust. His hair was twisted in a most fantastic way, with a long cigar-shaped lock in front. In his hand was a spear only two inches short of seven feet, and his face was most repugnant. What would have been my feelings, I wonder, if I had been told then that that man was to be one of the first of the then adults to be brought into the visible Church of Christ by baptism? Yet to-day he is quite one of the most consistent Christians we have, and his face has become a really pleasing one to look at. His wife, a catechumen, who had been persuaded entirely by himself some two years previously to listen to our message, received baptism on her death-bed a few weeks before he himself was baptized.

With respect to work among girls, the difficulty of which is spoken of by many of the missionaries in East Africa, Mr. Leakey adds:—

The difficulty of work among girls.

In every country where women are looked upon merely as the chattels of the men, to be bought and sold for so many cows or sheep, the missionary is bound in the early days of his work to find great difficulty in getting a real hold over the girls unless he buy them, the thought of which he cannot for a moment entertain. A little over three years ago we could not see the smallest likelihood of giving any regular definite instruction to young girls. By employing them to cultivate we could perhaps arrange to give them a little teaching; but all they seemed to care about were the few pice they earned and to get back to their homes of vice. To-day, I rejoice to say, my wife has a school of thirteen regular scholars who come of their own free will, and every one we believe wishes never to return to Heathenism. As we never allow a girl to come to us without the consent of her parent or lawful guardian this is the more remarkable, and can only be taken as a direct answer to prayer. Already two of these are married and four are engaged to some of our Christian young men, and so the great problem of how to provide suitable wives for our lads as they grow up is solving itself, or rather our God, Whose work we are doing, is solving it for us.*

Sakini transferred to the A.I.M.

Four youths, after a prolonged instruction, asked for baptism at Sakini, in the Mukaa district, where the work has since been handed over to the African Inland Mission.

Hostile elders.

The elders at Keradhimo, in the Kenia Province, like those in the Kabete district, were hostile to Christianity, and did their best to prevent people from having recourse to the missionaries, but some of the inquirers persevered in their attendance at the services, and several lads bravely endured the persecution to which they were subjected by their relatives and friends with a view to inducing them to submit to vile heathen ceremonies. From Kahuhia comes the report, sadly different from that which was received last year,† that 'apparently there has not been a single case of spiritual desire, the natives having no wish other than for pice.'

* The C.M. Gleaner, May, 1910, p. 68, contained a retrospect of the work at Kabete.

II. GERMAN EAST AFRICA MISSION.

Evangelistic Work.

Only one ordained man in the German East Africa Mission.

ALTHOUGH in 1909 the work in German East Africa laboured under the disadvantage of having a smaller English staff than usual —the Rev. T. B. R. Westgate was the only ordained man in the Mission during the year—yet it steadily gained ground. It is true that the masses are as yet uninfluenced by the Gospel, and that vast numbers of the people have never heard of the Saviour; it is true that progress is hindered by the intense conservatism of the people and by their system of government under numerous petty chiefs; * it is true that the people move about so frequently that it is hard to get them for a regular course of instruction; it is true, again, that around Mamboya there has been a considerable growth of Mohammedanism—a growth which is likely to be fostered by the decision of the German Government to introduce Swahili teachers, who are Mohammedans, for their schools. Bishop Peel explains the situation as follows :—

Swahilis proposed as teachers in Government schools.

> It is the aim of the German officers that we (the C.M.S.) should give the sons and nephews of the chiefs and sub-chiefs a good elementary education. To enable us to do so they are ready to compel such youths to reside in certain centres for the purpose. In the vacations they would return to their villages. The radius fixed for such a centre might be a long one, so that a larger area of country would be covered.
>
> The Germans, seeing that we have our hands full, and cannot at present, without stopping necessary evangelistic work at places open to us, undertake a school for the regular daily routine of teaching, are, they say, obliged to start one for themselves, and to man it with Swahili teachers from the Coast towns, where education has already made considerable strides.

The Mission 'increasing its grip.'

Notwithstanding all these disadvantages, the 'Mission is gradually increasing its grip on the younger generation.' The natives in the villages possess a sense of hospitality which leads them to make the missionaries welcome and listen to the message which they bring,† copies of the Scriptures are sold as fast as they can be got up from the coast, and the belief in witchcraft and charms is giving way. At Mvumi the services are well attended, and the church, which will hold 500 persons, is often crowded; several persons were there admitted to the catechumenate, and seven confessed Christ in baptism. Ten new catechumens were received at Kongwa, and one adult was baptized; at Berega there were six adult baptisms, all of young men; while at Mamboya several persons were received into the visible

Baptisms.

* The C.M. Gleaner, Aug., 1909, p. 119, contained a description of the Wagogo and of some of the difficulties connected with work among them.

† The missionaries are already deriving much help in their work from the railway, which is open for traffic as far as Mpapua. When the line is completed none of the C.M.S. stations will be more than thirty miles from it, while many of them will be within a comparatively short distance.

Church. Mrs. K. Pickthall writes as follows of four of the new converts at the last-named station :—

One, named Stefano, is a young man who has been 'reading' for some years. I have seen him herding the goats, carrying his Testament in his hand; and he has influenced his father and mother to seek the teaching, besides many others in his village. Indeed, he and his friend, Paolo, who was baptized at the same time, have held a daily evening prayer-meeting for all those who would come to it, and when I hear across the valley a horn being blown I know it is to call the people of their village to evening prayers. We saw in Stefano's Testament the words written, 'Woe is me if I preach not the Gospel.' I ought to mention two women who were baptized—Maryamu and Peninnah—because in both cases they have preceded their husbands in obtaining baptism, and they, and the women generally, stand in need of the prayers of our friends at home. Maryamu was a treat to teach; she knew her Bible so well, and always remembered the references given her.

Educational Work.

Classes for teachers are held at Kongwa and Berega, and at each station four senior readers passed their examination and are now preparing for the grade of junior catechist. At Berega, moreover, four probationary agents advanced to the grade of junior reader, while two helpers were promoted to the status of probationary agent. The out-schools * continued their useful work. Two new ones were opened at Camwali and Handali, the people being stimulated in their desire for education by a visit from the German district officer, who intimated that if they did not attend the Mission for instruction he would compel their sons to go to a school at Mpapua. Two of those baptized at Berega were the fruit of the out-school work, as were the majority of the inquirers at Mvumi.†

Medical Work.

An epidemic of smallpox afforded Dr. E. J. Baxter exceptional opportunities for preaching the Gospel, for he was asked to assist the German doctor in vaccinating the natives, and in his journeys, extending over August, September and October, he went to many places where no work is carried on, as well as to others which are visited by native teachers from time to time, but where comparatively few of the people care to listen to their preaching. He was cheered by the continued interest in the Bible shown by the old Arab mentioned in last year's Annual Report; ‡ when the latter was about to depart for Muscat he asked whether he might take with him the Arabic Bible which had been lent to him, saying that many of his friends in Muscat would read it. The old man's nephew, too, who visited the dispensary for treatment during the year, was anxious to possess a copy of the Arabic New Testament, and, since there was no copy available, gladly accepted Barth's Bible Stories in that language. Through the medical work one of the first of the converts at Mamboya, a Mohammedan who afterwards went back to Islam, was reclaimed.

Pastoral Work. One or two other lapsed Christians at Mamboya visited the missionaries, asking to be received back into the Church, and at Kissokwe a backslider was reclaimed by being presented with a photograph of the late Rev. A. N. Wood, whom he had known, while a native teacher was speaking a few words of exhortation. A few of the converts in the Mission showed anxiety to win others for Christ, and Bishop Peel's efforts to call forth daily contributions for God's work * met with such success that three new centres, one in Ussagara and two in Ugogo, have been opened with the aid of the Fund thus supplied.

UGANDA MISSION.

THE PAST HISTORY.

The original impetus to the exploration of Africa from the East Coast was given by the Society's missionaries, Krapf, Rebmann and Erhardt. They communicated to Europe the first report of the Lake system of the interior, which led to the journeys of Burton, Speke and Grant, and, incidentally, to those of Stanley. In November, 1875, in consequence of information sent home by the last-named of the readiness of Mtesa, king of Uganda, to receive Christian teachers, and of two anonymous donations of £5,000 each being offered in order that a missionary expedition might be sent to his dominions, the Society resolved, in dependence upon God, to organize a Mission in Uganda, and a well-equipped party accordingly proceeded to East Africa in the spring of 1876. The first leader, Lieut. G. Shergold Smith, R.N., and Mr. T. O'Neill were killed, and Dr. J. Smith also died before reaching the country. The Mission, however, maintained its position in Uganda from July, 1877, and that notwithstanding tremendous difficulties. A French Roman Catholic Mission arrived in 1879. King Mtesa, who died in 1884, was succeeded by Mwanga, and the new king was led to regard the missionaries with suspicion. He caused Bishop Hannington, while in Busoga, en route for Uganda from the coast, to be murdered on October 31, 1885. The storm reached its climax in the arrest of many Native Christians, several of whom were tortured and burnt to death. In August, 1888, king Mwanga was driven from the throne. In October, through the hostility of the Mohammedan Arabs, the English and French missionaries were expelled from the country, and a period of revolution and bloodshed ensued. In October, 1889, exactly a year from the missionaries' expulsion, Mwanga re-entered Uganda and regained his throne through the help of his Christian subjects, and the missionaries returned with him. Alexander Mackay, however, one of the pioneer missionaries, died in 1890 while at the south end of the Lake. In the same year Mwanga accepted a British flag from the representatives of the Imperial British East Africa Company. Sir Gerald Portal reached Uganda, as Queen's Commissioner, in March, 1893, and in April, 1894, the British Government declared the country a British Protectorate. In the summer of 1897 Mwanga fled from the capital, and his infant son Chwa, baptized by the name of David, was proclaimed king. In September of the same year a serious mutiny of the Sudanese troops broke out; several European officers were seized and murdered; and one of the missionaries, Mr. G. L. Pilkington, who in response to the appeal of the authorities was accompanying the Government forces as interpreter, lost his life. The country of Busoga first had a resident missionary in 1891; Toro was occupied in 1896; Bunyoro in 1899; Kavirondo in 1900; Ankole in 1901; and the Teso Country in 1908. Nassa, in Usukuma, at the south end of the Lake, was occupied in 1888.

In 1897 the diocese of Eastern Equatorial Africa was subdivided, the Uganda Protectorate, according to the boundaries then obtaining (which have since been altered), being formed into the diocese of Uganda, which Bishop Tucker elected to retain, relinquishing the remainder to form the diocese of Mombasa.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK.

I. All the counties in the kingdom of Uganda, which is co-terminous with the Province of that name, have been occupied by British missionaries or Baganda clergy.

There are Training Classes for men and women teachers and a Normal Class at Mengo, the native capital, and Training Classes at many other stations. The schools include the King's School, an intermediate boys' school, at Budo, and a High School at Mengo, both of them for the sons of chiefs and for others who can pay the fees; a Girls' Boarding-school at Gayaza; and a considerable number of elementary schools. At Mengo there is also a Hospital, to which several dispensaries are affiliated.

II. In the Western Province, which comprises the kingdoms of Ankole and Toro, and in the kingdom of Bunyoro, in the Northern Province, the training of teachers is prosecuted at Kabarole and Hoima, but other educational work is merely elementary. There is a hospital at Kabarole.

III. In Busoga work is of long standing; but in Bukedi, which, like Busoga, is in the Eastern Province, and in Kavirondo, which belongs to the diocese of Uganda, although it is now in the East Africa Protectorate, the work is still in its infancy. At several stations there are hostels for the sons of chiefs.

The pastoral care of the 69,000 Christians connected with the Society in the Mission is shared by European missionaries and Baganda and Batoro clergy. All the native clergy and lay teachers, who now number thirty-one and 2,046 respectively, have always been entirely supported by the contributions of the people, but recently a number of evangelists have been sent by the Bishop to the Bukedi Country, who are supported from money voted to the diocese by the Committee who distributed the unallotted portion of the Pan-Anglican Thankoffering.

Throughout the Mission evangelistic work is largely in the hands of native teachers superintended by European missionaries.

The staff of the Mission consists, besides Bishop Tucker, of thirty-eight European clergy, four doctors, nine other laymen, thirty-four missionaries' wives, and twenty-seven other women missionaries. Eight of the ladies are trained nurses.

A Constitution adopted for the Uganda Church.

An event of great importance took place at Mengo in April, 1909. Some forty clergy and 250 lay delegates met in Synod to adopt a Constitution for the Uganda Church, including not only the congregations in the Uganda kingdom, but those also in Bunyoro, Toro, Ankole and Busoga. There have been established by the Constitution a Synod, a Diocesan Council,* District Councils, Parochial Councils, a Central Women's Conference, District Women's Conferences, a Tribunal of Appeal and a Tribunal of Reference, the electors being the communicants, male and female, of whom there are 18,000. Working in connexion with the Diocesan Council and reporting to it are a Board of Missions, a Board of Education, a Board of Theological Faculty, and a Board of Church Estates, while in connexion with the Church there are recognized the offices of Reader, Teacher and Woman teacher. The European missionaries, with the hearty concurrence of the Parent Committee, have placed themselves under the provisions of the Church Constitution, but local Missionary Committees, appointed by the Parent Committee, have been formed to deal with all questions which affect only C.M.S. missionaries as such. Much local as well as central organization will thus be established. For example, the Budu district has been divided up into twelve sub-districts, each of which is to have its own Council and be responsible for the four or five churches in the sub-district, and these Councils will work under the District Council and refer questions to it. One or two of the missionaries refer to the District Women's Conferences which, according to the Constitution, were held in the autumn. At Mengo the women discussed the questions brought before them with freedom, and one gave a capital address on temperance; but in Budu

* Among those nominated to serve on the Diocesan Council was the Katikiro, Sir Apolo Kagwa. Some objection was raised to his nomination on the ground that he would not have time to attend the meetings, and also that it would be said that he favoured the cause of the Protestants in the secular courts. Appeal was at length made to the Katikiro himself, and he simply replied, 'I will do what my religion commands me to do.' See C.M. Gleaner, April, 1910, p. 57.

they were very shy, and the missionary was obliged to introduce every subject, and had constantly to be making suggestions.

One of the duties of the Board of Missions will be to obtain evangelists for the regions beyond Uganda—Bukedi, Ankole, Kavirondo, etc.—where they are greatly needed, and so far as possible to provide for their support. With this latter end in view a monthly missionary collection has been started at the central station of each district, but since Bishop Tucker does not consider that the Church in Uganda is equal to raising all the money that will be required, its resources are being supplemented partly from some generous special gifts received at home and partly from money voted to the diocese by the Committee responsible for the distribution of the unallotted portion of the Pan-Anglican Thankoffering.

Evangelists for regions beyond Uganda.

It may be that the missionary spirit, if it can be aroused, will serve as a corrective to the worldliness which appears to be threatening the Church, if it has not already done more than threaten it. With the opening up of the country by the railway, by road construction and motor transport, etc., and with the spread of education, has come the race for wealth and ease which constitutes a severer test of genuineness and steadfastness than did the times of persecution. The accounts of the pastoral work which are given in the several sections of this chapter show how real is the peril of the Church at the present time, and sound an urgent call for prayer in behalf of those who bear the name of Christ in this Mission in Central Africa.

The Church threatened by worldliness.

There are two things which should accompany such prayer. One is sympathy. The temptations to which the Native Christians are exposed are many and great, especially the temptations to sins of the flesh. The lives of some of the Europeans in the country do not set a good example, though from many of the officials and others the missionaries receive cordial assistance,* while on every hand the converts are surrounded by evil.† The Rev. H. B. Lewin says that among the Heathen 'the absence of all morality is most marked,' and the Revs. H. W. and H. T. C. Weatherhead write :—

Immorality of the country.

> It is a wonder to us out here that any boys at all keep straight after the early training in every abomination that they receive in their homes. People have sometimes tried to draw comparisons between the African and the average public school boy in England in this respect, often to the latter's disadvantage. We would rather ally ourselves with a well-known writer on South African natives, who says that the most reprobate character in England is but an infant in vice by the side of the quite young African boy or girl.

Besides sympathy, thanksgiving is undoubtedly called for. While there may be and are many defects in the Christians, and backsliding is sadly frequent, their lives on the whole are vastly better than those of the Heathen among whom they live. Little is now written about Heathenism in the kingdom of Uganda, for it has so often been described, but reports from the outlying stations of the Mission which have been occupied of late years illustrate the character of the non-Christians. Two cases of Heathenism in practice in Ankole are described as follows by the Rev. W. E. Owen. He writes :—

† The Christians are still greatly in the minority, for the population of the kingdom of Uganda is estimated at 650,000, and of the whole of the Protectorate at 3,520,000.

Heathenism in practice.

The child of one of our Christians, whose wife was unbaptized, died. The mother thought her mother-in-law had caused the death of the babe, and proceeded to 'take vengeance' according to heathen custom. This allows vengeance to be taken on any of the family or tribe of the guilty one. So she caught an innocent child of her mother-in-law's house and cruelly put her to death. Native law would have held the woman guiltless. The second was the case of a man falsely accused of stealing. He was tied up to a post with raw hide thongs bound round the arms and chest. He was brought to my dispensary with both his arms in a frightful state of gangrene, the thongs having bitten cruelly into his arms and chest. He died the same night. Yet there are to be found in England those who blame us for disturbing the Heathen in their innocence!

A native parliament opposes witch-doctors.

There, in Ankole, the witch-doctors have long held sway, but now that Christianity has entered, the native parliament has instituted a campaign against them and has confiscated their charms and stock-in-trade. These were collected at certain centres, and comprised among other things cow-horns, filled with native medicine, which were supposed to be inhabited by spirits and to give answers when addressed by the witch-doctors; head-dresses and rattles used in incantations; the skins of small animals, with the heads left on, sewn up to form bags for charms; two dogs' skulls, etc. In Bukedi the people live in fear of evil spirits. If any one is ill it is customary to sacrifice goats, fowls or even cattle, to please the spirits and keep them out of the houses, and special abodes are built for them, in which it is hoped they will stay instead of entering the homes of the people and causing sickness. The grossest immorality, according to Dr. A. R. Cook, in many cases forms part of their religion, and cannibalism, even of those who have died of such a loathsome disease as smallpox, prevails; while in Busoga, to use Archdeacon T. R. Buckley's terse phrase, 'Heathenism spells cruelty.' *

Literary Work.

The literary work accomplished during the year has been: in Luganda, the preparation of four tracts on the duties and responsibilities of the Christian life and a revision of the translation of the Pilgrim's Progress by the Rev. F. Rowling; a translation from the Swahili of Part II. of Robertson's shortened Church History by the Rev. H. W. Duta; and the issue of a native journal called Ebifa mu Buganda (The News of Buganda) by the pupils of the King's School, Budo. The first Luganda reading-book has been translated into Lusoga; Mr. W. Holden translated the Acts of the Apostles and parts of the Prayer-book into Lugisu, and revised the existing translation of the four Gospels in that language; the Rev. A. L. Kitching revised the first reading-sheet and translated part of St. Mark's Gospel, as well as a few hymns, into Ateso; Archdeacon J. J. Willis and the Rev. A. E. Pleydell rendered St. Mark's Gospel into D'Oluwo, the language spoken in Kavirondo; and the Rev. A. J. Leech translated 1 Corinthians into Kisukuma, and rewrote and revised an English-Kisukuma vocabulary.

Death of the Rev. T. B. Johnson,

A great loss has been suffered by the Mission through the death of the Rev. T. B. Johnson, which occurred at Hoima, on June 20, 1909. Mr. Johnson was educated at the City of London School and Trinity College, Cambridge, and graduated with honours. Ordained in 1893, he was accepted as a C.M.S. missionary eight years later, and sailed for Uganda. His first term of work was in Toro, where he endeared himself to all. He came home on furlough in October, 1906, and on his return in 1908 he went to Bunyoro.*

and Mrs. W. E. Owen.

Mrs. W. E. Owen, who was married in 1907, died at West Kirby on February 4, 1910.

Reinforcements.

The following recruits have been assigned to the Uganda Mission: Mr. Ernest Neville Cook, M.B., B.S., London, a nephew of Drs. A. R. and J. H. Cook; Mr. William Smith Syson, who has been accepted on special agreement, and Mrs. Syson; and Miss Catherine Janet Smyth, trained at The Willows. Miss Constance Watney, a trained nurse, has been accepted as an honorary missionary in local connexion in the Mission. The names of the Revs. Kezikiya Kagwa and Henry Luganda, who have been ordained by Bishop Tucker, have been added to the list of native clergy. The Committee have accepted the resignations of the Rev. J. Roscoe (after twenty-six years' service) and Miss A. H. Robinson.

I. UGANDA PROVINCE.

Educational Work.

Theological Hall.

THE Theological Hall at Mengo has four departments—one for candidates for ordination, which had seven members during the year under review, one of whom was ordained at Advent; another for candidates for the Bishop's licence as lay readers; a third for men studying for the Diocesan Council's second certificate; and a fourth for the men desirous of obtaining its first certificate. Preparation for the first certificate is also carried on at district centres, as at Kikoma and Mukono in 1909, but where that is impossible the men are sent to Mengo to join the class drawn from the immediate neighbourhood of the capital. Fourteen of the twenty lads at the Normal School at Mengo finished their course, which in view of the need of higher education will in future last for two years in the first instance, to be followed by a couple of years' work in a country school and another year at the Normal School, at the close of which a senior certificate will be awarded. Certain additions were made to the buildings of the King's School at Budo, where the number of boys rose to thirty-seven. A special feature of the school is the manual training given in the Mackay Memorial. Eight youths left at the end of the year, four going to help in mission-schools, one having a trial in an important Government office, two entering other Government offices, and one taking up service under a chief in Busoga. Another boy had to leave because he had contracted sleeping-sickness. He was the firstfruits from Luba's village, and gave promise of being a suitable candidate for ordination. When he heard of the nature of his malady he expressed his desire to devote the remainder of his strength to teaching his own people, and accordingly went to Iganga. Each week of 1909 on the average saw a new boy admitted to the High School at Mengo, which numbered among its pupils a boy from one of the Nilotic tribes, one from Bukedi, an Indian, a Persian, an English lad and, for a few months, a Boer. The two sons of the Prime Minister of Ankole returned to their home, having finished their education, and two other boys were sent to Ng'ora, in the Teso country, to act as schoolmasters and assist in starting a school for chiefs' sons similar to the High School. An interesting event of the year was the discovery that one of the teachers, who had been brought to Mengo twenty years before as a slave, and had received seven years' training as a teacher, is a royal prince of Bunyoro; he elected to return to his own country, where, by virtue of his rank and his history, not to mention his education, he will, it is hoped, have a great influence for good.* The school had many visitors, including Mr. Roosevelt, the ex-President of the United States. In response to speeches from the boys and a gift of a portfolio containing specimens of their work, he delivered an address, in the course of which he dwelt on the responsibilities resting upon them, and said :—

King's School.

High School.

Mr. Roosevelt's address.

There is in the Bible a text which I think many of you may know, 'To whom much has been given, from him much will be expected.' That we apply to every white man, the Governor, the Bishop, and every man who counts at all. If he has a place of prominence we expect him to show himself worthy of it. Now in the same way a chief, who has that advantage, must be just and merciful, he must speak the truth, he must be kind and good to those who are poor and weak. And each boy here, every boy who has been at the school, when he goes back into the life of his people, should feel that he owes it to the school, that he owes it to those who have taught him here, that he owes it to his pastors, his advisers and teachers in spiritual things, to live with such truth and honesty and industry that people looking at him shall say, 'That is what Christianity has done for him.' The great service each of you can do to the school, and each of you can do to Christianity, is to live so that people shall respect Christianity for what you as a Christian do in your everyday life afterwards.

A new building for the Boys' Day-school at Mengo, erected largely at the expense of the chiefs, was opened by Mr. T. F. Victor Buxton (a member of the Parent Committee) in October, in the presence of King Daudi, the Katikiro and a number of Government officials. The tone of the Girls' Boarding-school at Gayaza noticeably improved, and there was evidence of a spiritual work in the hearts of many of the girls, one of whom, a daughter of Luba, Bishop Hannington's murderer, was baptized during the year. Another girl, Suzana, a daughter of Sir Apolo Kagwa, was married to Yosiya Nadiope, the first chief of Busoga. The parents failed to send their children to school regularly at Rakai, in Koki; but the attendance at Ndeje was well maintained, several of the children were baptized, others were admitted to the catechumenate, and eight were sent out to take charge of small schools.

Medical Work.

A new block, added to the Mengo Hospital to be used as isolation wards, was opened on December 21 by Mr. Roosevelt, whose name they are to bear. In declaring the building opened he said :—

I do not want to flatter you, but at the same time I do want to speak truthfully, and it may seem as though I was flattering, but I am not. I do so immensely admire the work that is being done here. I have the keenest sympathy with the spread of the British Empire, and I have that sympathy because and so long as the spread of that rule means benefit to the people over whom it goes. And you people here are rendering the greatest possible service that can be rendered to your country and your Mission when you make the dominion of that country and the flying of its flag synonymous with the extension of all that is highest in what we call civilization to a people who have been left behind hitherto in the race of life. I have the very strongest feeling as to the good that is being done by the medical missionary. There must be some visible fruit in the life and work of the man who preaches if his preaching is going to have a very great effect upon those to whom he preaches. That visible fruit can be shown in many different ways, and one of the most efficient ways of showing it is by just such work as is being done in connexion with this building.*

Arrangements for more effective spiritual work among the patients were made by the appointment of two native teachers to labour among the men and women respectively. One boy, who died a few months later, was baptized; a woman, who when questioned during her visit to the dispensary as to Who God is, was found never to have heard of Him, declared before her death, which took place in the hospital, that she accepted Christ as her Saviour; a Hindu, one of the in-patients, seemed 'almost persuaded'; and a young German scientist, who had travelled all the way from Abyssinia to the hospital, before passing peacefully away, remarked, 'I have found my God in hospital.' A good deal of help was given to the medical work by the wives of Government officials at Entebbe, who held a weekly working party for its benefit, as well as by other Europeans. Dr. A. R. Cook made a two months' itineration in the Bukedi and Teso Countries, and Dr. J. H. Cook visited Nassa, and on both tours there were many opportunities of relieving suffering and of preaching the Gospel.* Work was duly carried on at the affiliated dispensaries at Gayaza, Mukono and Ndeje, and a new dispensary was opened at Kikise, which was visited daily by about 100 out-patients.

'I have found my God in hospital.'

Evangelistic Work.

Although a large number of baptisms is again reported, the returns from Mengo and some other stations are smaller than in 1908. The reason for this, as already intimated, is that a reaction has set in, and the Baganda are too much occupied with making and spending money to give as much time as in some past years to the things which concern their peace. In the country districts, where the attractions of civilization are less conspicuous, the number of converts was larger than in the previous year. Among those lately baptized has been the mother of the Rev. Silasi Aliwonya. Silasi is really a Muziba, but as a child was stolen from his home by Baganda warriors. About four years ago he came across his mother, whom he took to live with him at Rakai. There he patiently and lovingly taught her, and at her baptism he was one of the sponsors. The orders of the Government that all the huts within two miles of the lake in British Kiziba (Silasi's native district) should be destroyed, as being exposed to the dangers of sleeping-sickness,† were modified and the depopulation limited to one mile. About half the huts were accordingly left standing, and when the Rev. H. A. Brewer visited the district he was cheered by the number of young men who, in spite of many hindrances, were meeting week by week for instruction. In the Nakanyonyi district also prospects are bright, and, speaking generally, the missionaries when itinerating were warmly welcomed. In this work they are exposed to considerable danger; one missionary mentions that during the year he had two merciful escapes from lions and three from deadly snakes. Sunday-school work was developed at several stations with good results.

Pastoral Work.

Greater care and accuracy on the part of the Baganda teachers in drawing up the statistical returns account for some of the decrease here and there observable in the number of baptized Christians, but it has also, alas! to be recognized that there were a good many declensions from the faith. Some persons abandoned Christianity for Mohammedanism because the latter religion makes small demands on purity of life; others forsook Christ because they were anxious to contract marriage with non-Christians. The Rev. C. J. A. Burden mentions a sad case which came under his notice at Rakai. He writes:—

> A relative of the late king of Koki, who used to do voluntary teaching, but who had been away some time, came to see me and tell me that she wished to leave Christianity altogether. She confessed that her heart and love had become quite cold and that she wished to return to Heathenism in order that she might marry a heathen Muima, one of the Ankole tribes. Our Muganda pastor was with me at the time, and we did our best to show her the awfulness of deliberately turning her back upon God, His love and salvation, and returning to Heathenism. We had prayer with her, and besought her to consider the matter more carefully, and pointed out that she was deliberately sinning against the Holy Ghost. She said, 'I know what I am doing; I will come back to God later on, when I have had enough of Heathenism.'

A number of falls, even of some who were leaders in the Church, occurred through immorality; light views with regard to sin are often held and lead to much evil, both moral and physical; and intemperance, especially in Koki, is sadly prevalent. Moreover the contributions of the rank and file of the Christians are but small, and in other respects a poor account is given of many of them. One missionary refers to 'increasing indifference to Christian duty' and to the 'growing immorality' which he implies exists among the converts, and he adds that when examining the candidates for baptism and confirmation he finds 'how very little is taught or understood of the vital truths of the Faith.' Another writes, 'As one looks round one hopes that the tide of spiritual life has reached its lowest ebb . . . but here and there we find true devotion, true life.' A third reports many sad falls, but adds that immorality is worse among the Heathen. A fourth, in a very dark report, speaks of those who have been baptized and confirmed as unwilling to attend any classes for Bible teaching, and says, 'They have got what they regard as their certificates of salvation; what else, they ask, can be required of them?' Two others mention little concerning the Christians save the increasing difficulty of raising funds for the work, a fact which is dwelt upon by yet another, who, however, is able to speak of the attendance at the women's Bible-classes as good. An eighth reports the spread of intemperance, and a ninth, writing of visits to one of the districts under his supervision, says, 'The dark and disappointing side of the picture was constantly before one.' Most of the workers, however, are able to speak also of some encouragements. One says that the various women's classes are 'thoroughly appreciated by those who attend them,' and that the average number at the general Bible-classes has been well kept up. Of the Rev. S. Aliwonya, who has already been mentioned, and who is engaged in uphill work at Rakai, Mr. Brewer says, 'He has always toiled on with an earnestness and prayerfulness of spirit that are beyond praise,' and Mr. Burden speaks of the same man as 'often an inspiration to me,' and 'undoubtedly a true man of God'; while of the Rev. S. Alimanya, one of the youngest of the Baganda clergymen, the Rev. A. B. Lloyd says that he is a 'man full of earnestness and zeal in the work for his Master.'* There were signs of revival in the district under Mr. Alimanya's charge, and in parts of the Kikoma district the work was 'flourishing'; when Bishop Tucker visited that station for the purpose of holding a confirmation the people were so keen that many went to the church at 2 A.M., though the service was not to begin until six hours later.

II. WESTERN AND NORTHERN PROVINCES.

Pastoral Work.

THE missionaries engaged in the work in the Western and Northern Provinces of the Uganda Protectorate, like their brethren in the Uganda Province, give a chequered account of the condition of the Native Church. A cheering event in Ankole was the coming forward of a good many of the Christians as teachers—twelve young men and one woman at one of the out-stations, and five out of the twenty-eight communicants at another. At a third place the teacher employed refused a chieftainship rather than give up his work, albeit the remuneration which the teachers receive is but small, and in many cases only amounts to eight shillings a year, a sum barely sufficient to provide clothing. In Toro, also, many of the teachers, in number exceeding 100, who are sent forth and maintained by the Toro Church, were faithful and earnest, and persevered in their work in spite of the small pay which was given them.† There was, however, much backsliding. The Rev. G. R. Blackledge says that even the Christian Batoro show a great tendency to trust in heathen charms, incantations and divinations, and adds: 'One of the obstacles to the progress of the Church of Christ in this country is the nominal profession of Christianity by the chiefs and rulers of the people. When they see their chiefs having the form of godliness but denying the power thereof, one effect is to make them despise the Faith so loosely and lightly held.' Miss M. T. Baker writes in much the same terms. 'There seems,' she declares, 'so little conviction of sin, and consequently very little repentance, and so little knowledge of God's love that "love one another" is an empty command'; and she proceeds to speak of the immorality among young women and the difficulty of keeping in touch with baptized girls when they begin to grow up. The Rev. H. T. Wright, of Butiti, also in Toro, makes little reference to the character of the converts beyond saying that a few cases of backsliding through strong drink occurred, and he is able to add that on the other hand some abstinence pledges were taken and requests were made for building plots near the Church, so that the Christians might escape from heathen influences. Concerning Bunyoro the Rev. A. B. Lloyd reports that some of the little band of Christians 'have turned aside, while others have their faces set towards the dawn'; few of the chiefs, he says, are faithful nowadays, but in their place 'we have a fine band of young men of no standing in the country, whose utility is very great, for they will become the teachers of the future.' The king of Bunyoro, too, sets a good example, and the late Rev. T. B. Johnson spoke of him as a 'great strength to the work.' * Classes of various descriptions, including missionary meetings, were conducted for the women converts, while at Kabarole in Toro many of them were taught pillow-lace work, and others, including some children, received instruction in cotton-carding, spinning and weaving. In January, 1910, Bishop Tucker confirmed 465 candidates in the Western Province.

Good example set by a Christian king.

Seventy-two adults were baptized in Ankole, notwithstanding 'much indifference and hardness among the Heathen,' and many of the people were most anxious to receive instruction. Two old women are instanced, very stout and quite unaccustomed to walking, who trudged sixty miles over a hilly and difficult road so as to be taught with a view to baptism, and it is said, 'One forgets almost to mention such incidents—they are so common.' Adult baptisms in Toro numbered 300. In the Kabarole district Heathenism has a great hold on the people, but in the district worked from Butiti there was steady growth at many places, notwithstanding an undercurrent of opposition, and numerous requests for teachers were received. Visits were paid to several of the district churches in Bunyoro by the women missionaries, who sometimes went unannounced and so had the advantage of seeing the ordinary work of the teachers, 'without the crowds that are generally gathered together to see the "European."' Ninety-eight adults received baptism at Hoima. Among those received into the visible Church during the year, though not in the Mission, was Kabarega, the ex-king of Bunyoro, who was baptized by the Bishop of Mauritius in June.†

A new ward was added to the hospital at Kabarole for the reception of people suffering from severe ulcers. A service was conducted in each ward both night and morning, and in the afternoon classes were taken by native teachers. The Hoima dispensary was open three days a week. Some of the patients were most grateful for what was done for them, and the husband of one, after her recovery, asked for a special opportunity of returning thanks to God, and at the service which was accordingly held in the church he, his wife, their six children and some other relatives were present, and thankofferings of the value of more than Rs. 50 were made.*

A service of thanksgiving.

Educational Work.

Training classes for teachers are held at Mbarara and Kabarole. As the attendance at the school at the former station had fallen very low in the summer, Esther, the queen, together with the Katikiro's wife and other Christian women were invited to the mission-house to pray that an improvement might take place, and from that time the number of pupils increased. At Hoima, likewise, the attendance improved, but Miss G. M. Flint writes sadly that she cannot see that any child is 'really keen on trying to serve God,' and that the scholars have "no ambition and no perseverance and no idea of doing what they do not like because it is right.'

III. EASTERN PROVINCE.

Evangelistic Work.

THE Eastern Province of the Uganda Protectorate is divided into two districts, Busoga and Bukedi. Missionary work has been carried on in the former for nearly twenty years, but owing to the opposition of the old heathen chiefs and the indolence and apathy of the natives, caused by hemp-smoking and other evils, there has not been such rapid progress as in the Uganda Province. There is some reason, however, to anticipate that a change in this respect will be witnessed before long. Archdeacon T. R. Buckley writes :—

Christians appointed as chiefs in Busoga.

> The old chiefs are being succeeded by men who are Christians, and will not offer opposition to the teaching of their people ; and measures are being taken to stamp out the evil of hemp-smoking, so that the future for Busoga seems full of hope. A greater interest is taken in the education of the young; and at all our stations in Busoga there are schools at which the sons of chiefs are being educated, and day-schools which have large attendances, and the young Christian chiefs are desirous that their sisters should be educated.

Baptisms.

The reports from the various stations in Busoga bear out this hopeful estimate. Thirty adults were baptized in the Iganga district, where the famine of 1908 has made the people more friendly towards the missionaries and has taught them something of the power of prayer, and where the work among women and girls is specially encouraging ; at Kumbya, although but few of the chiefs respond to the teaching, owing to the hold which polygamy and spirit-worship have upon them, or will allow their women to learn to read, yet sixty adults received baptism; ten adults were baptized at Jinja; and in the Kamuli district many applications for teachers were received, and six Mohammedans were among those received into the visible Church.

* See C.M.S. Gazette, April, 1910, p. 111 ; Mercy and Truth, ibid., p. 114, for an account of a medical itineration to Edward Lake.

Bukedi, where the population is far denser than in the Uganda Province, has only been occupied within the last decade, but there, too, the outlook is bright. At Nabumale, the oldest of the stations, more men were seen at the services, and some of them, it is said, observed Sunday on principle; while the attendance of the girls at classes improved, from sixty to eighty sometimes being present. The year witnessed the baptism of the first two Bagisu girls to be admitted into the visible Church; they had gone through a long probation, during which they resisted all attempts to force them into heathen marriages and were in consequence driven from their homes. Again, in the Mbale district, the chiefs were begging for teachers, and at one place they even built a school and bought 100 reading-sheets in the belief that one would be forthcoming, a belief which has not as yet been justified. The work among the women in that district is very promising, and fifty adults were baptized in 1909. At Ng'ora, in the Teso Country, which was occupied in 1908, much time had to be spent in building operations, but an increasing number of people put themselves under instruction, the attendance at the services rose to about one hundred daily, and seven adults received baptism.*

First-fruits among Bagisu girls.

The work in Bukedi is of such recent date that the Native Christians, in the strict meaning of the term, are but few, but there are a certain number of Baganda converts in the country, and many of these, it is said, are leading very inconsistent lives. In Busoga there was a marked falling off in the congregations in the Iganga district, and in another part of the country immorality was rife within the Church; but on the other hand greater earnestness was shown during the services, many Christians advanced to a deeper spiritual life, and more zeal to win others was witnessed among them.

Pastoral Work.

About a dozen lads were in training as teachers at Kamuli, where the schools have 500 names on the rolls, but the average attendance does not exceed two-fifths of that number. At each of the other stations in the Eastern Province there is a boarding-school of primitive character for sons of chiefs, that at Jinja having an excellent Musoga teacher who has been trained at the King's School, Budo, and is highly spoken of for his piety and efficiency. These schools are valuable not only for the Christian teaching which is given in them, but also because they inculcate habits of industry, and enforce the lesson that even for chiefs there is nothing derogatory in honest manual labour. They are not carried on without difficulty. Mr. W. Holden writes about the school at Nabumale :—

Difficulty in keeping boys at school.

Some of the bigger boys were wishful to continue their drinking habits, which to the Bagisu are no disgrace, but this could not be allowed. Apparently, however, there is no such rule at a place for boys some distance away, and accordingly the drinkers went there. An outbreak of small-pox in the neighbourhood, a case of plague close by, and then the seizure of one of the boys with a slight epileptic fit during prayers in church, was sufficient to cause a panic, and all of them left without so much as saying good-bye. This running away is no new thing. With about one exception, all the pupils and Christian boys connected with the place have suddenly disappeared at various stages of their career. The rule is to throw their clothes either into the compound or through a window into the house and bolt, and there is no catching them.

Medical Work.

Dispensary work is carried on at several places, and at Iganga and Nabumale provision is made for about sixteen in-patients. At the former station people often arrive who have been rescued from leopards and hyænas, twenty such cases being received in six months. The medical work, in which at Iganga much help is rendered by the doctors at the sleeping-sickness camp in Busu who are most kind in visiting the station to perform operations, proved itself effective in overcoming prejudice and winning the confidence of the people.*

IV. KAVIRONDO.

Character of the Kavirondo.

THE Rev. J. J. Willis, who has been appointed Archdeacon of Kavirondo, gives an interesting account of the character of the people. He says that while actually they are most degraded, he believes that potentially they are capable of great things. Although they 'put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter,' thinking that milk is not good until it has turned sour, and so on, and also put 'darkness for light and light for darkness,' yet they are by no means even in their natural state wholly bad or contemptible. He writes :—

Judged by our standard of morals they are grossly immoral, living without privacy and without shame, brought up from childhood in an atmosphere of which those living in a Christian environment can form no conception. But, judged by their own code, they are not immoral, but the reverse. No marriage is allowed within prohibited degrees, which include all members of the same 'family,' descendants of the same man; thus cousins may not marry. Fidelity to marriage is the rule, not the exception; an unfaithful wife is not allowed to assist at her husband's funeral, and is publicly and finally disgraced. In time of sickness, as plague or small-pox, the sick are not neglected; though practically all desert the stricken village, one at least of the relatives will remain to nurse the sick. In time of war, women and unarmed men are safe; at all times the rights of widows, orphans, travellers, the aged—that is, of the more helpless classes—are respected. The reason is, doubtless, fear of the spirits of the departed taking vengeance, but the effect is salutary. The Kavirondo are keenly sensitive to ridicule, have a strong love for home, respect for old people, and love, especially for mothers; they are naturally, for a heathen people, tender-hearted, and never, in speaking of the sufferings of Christ, or showing pictures of the Crucifixion, have I seen (as one sees elsewhere) anything but looks of pity and indignation on their faces. They are not naturally cruel, they have a sturdy independence and individuality, though they are not, like the Nandi, a fighting race. They have much in them that is good.

In their contact with the higher civilization of other races they are so far shaping remarkably well. Most of the settlers in British East Africa have Kavirondo boys and speak well of them. A large part of the labour supply is drawn from Kavirondo. On the Lake steamers the boys waiting at table are from this country. In Uganda the police are, by preference, being recruited from here. At Kisumu the Kavirondo porters have ousted the Wanyamwezi from the south end of the Lake in the work of unlading ships. At Nairobi, in the C.M.S. school, where some dozen races are represented, more than half the total number of pupils are Kavirondo. So that it may fairly be said that these people are destined to exert an influence on the whole Colony, and have already proved themselves worth winning.

Educational Work.

The plan of operations has been to create at Maseno, which is seventeen miles north-west of Port Florence (or Kisumu), the Victoria Nyanza terminus of the Uganda railway, a school for sons of chiefs, representative of the whole country, and through that to influence all Kavirondo. The number of boys in the school fell off towards the end of 1909, because of some prejudice against the Mission on the ground of its interference with long-established customs. Forty-three of the older lads were admitted to the catechumenate during the year, as were also twenty-three other persons, including ten women.

Evangelistic Work.

From Maseno the work has extended to Kisumu, where a number of the interpreters and messengers employed in Government offices and in the native police force, having taught themselves to read, appealed to Archdeacon Willis for help. Four of the senior boys in the boarding-school at Maseno were sent for a week at a time to teach them, and early in 1910 the Rev. F. H. Wright went to the town with a view to taking up his abode there.

V. USUKUMA.

Work at Nassa handed over to another Society.

GREAT difficulty has always been experienced in providing an adequate staff for the work in Usukuma, and the many pressing claims for evangelists in the outlying parts of the Uganda Protectorate made it clear in 1909 that the problem was likely to become more acute in the future. The Committee accordingly resolved to hand over its work at Nassa to the African Inland Mission, a Society with a constitution like that of the China Inland Mission. The transfer was accomplished in June, 1909, but the Rev. A. J. Leech stayed on for a few weeks to introduce the new missionaries to the work. The station was visited early in the year by Bishop Tucker and Dr. J. H. Cook, and three weeks later nine men started on the long pilgrimage to Mengo in order to be operated on. In every case a complete recovery was made, and all but two of the patients on their return visited the missionaries to express their gratitude. Three of them afterwards became readers, the preliminary step to entering the catechumenate. A brother of the present king, together with his wife and children, a nephew of the late king, and a sub-chief were baptized before the C.M.S. missionaries left.

MOHAMMEDAN LANDS.

The practical working of Islam.

ONE of the great problems which confront the Parliament of Constantinople is, to use Lord Curzon's words, that of 'reconciling ideas of liberty and equality to the framework of a venerable and very tenacious creed.' The character of that creed may be deduced from its practical working. 'Islam,' says Dr. W. R. S. Miller, who for twelve years has been working among Mohammedans, 'has retarded, polluted, destroyed the manhood and corrupted the purer instincts of every nation it has touched; it has blasted womanhood; it has destroyed the innocence of childhood.' 'It massacres Christian Churches, oppresses Christian minorities, proscribes Christian books, legally executes Christian converts, and prays weekly throughout its mosques that "the wives and children of the infidel Christian may be left widows and fatherless, and his property fall into the hands of the true believer."' * The indictment brought by Dr. Miller against Islam received forcible confirmation during 1909 in the massacres in Cilicia. Tortures and insults were devised to increase the agony of those who were murdered. 'Women were compelled to watch while their husbands and children were killed before their eyes; groups were told off and marched to some convenient place, where, instead of being shot, as they entreated, they were mercilessly hacked to death. Mothers with newborn babies were dragged from their hiding-places and life beaten out of them. The women and girls who were saved from death were reserved for a worse fate. Everywhere there was an orgy of hate and lust, with hardly a hand lifted to stay it.' † It appears that those who were responsible for these barbarities intended a more wholesale destruction of Christians than was carried out, for it has been stated that in several of the cities of Palestine orders to massacre the Christians were actually received just before the deposition of the late Sultan, but were withheld by the military governors.

Moral insensibility.

There are other counts against Islam besides those already mentioned. One of its saddest features is the state of moral insensibility to which it gives rise; 'sin is in large measure only another name for ceremonial defilement.' Again, superstition is rampant, as is shown in the remedies adopted in cases of sickness. Miss F. M. Sells tells of a man who was brought to the Old Cairo hospital suffering from a painful swelling in his knee, which prevented him from sleeping. The first night he asked that drums might be brought with which to drive away the evil spirit, and when informed that no such things were kept he refused aid and was shortly removed by his friends.* Another great evil is the facility with which a wife can be divorced. Miss H. Adeney, of Old Cairo, wrote in December, 1909 :—

Facilities for divorce.

A sad thing has happened at our Moslem neighbour's house. About a year ago we ladies were invited to a grand wedding feast there, and saw the young bride decked out in state and surrounded by admiring friends. Half our street was canopied over and arranged with seats and chandeliers for the accommodation of gentlemen guests, and there was much music from a noisy band. Now the young wife is turned out of the house with her tiny baby of only about a fortnight old, because there has been a great quarrel about garments which it is the custom to present to the young mother. The father-in-law refused to spend his money, and now the wife is divorced and the son of the house will soon be married to some one else—with probably the same sort of fate before her sooner or later. The other women of the house only commented on the affair by shrugging their shoulders and repeating, 'It is her fate.'

God regarded as 'easy-going.'

The Mohammedans of the Eastern Sudan are said also to regard God as 'easy-going.' Of this phase of their spiritual outlook, and of their fatalism, Dr. E. Lloyd, of Omdurman, writes :—

Tell them the parable of the Prodigal Son and nothing to them seems more natural than that the father should not trouble to make a fuss about his son's shortcomings. He was glad to have him back and let bygones be bygones. So it is a problem how to apply the lesson of the parable, say to a man who is accustomed to urge as his excuse for beer-drinking (which is prohibited by the Moslem religion) that 'God is gracious.' The same quality in the Almighty, from their point of view, makes false swearing by His Name or on the Koran a fairly safe proceeding. Far different is the case of a man who swears by Sheikh Hoogly, a saint buried in Khartoum North some centuries ago. There is nothing gracious or easy-going about the Sheikh; break your oath sworn by him and he will haunt your dreams or blight your crops. Of the deep vein of fatalism in the Sudanese character one sees little in the dispensary. The man who argues 'I have a disease in my eyes; if God wills, I shall recover; if God has ordained otherwise, I shall become blind' is not likely to trouble a doctor often.

Fatalism.

A boy was seen preparing his bed in a spot much favoured by scorpions. On being remonstrated with he seriously replied, 'If God wishes me to be stung by a scorpion to-night I shall be stung wherever I sleep, so one place is as good as another to make my bed in.'

Under the circumstances it is hardly surprising that the new Turkish Constitution, with its proclamation of religious liberty, has failed to alter very materially the conditions under which missionary work is carried on in Palestine. The general verdict of the missionaries in that land seems to be that there is not much difference in the relations between the Christians and Mohammedans. While the former, not unnaturally, are still timorous and distrustful, to a large number of the Moslems the idea of religious liberty is galling in the extreme. They have always been accustomed to act on the Koranic injunction that Jews and Christians are to be 'subjected to abasement,' and they do not welcome a change which deposes them from the position of proud exclusiveness which they have been wont to occupy. A C.M.S. missionary says:—

> The immediate effect of the Constitution was an outbreak of lawlessness; robberies with violence became common throughout the country, and many of the hospitals were filled with the wounded. The arm of the law was paralyzed by the suddenness and unexpectedness of the enactment; confusion and disorder reigned supreme. While all deplored the corruption which stalked through the land, no one anticipated a change of this nature; in fact, to the majority it was incredible. The predominant thought in the minds of all classes was that reform had become an impossibility, and it is an astounding fact that since the inauguration of the Constitution bribery and corruption have been more common than under the old régime. The bright hopes to which it gave rise in those who had for long suffered and groaned under religious and social disabilities have been shattered.
> The social and political atmosphere at the present time is charged with suspicion, mistrust and intrigue. A strong undercurrent of ill-will exists, running counter to the Constitution. Outwardly things go on the same as before; there are no indications of Jews or Christians exercising the liberty which has been granted them.

Confiscation of Christian controversial books in Palestine.

Here and there, however, there were some signs of a changed position of affairs. Copies of the New Testament placed over the beds in a mission-hospital were read more freely than before, and even books bearing on the controversy between Christianity and Islam were in some request, but the latter were not always easy to obtain, for in spite of the ostensible liberty of the Press packages of such books were stopped and confiscated at Acca and Jaffa.* In Jerusalem it was much easier than before to get into touch with the people, and Moslems, Jews and Christians fraternized in a way previously unknown. There was also a remarkable instance of united effort in educational matters. A number of the people, both Christians and Mohammedans, combined to open a non-sectarian day-school. Secular subjects are taught from Monday to Friday, Saturday being reserved for religious instruction, which is given to the pupils by teachers sent by the religious bodies to which they belong. Sunday, not Friday, is the weekly holiday, and holidays are given on both Christian and Moslem feasts.

A non-sectarian day-school opened.

Baptisms in Mohammedan lands.

It remains to mention in this chapter, but, for obvious reasons, without giving any clue to the places at which they occurred, one or two incidents of the year under review which indicate that work among Mohammedans is by no means hopeless. In one town a child was baptized at her father's request when she went home for the holidays; in another two women, brought to the knowledge of Christ at some evangelistic meetings, were received into the visible Church; and in a third a couple of men openly confessed Christ in baptism. A good many inquirers, some of them apparently deeply in earnest, are reported—a man, who has suffered for his connexion with the missionaries, and his wife; an opium-smoker, who one day was led to believe that the Lord Jesus was able to deliver him from the habit, and putting his trust in Him, was given the victory, although he discontinued the medicine which he was taking to work a cure; a third man, who was recognized by the Mohammedans as practically a Christian, seeing that when he died some of them remarked to another convert, 'Your brother is dead'; another man, closely related to prominent Moslems of his town, who confessed that it was only the fear of death and persecution which prevented him from requesting baptism; three women at another station; a 'veritable Nicodemus,' who visited a missionary in secret to learn more about the way of salvation; a boy, who, asking for baptism, was informed that he must first tell his father, and when the latter was furious, said, 'I cannot help believing in Jesus Christ,' and whose father some time later asked him to read the Bible aloud, and eventually himself went to see the missionary for his own sake; a boy, some of the girls and a teacher in mission-schools; three patients in a mission-hospital, where a number of copies of the New Testament and other Scripture portions are sold; a young man who pretended illness, so as to have an excuse for visiting another hospital and learning more of the teaching which has already led his cousin to become a Christian in everything but name; and another man who, after several weeks in hospital, said that reading the Bible had changed the whole course of his life, and whose friends testified to the change, saying, 'He does not swear now.' In this connexion may be mentioned also a remarkable instance of the manner in which the medical work overcomes and removes prejudice against Christianity. A missionary writes:—

Illness pretended so as to visit a mission-hospital.

Change in a religious teacher.

A Mohammedan religious teacher came to our hospital to be operated on. He was obviously bitterly opposed to Christianity: nothing but his great desire to be cured would have brought him near us. It was most noticeable that during the ward readings and Sunday services, unlike the other patients, who were listening attentively, he was obviously trying not to hear. With eyes fast closed he murmured Arabic prayers in the vain endeavour to counteract what to him was heresy. Little by little his attitude changed; he listened to what was said, at first in silence, but later with expressions of approval. Before long he was reading eagerly from the Word of God, which was by his bedside, and before he left the hospital he bought a copy of the New Testament to take away with him.

Instances such as these, combined with others of which details are not given, in which men and women are said to believe the truth but to be afraid to confess it, are enough to show that even in land under Mohammedan rule the workers have something beyond faith to prove that their 'labour is not in vain in the Lord.' *

EGYPT AND THE SUDAN MISSIONS.

THE PAST HISTORY.

The original object of the Missions formerly grouped under the heading of the 'Mediterranean Mission,' which were begun at Malta in 1815, at the close of the great war, and were afterwards extended to Egypt, Abyssinia, Greece, Turkey, Asia Minor and Palestine, was twofold: first, to revive the Eastern Churches; and, second, through them to evangelize the Mohammedans. Some very able and devoted missionaries were employed in this work—Jowett, Gobat, Krapf, Pfander, Koelle, etc. But the hopes of the founders of the Society were not fulfilled. Oriental Christendom manifested no readiness to be quickened into life by emissaries from the West; and Moslem fanaticism, which barely tolerated Greek and Armenian Christianity, utterly repudiated the Gospel when presented in a pure form.

The Society formerly had a Mission in Egypt, as part of its scheme for the revival of the Eastern Churches. Many of the Coptic clergy and one Bishop were trained in the C.M.S. Seminary at Cairo; but the visible results were small, and the work was discontinued in 1862. In 1882, in response to the appeals of the late Miss Whately and in consequence of the British occupation of Egypt, the Rev. F. A. Klein, formerly of Jerusalem, was sent to Cairo to begin a new Mission among the Mohammedans. A medical mission was opened in 1889, and ladies were added to the staff in the following year. Helouan was occupied in 1903, and Menouf in 1909. After Gordon's death at Khartoum in 1885 a Gordon Memorial Fund was opened, and soon after the defeat of the Khalifa's forces Omdurman was occupied in 1899, and Khartoum in 1900, under some restrictions, however, as to evangelistic efforts. Atbara was occupied in 1908. In 1905 the Society was invited by Lord Cromer and the Sirdar to commence work in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, and Malek was occupied in the following year.

Egypt is included in the jurisdiction of the Anglican Bishop in Jerusalem.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK.

I. The Society occupies four stations in Egypt proper. A Training Class, a Boarding-school and two day-schools for girls are maintained at Cairo; a school for boys, with a Hostel attached, at Old Cairo; and a school for high-class girls at Helouan. There is also a Book Depôt at Cairo, where a weekly illustrated magazine, the Orient and Occident, is published. Evangelistic meetings are held for sheikhs and students and others. Medical work is carried on at hospitals for men and for women and children at Old Cairo, and by means of itinerations in the Nile Delta.

II. In the Sudan, the sphere of the operations of the Gordon Memorial Mission, the Society has girls' schools at Khartoum, Omdurman and Atbara, and a medical mission at Omdurman. Work has also been begun among the Dinkas, a pagan tribe, 1,000 miles farther up the Nile.

There are five clergy, four doctors, three other laymen, seven missionaries' wives (one of them a doctor), and eighteen other women missionaries, including four trained nurses, engaged in the Missions. There are also forty-three Native Christian lay agents.

Conference of converts from Islam.

An interesting Conference of converts from Islam resident in Egypt was held at Zeitoun in June, 1909, at which Christians hailing from Nubia, Morocco, the Sudan, Palestine, Syria and Persia, and connected with the C.M.S., the American Mission, the Egypt General Mission and the Dutch Mission were present. The proceedings took the form of a convention for the deepening of the spiritual life rather than of a discussion as to the best means of winning Mohammedans for Christ, and were instrumental in much blessing. As an outcome of the Conference two letters, signed by the twenty-one persons who were present, were issued; one was addressed to 'our fellow-Moslem converts throughout Egypt,' and the other to 'our Moslem brethren in all lands.' *

Death of Mis T. H. Bird

A great loss has been sustained by the Mission in the death of Miss T. H. Bird, which took place at Copenhagen on March 10, 1910. She was educated in Germany and England, and when she offered to the Society she was Head Governess and Lady Superintendent of the Training College for Mistresses at Cheltenham. In 1901, to use the words of her missionary colleagues, 'at great cost she left her important post to reorganize the girls' educational work of the C.M.S. in Egypt. This she did by laying down lines of work so clear and sound that they can be followed out in the future. Thus the sacrifice of her career was justified and its object secured; and God called her to lay down a finished task to go hence. She leaves behind the memory of a perfected life in Christ, for and in Whom all her days were manifestly lived.'

Reinforcements.

The Mission has been reinforced by Mr. William Wilson Cash, who has been accepted in local connexion, and Mrs. Cash. Mr. Cash worked in Egypt under the Egypt General Mission from 1901 to 1909. He has been admitted to deacons' orders since his acceptance.

I. EGYPT MISSION.

Eleven adults baptized.

THE outstanding feature of 1909 in the Egypt Mission was the number of adult baptisms, which was nearly twice as great as in any previous year. The converts, eight men and three women, were brought to Christ by a variety of instrumentalities. One of the men was formerly a pupil in the C.M.S. school at Cairo, and a visit to England and friendship with Y.M.C.A. secretaries and members led to a final decision; a second was led to the Saviour at one of the revival centres in Upper Egypt; two others had long been known to the missionaries, and one of them had frequently attended the evangelistic meetings in Cairo; a fifth and sixth were respectively a lawyer's clerk and the son of an omda (village headman) in Lower Egypt; a seventh, a tailor, hailed from Turkish Arabia; and the last was the fruit of work on the Mount of Olives. All the women converts at one time or another were pupils in the C.M.S. girls' schools, and afterwards were engaged as probationers at the women's hospital, Old Cairo, and in the case of two at least it was at the hospital that they ripened into Christians. The late Miss Bird wrote of these last named:—

Azeeza comes from a well-to-do home in Tantah, and her Moslem mother in person brought the girl back to the hospital and gave permission for the baptism before she herself (strange contradiction!) went on the pilgrimage to Mecca. But in spite of the sanction given, the mother and other relatives have proved very hostile, and Azeeza has had a very severe testing time.

* The substance of these letters was given in the C.M.S. Gazette, Sept., 1909, p. 271, and the Church Missionary Review of that month, p. 573, respectively.

She has, however, stood quite firm. The second girl, Fatma, now Shafeeka ('compassionate'), is the younger sister of the former school and training-class girl, Wadee'a, who is an evangelistic teacher in the women's hospital and was baptized a few years ago. Their old Moslem father is not hostile really, and has in each case given his permission, but he is one of those who are Christian as regards head-knowledge and yet who remain Moslem in heart. 'Azeeza' means 'beloved,' and is both a Christian and Moslem name, so it was not changed in baptism; but an out-and-out Moslem name like Fatma could not be retained by a Christian.

The third girl is a daughter of Philippus, who was the first convert to be baptized in the Old Cairo church.

Christian marriages of converts.

Another noteworthy characteristic of the year was the solemnization of three marriages between converts from Islam. Sheikh Bulus married Ruth, a sister of Lydia, who herself was married to a convert in 1905; Ruth's other sister, Christina, was another of the brides; and the third, the daughter of Philippus mentioned above, was united to Ishak, who was baptized in 1908.*

Evangelistic Work.

The lack of missionaries and native agents made it difficult to prosecute the evangelistic work with vigour, and no meetings for effendis could be conducted, though there appeared to be abundant openings for work among that class. Visits were paid to a number of Moslem homes in Cairo and Old Cairo, and also in some of the many surrounding villages, but the purpose which had been entertained of occupying Shubra Zenga, thirty miles to the north-west of Cairo, as a new centre of evangelistic work, was frustrated by the collapse of the house which had been purchased. The Rev. W. H. T. Gairdner followed the late Rev. D. M. Thornton's example by paying some visits to Upper Egypt and especially Minieh, where he held some successful meetings, but work in conjunction with the Coptic Church is attended with difficulty owing to its factious condition. Mr. Gairdner says:—

Visits to Upper Egypt.

> The clergy and some of the laity of this Church are, unhappily, on very bad terms with each other at present, and it really seems as if a third party like ourselves cannot manage to have fellowship with Coptic Christians in work without getting involved, in spite of ourselves, in their divisions. I fear a little of this sort of thing took place, quite unconsciously, as a result of our Minieh visit. Our best work is done privately with individuals whose souls aspire after better and higher things than the sordid and unedifying intrigues into which so much of the energy of their Church seems to go.†

Inquirers.

At the end of the year there were four inquirers, including a sheikh from Al Azhar, under definite instruction. Many others, it is said, are convinced of the truth of Christianity, but find it impossible to make open confession of their faith. One woman remarked: 'Jesus is drawing me, and my children are waiting for me. What shall I do?' And another said: 'I am ready to give up all but my father.' Besides such as these there are others who find the claims of Christ too much for them. It is said that Moslems who know anything about our Lord's life on earth form a very high conception as to what the conduct of Christians should be, and even reprove the converts if they observe inconsistencies in their walk. The attitude of these Mohammedans is perhaps illustrated by the case of a man who on being asked why he absented himself from the evangelistic meetings which he had been in the habit of attending replied, 'The teaching is very good, but the religion of Christ is imprisoning.' He added in explanation that Christianity required great care in conduct and speech. A man, for instance, might not swear or lie, neither might he marry and divorce just as he pleased.

Literary Work.

The Book Depôt in Cairo is in the lower part of a not very central mission-house; but in spite of the inconvenience of the position, the sales of literature showed a satisfactory increase. The circulation of the Arabic-English weekly magazine, the Orient and Occident, was well maintained, and the publication of a number of illustrated lives of Bible characters, which was begun in 1907, was continued, those of Samuel and David (with Ruth and Saul) being issued during the year under review. In addition a dialogue, criticizing the Moslem Deistic conception of God, and a series of studies in the Koran, with quotations from the Mohammedan 'fathers,' in the production of which Mr. Gairdner was assisted by the researches of some of his Egyptian fellow-workers, were published.

Educational Work.

Boys' School.

The Boys' School at Old Cairo grew from sixty pupils in 1903 to 130 in June 1909, notwithstanding that the fees were quadrupled; but in the autumn there was some falling-off. The hostel attached to the school had eight inmates. A great change was witnessed in one of them, so much so that when he went home his fellow-villagers commented upon it. Although his father, when he brought him for admission, remarked 'Don't give him too much religion,' he rejoiced in the improvement in his son, but unfortunately he decided to remove him from the C.M.S. institution and send him to a school nearer home.* Two of the nine members of the Girls' Training Class at Cairo gained their teachers' certificates during the year, and one of them proceeded to a post in the Girls' Boarding-school, which has nine Moslems among the boarders—a larger number than usual. The number of pupils at the Girls' Day-school increased by about fifty per cent.

Training Class.

Girls' School.

* An article on the Boys' School appeared in the C.M. Gleaner, Jan., 1910, p. 11. See also C.M.S. Gazette, Oct., 1909, p. 306.

The great majority of the children are Mohammedans, and the missionaries were cheered by the return of three pairs of sisters who had been removed from the school in the past because of the Christian instruction which is imparted. The Moslems appear to recognize that a better tone prevails in this institution than in schools of their own. Thus a neighbour attributed the escape of the school building from a fire which broke out close to it to the fact that God protected the house because of the good work done there; a Moslem mother, visiting the school, exhorted the girls to work well, saying 'God is with your school'; and one of the children remarked on one occasion, 'We like this school because here we love one another, and in all the other schools the girls quarrel and curse,' a statement which, as concerns the C.M.S. school, Miss G. M. Western wishes were even more correct than is the case. Some of the children attending the Girls' School at Old Cairo seemed to grasp the plan of salvation through Christ. Among the pupils at the English School at Helouan are a daughter of one of the Khedive's cousins and some children belonging to the household of another cousin, who are said to repeat in their home the hymns which they learn at school, albeit they are not allowed to complete any line containing the name of Christ. Here may be mentioned a Sunday-school which is held in connexion with the dispensary at Old Cairo by Miss L. Crowther. Speaking of it she refers to a former pupil, Zohara by name, who for many years was most regular in her attendance, but now has been married, and lives in a remote part of the city, beyond the reach of the missionaries. Miss Crowther writes:—

'God is with your school.'

An earnest Sunday scholar.

> Zohara's two sisters and little brother come to school, and it was quite touching to hear the little sisters' account of her teaching them in their home. Fatma, Saida and Ahmed were all put into a corner while Zohara took her Testament and tried to spell the words of the passage before her; then she would close the book and discourse to them. A hymn and prayer would close the meeting, and the same order was gone through in the evening; only, as Fatma said, it was 'kilma ginse e tany,' which meant that the sermon of the morning was quite different from the one preached in the evening. All this with bigoted Moslem parents looking on! Fatma will sometimes look up at me with great black liquid eyes: 'I weep for my sister; there is no one now to teach us at home.'

Medical Work.

Patients responsive to the teaching.

The missionaries engaged in the medical work at Old Cairo met with a certain amount of responsiveness to their teaching, notably in the case of two Moslem probationers engaged at the hospital. One of them made a feast at his home to which several of the missionaries and catechists were invited. Supper over, some Arabic Christian hymns were sung at his own request, after which he offered prayer. Since this took place in the presence of his Moslem father, and probably within the hearing of most of the other members of his family, his action showed some courage. A real work is accomplished, too, among many who give no sign of being impressed by what they hear. Thus Miss J. Lewis writes of a village which she visited :—

'Refining influence of contact with Christianity.'

Our experience would have been most depressing if we had not met with one or two women who had been to the Old Cairo Hospital. For, although their hearts did not appear to have been touched to any great extent by the Gospel story, the refining influence of only a few weeks' contact with Christianity had left its mark, and they stood out in striking contrast to their surroundings as far as outward conduct and bearing were concerned, so that even where we received no definite encouragement we still had distinct proof of the power of Christianity.

The number of patients at the hospitals (one for men and one for women), containing between them 85 beds, is very large, and inquiry revealed that during the year patients were received from 600 different towns and villages all over Egypt. Dr. F. J. Harpur's medical itinerating work in the Delta was sadly hindered by an accident in the spring of 1909, when he had the misfortune to break his leg. At the time the house-boat which he makes his home was moored near Bagour, within easy reach of a dozen villages, and 150 persons were often present at the address on dispensary days. Later in the year Hamoul, three miles from Menouf, where Mr. Cash has taken up his abode, was visited. Some opposition was met with owing to Dr. Harpur having to report a case of anthrax, since this report necessitated the inspection of all the donkeys; the antagonism continued even when its immediate cause had been forgotten.

Pastoral Work.

With the growth in the number of converts which has taken place of late the native Church Committee, a consultative body which was formed in 1908, has become of increasing importance. Questions of considerable interest come before it from time to time. One problem with which it was concerned in 1909 was whether the Western Churches should be followed with regard to the feasts and fasts of the year, or whether it would be well to apply to the Archbishop of Canterbury for permission to use the Eastern Calendar. Canon R. MacInnes writes :—

Difficult problems.

It had often been suggested in the past that it might tend to closer unity with the native Egyptian Church, and thus to better progress of the work, if we were to keep Christmas Day and Easter Day with them, instead of on a totally different day—a confusion that is often commented on by our Mohammedan neighbours. In fact, during the two past seasons we have acted on our own responsibility, and have kept the Eastern dates by way of an experiment. It is probably only by doing this that we have been able to elicit the real feelings with which many of our Egyptian friends regard the question, and after long and careful discussion we have decided to keep to the Western way in this matter—at any rate, for some years to come. The converts from Islam voted unanimously for this, and several others spoke of the wrong impression made on the minds of many of the Copts by our suggestion, as shown by such remarks as the following :—'Praise God, you have now seen the error of your ways, and are returning to the true fold!'

Another question which was considered was whether congregations should be advised to remove their head-dress or their boots on entering a church. The difficulty arises from the fact that many Church members wear European dress, including laced boots, which cannot easily be slipped off on entering a place of worship; while Western habits have been largely adopted in Cairo, and consequently the practice of removing the boots on entering a room is no longer observed in many homes, and is only kept up in the mosques and in some of the Coptic churches. On the other hand, it is impossible to enforce any general removal of the head-dress, for to the Egyptian it is an act of disrespect to take it off on entering any room or church, and the practice is but rarely observed. Eventually the Church Committee decided not to pass any resolution on the subject, but to make a general recommendation that those who wear Egyptian dress should remove their shoes, and those who wear European clothes their head-dress.

II. ANGLO-EGYPTIAN SUDAN (GORDON MEMORIAL) MISSION.

1. NORTHERN SUDAN.

Educational Work.

THE Society's work in the Sudan is still on a small scale. In the northern portion educational missions are represented by three girls' schools. Of that at Khartoum no report has been received. At Omdurman the school increased in numbers, and the children appeared to grasp something of the power of prayer; there are six girls living in the mission-house, one of whom is a Dinka. The number of names on the register at Atbara was nearly fifty, including those of a dozen or so small boys.

Medical Work.

The dispensary at Omdurman was closed for three months in consequence of Dr. E. Lloyd's absence through ill-health. He mentions three considerations which prevent the patients from being very numerous. The first is the smallness of the population of the town (the inhabitants number about 40,000) and the fact that Omdurman is surrounded by the desert excepting where it touches the Nile; the second is the presence of a very efficient Government hospital, at which practically no charge is made for advice or medicine; and the third is the prevailing fatalism, illustrated by the habit of exclaiming 'God is merciful; let me die in peace,' when a person is ill and it is suggested that a doctor should be called in. A short service was held for the patients, and Dr. Lloyd suspects that the custom prevented some of the patients from paying a second visit to the dispensary.*

2. SOUTHERN SUDAN.

BISHOP GWYNNE, who paid an episcopal visit to Malek in July 1909, observed that a good deal of progress had been made during the two years which had elapsed since his previous visit. Some twenty or thirty young men, of ages ranging from fifteen to twenty-one, live at the station for a month at a time, and every afternoon are taught to read; while the dispensary is sometimes attended by as many as twenty persons, and two or three were generally living at Malek so as to obtain regular treatment for their maladies. Itinerations were made among both the Bor and Aliab Dinkas,* and much attention was given to translating the Scriptures. There is abundant opportunity for extension were only the men and the funds available. The Governor-General, Sir F. R. Wingate, is anxious that the C.M.S. should take up work on the west bank of the Nile, north of the Lado Enclave, which owing to the death of King Leopold of Belgium in December, 1909, has reverted to the administration of the Sudan; and Major Owen, the Governor of the Province, wishes that the Twi Dinkas, who live about sixty miles north of Malek, should come under the influence of the Mission.†

PALESTINE MISSION.

THE PAST HISTORY.

The Society commenced work in Palestine in 1851, in response to an invitation given by Bishop Gobat. The following places have been occupied by European labourers: Jerusalem, 1851; Nazareth, 1852; Jaffa and Nablous, 1853; Haifa, 1856; Shefamer, 1871; Salt, 1874; Ramallah, 1877; Gaza, 1878; Ramleh, 1879; Acca and El Husn, 1890; Kefr Yasif, 1892; and Bir Zeit, 1894. In 1887 the Society commenced to send unmarried ladies to this Mission, and their efforts among Mohammedan women have been greatly blessed. In 1899 the work of the late Female Education Society at Nazareth, Bethlehem and Shefamer was taken over by the Society. Medical missions have done much to diminish prejudice. The first was set on foot at Gaza in 1886. Despite treaties and concessions on paper, missionary effort is carried on under the most vexatious restrictions, and a Mohammedan can only become a Christian at the imminent risk of liberty and life.

The Bishopric in Jerusalem was founded in 1841 on the initiative of King Frederick William IV. of Prussia, the arrangement being that England and Prussia, who shared the expense of the See, should alternately nominate its occupant. The first three Bishops were Dr. Alexander, Dr. Gobat (1846), previously a C.M.S. missionary, and Dr. Barclay (1879). On the death of the last-named the German Government failed to nominate a successor, and eventually declined to continue the arrangement. In 1887 the Bishopric was revived by Archbishop Benson, the London Society for Promoting Christianity among the Jews and the Church Missionary Society having undertaken to make an annual subscription to the stipend of the See to supplement the endowment, and Dr. Blyth was appointed.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK.

The C.M.S. works at five main stations west of the Jordan, viz., Jerusalem, Nazareth, Nablous (the Denis Crofton Mission), Jaffa and Gaza; and at Salt, on the east of the river.

At each of these stations and at their out-stations educational work is prosecuted, the chief institutions being the English College and the Bishop Gobat School at Jerusalem, and for girls a Boarding-school and Training Class at Bethlehem, an Orphanage at Nazareth, a Boarding-school at Ramleh, and a large Day-school at Gaza. Jaffa, Nablous and Salt, as well as Gaza, are centres of medical missionary work. Much is done to reach the women, by means of visiting them in their homes, both in the towns and villages.

The pastoral work in the Mission is mainly in the hands of the Palestine Church Council, with which eleven native clergy are connected. The European staff consists of five clergy, seven laymen, eleven missionaries' wives, and twenty-eight other women missionaries; of these, six are doctors and seven are trained nurses. The native Christian lay agents number ninety-eight.

Death of Canon T. F. Wolters.

THE Palestine Mission has sustained a very great loss by the death of Canon T. F. Wolters, which occurred at Jaffa on January 4, 1910. He began work in 1857 as a lay agent at Smyrna, and was ordained in 1860. In 1874 he married a daughter of Bishop Gobat, and two years later he was transferred to Palestine. He was justly regarded as the father of the Palestine Mission, and was very highly esteemed and loved. The respect in which he was held in other than Mission circles was shown at his funeral, which was attended by the British Consul at Jerusalem, the Vice-Consul at Jaffa, the Russian and German Consuls and many Roman Catholics. Canon Dr. R. Sterling writes of him as follows:—

He was a man of exceptional gifts; his knowledge of the East, its languages and its people was remarkable. Naturally of a scholarly disposition, he brought his well-trained mind to bear with judicial exactness on the questions which came before it; his arguments were always based on sound reason and experience. His pulpit utterances showed the keenness of his intellectual vigour and revealed the earnestness and depth of his nature. His ideals of Christian character were of the highest order; these he exemplified in his own life, being kind and gentle, just and good. He has left behind him an example of singular uprightness of character as well as devotion to his sacred calling; his name will be long remembered throughout the length and breadth of the land, while his loss will be sorely felt in the councils of the Mission.*

Reinforcements.

The following reinforcements have been assigned to the Mission: Miss Harriett Amelia Rachel Apps, M.B., B.S., Durham University, trained at The Olives; and Miss Kathleen May Elliott, trained at The Willows, a daughter of a member of the C.M.S. Committee.† The Committee have accepted the resignations of Misses E. E. Brodie and A. Cooper, and Miss M. P. Estridge has retired. The Committee have also recorded the acceptance by the Canadian C.M.S. of the resignation of the Rev. Dr. S. Gould.

Elevation of Moslems due to missionary work.

Although, measured by the number of adult baptisms,‡ the results of the work of the C.M.S. in Palestine may not appear imposing, there can be little doubt that the Society's efforts have brought about a considerable change in the people of the land. Canon Sterling claims that 'subject races have been virtually delivered from tyranny and persecution, not by the arm of the law, but by moral force,' and he attributes this to the elevation of the Moslems, and says that, while other influences have been at work, the chief factors in the work of emancipation have been the schools, hospitals, churches and agents of the Mission. He points out, moreover, that the Greek Orthodox Church is awaking to the fact that it has been and is spiritually asleep, and says, 'A reformation is at hand; and who are the reformers? Members of our own flock, who have been educated in our Protestant schools.'

Educational Work.

Bishop Gobat School.

At the head of the educational institutions to which Canon Sterling refers are the English College at Jerusalem, with thirty-nine students, and the Bishop Gobat School, which has the names of ninety boys on its rolls. An addition was made to the school curriculum in the form of Turkish, which is the language used in the new Parliament, whereas Arabic is the colloquial in Palestine. Nearly half the boys are members of the Scripture Union, and a happy change was noticeable in the lives of several of them, albeit the enemy sowed some tares among the wheat, and one lad had to be expelled.

Girls' Boarding-school.

Five girls belonging to the normal class at the Girls' Boarding-school at Bethlehem gained teachers' certificates, and four of them took posts in mission-schools, one being appointed to the Society's school at Omdurman. A reunion of former inmates of the Nazareth Orphanage was held in the autumn, to commemorate the completion by Miss M. A. E. Newey of a quarter of a century's work in that town. About 100 of the 367 girls who have passed through the institution during that period assembled. A former pupil, having completed three years' training at the hospital of the Edinburgh Medical Mission in Nazareth, received her nurse's certificate during the year under review, and another girl left for similar training in the hospital at Nablous. The institution at Ramleh, in which orphans or very poor children have hitherto been received, has been changed into a boarding-school for the daughters of Protestant Christians, and a small fee is now charged. The day-schools in the Mission were carried on without any special incident. The largest is that for girls at Gaza, where the attendance averages 300; a Jewish girl employed there as a monitress expresses a great desire to know the truth. Another good school is that for boys at Al Areesh, a town with a population of 8,000, almost all Mohammedans, which is under Egyptian rule, but is worked as an out-station from Gaza. In the Nazareth district the reduction of the Society's grant for primary education necessitated the dismissal of three of the teachers, and that caused others to feel that their connexion with the Mission might be terminated at any time and led them to resign, with the result that some of the schools were sadly undermanned.

Orphanage.

Day-schools.

The C.M.S. has four hospitals in the Holy Land—at Jaffa, Gaza, Nablous and Salt, but the last-named was without a European doctor after April, 1909, when Dr. F. Johnson left for Baghdad. The number of in-patients and of visits of out-patients increased at Jaffa and Gaza, notwithstanding that the practice of making a small charge for treatment was instituted at Gaza, and that Bible teaching is given twice a day to all the in-patients, both men and women, while the out-patients are always addressed before they receive medical attention. Some encouraging medical itinerations were made among the villages in the districts named and also around Nablous; the missionaries on such occasions were often greeted by former in-patients, and sometimes found that such were anxious to hear more about the truths which they had been taught during their times of sickness. A dispensary was opened from Salt at Ammaan, or Rabbat-Ammon (its Bible name), where Uriah the Hittite was killed, and similar work, though not under the supervision of a fully qualified doctor, was carried on at Shefamer, Kefr Yasif and El Husn.*

Missionaries are not allowed to reside or open schools in any purely Moslem villages in the Holy Land, but they are able to pay short visits to these, though they run some risk of rough treatment in so doing. Twenty villages in the district round El Husn, where Miss A. M. Elverson took up her abode in October 1908, were thus visited, as were two in the Haifa district and one in that worked from Gaza, whither the missionaries had not previously made their way.

Pastoral Work. The congregations, most of which are under the pastoral care of native clergy, are slowly increasing in number, importance and independence. Many of the Christian women, however, and not only those of the Greek Church, are deplorably ignorant, a fact which at Salt is partly due to the church being so small that but few of them can be admitted to the services.* At that station, therefore, a service has been started for their benefit in the school. Some special services were held at Shefamer in the autumn, but an outbreak of violence, in which two persons were killed and another severely wounded, and the prevalence of dengue fever, which laid both the missioners low on the fifth day, militated against the success of the effort.

TURKISH ARABIA MISSION.

Baghdad, which is in the Turkish Empire, is in the immediate neighbourhood of the sacred places of the Shiah Mohammedans. Thousands of pilgrims flock to it from all parts of Persia, and in order to reach them the city was first occupied by a C.M.S. missionary in 1883. A hospital was opened in 1886. In 1898 the work, previously carried on in connexion with that in Persia, was constituted an independent Mission. Three years later Mosul, near the site of ancient Nineveh, was occupied.

Medical and educational work is carried on at both the above stations. The staff consists of three European laymen, two missionaries' wives, five women missionaries and fifteen native Christian teachers. Four of the above are doctors and three are trained nurses.

Death of Dr. P.A.H. Radcliffe.

THE already small staff of the Mission was further depleted on Sept. 22, 1909, by the death of Dr. P. A. H. Radcliffe. In 1906 he went to Jerusalem under the London Jews' Society, and in the following year he was accepted by the C.M.S. as a missionary in local connexion in the Turkish Arabia Mission, and located at Baghdad. While on a holiday journey he was bathing in the Euphrates, when he was carried out of his depth and drowned.*

Reinforcements.

Three new workers have been added to the staff of the Mission, viz., Mr. George Wheldale Stanley, L.R.C.P. and S., Ireland, a brother of the Rev. E. J. T. Stanley of the Fuh-Kien Mission; Miss Florence Elizabeth Anderton, a trained nurse, who received her training under the Society at The Willows; and Miss Susie Eleanor Hill, M.B., B.S., London University, a daughter of the late Bishop Hill and a sister of Miss E. T. Hill, of the Uganda Mission. The Committee have accepted the resignation of the Rev. E. E. Lavy, tendered with a view to qualifying as a doctor and afterwards rejoining the Society.

A depleted staff.

The death of Dr. Radcliffe was not the only loss sustained by the Mission during the year. In April the Rev. and Mrs. E. E. and Miss E. A. Lavy left on furlough, and in May Dr. and Mrs. A. H. Griffith, who had returned to the country in January, were obliged to come home on medical certificate; so when Dr. Radcliffe was drowned, Dr. and Mrs. F. Johnson and Misses E. E. Martin and E. G. Butlin were the only C.M.S. missionaries left in the country. Though the staff has since been reinforced, some time must elapse before the recruits can gain a working knowledge of Arabic and become effective.

Under the circumstances little more was possible than to endeavour to hold the ground already occupied. In the medical work at Baghdad the native workers did their best to lighten the burden which necessarily fell on Dr. Johnson's shoulders, and at Mosul the dispensary was opened on five days in each week, but most of the cases requiring operation had to be turned away.

* A sketch of Dr. Radcliffe's work at Baghdad, by his colleague, Dr. F. Johnson, appeared in Mercy and Truth, Dec., 1909, p. 390.

The people are becoming aroused to the importance of education, and there were rather more Mohammedans than before in the schools at both stations.

Miss E. G. Butlin was able to make a short itineration in the neighbourhood of Mosul. At one village her room was besieged all day by a multitude of sick folk.*

PERSIA MISSION.

THE PAST HISTORY.

Persia, though one of the youngest of the Society's Missions, was among the first countries thought of by the Committee, and was mentioned in each of the first two Annual Reports. Henry Martyn stayed ten months in the country in 1811. Since 1834 an American Mission has laboured with much blessing among the Nestorian Christians, and latterly among Mohammedans also. The Archbishop of Canterbury's Assyrian Mission also works partly within the Persian Kingdom. In 1869 the Rev. R. Bruce, of the C.M.S., visited Persia on his way back to India, and, finding the Mohammedans of Ispahan and its neighbourhood not unwilling to discuss religious subjects, he took up his abode at Julfa, and gathered round him some few of these and a considerable number of Armenian Christians who were dissatisfied with their corrupt form of worship. He also opened schools, etc. In 1875 the Society adopted his work as one of its Missions. A medical missionary was sent out in 1879, and women were added to the staff in 1891. Kerman was occupied in 1897; Yezd in 1898; and Shiraz in 1900.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK.

The four stations in the Mission (for Ispahan and Julfa, its suburb, may be regarded as one) are widely separated from each other, Ispahan being 200 miles from Yezd; Yezd 220 miles from Kerman; and Shiraz about 320 miles from Ispahan and 250 miles from each of the other stations. The isolation of the stations is enhanced by travelling being both slow and dangerous, owing to the country being infested with robbers.

Much of the work centres round the men's and women's hospitals at Ispahan, Yezd and Kerman. There is a Boarding-school for Persian girls at Ispahan; Julfa has schools for Armenian boys and girls; and there are schools for Persian boys at Ispahan, Kerman and Yezd, and one for Parsi girls at the last-named station. Women missionaries labour among the hospital patients and others, and during the holidays a little evangelistic work is accomplished in the villages.

The staff of the Mission consists of six European clergymen, one native pastor, seven laymen, twelve missionaries' wives, and nineteen single women; nine of the above are doctors and eight are trained nurses. The native Christian lay agents number thirty.

Retirement of Bishop Stuart

After fifty-nine years of service Bishop E. C. Stuart has felt obliged by the infirmities of age to retire. Having distinguished himself at Trinity College, Dublin, he became a missionary of the Society in 1850, and with Thomas Valpy French (afterwards also a missionary Bishop) founded St. John's College, Agra. After twenty years of Indian service, during which he was for about four years Secretary to the Calcutta Corresponding Committee, he was for a short time acting-Secretary to the Parent Committee. In 1874 he visited New Zealand, having been requested by the Committee to report on the Society's Missions in those Islands. In 1877 he was consecrated second Bishop of Waiapu. In 1894, at the age of sixty-seven, he resigned his See to join the Society's Persia Mission, where (with a brief interval to revisit his Southern home) he has for fifteen years been the wise and greatly honoured leader of the little band of Christian workers, and has won the respect and confidence even of the people most opposed to his faith.

Reinforcements.

The recruits assigned to the Mission have been: Miss Alicia Pears Aldous, M.B., B.S., London University, Miss Margaret Hilda

Carrick, a trained nurse, and Miss Emma Jane Petley, all trained at The Willows, and Miss Zoe Ellesmere Davidson Parry, a trained nurse, of the Victoria Association. The Committee have accepted the resignation of Miss E. F. Phillips.

The political situation in Persia, which was briefly described in last year's Report,* rapidly developed. The Bakhtiaris, who had joined the Nationalists at Ispahan at the beginning of 1909, advanced to Teheran on July 13, and after some fighting took possession of the capital. The Shah sought refuge in the Russian Legation on the 16th, and on the same day he was deposed at a meeting of an extraordinary National Council, and his son, a boy of eleven, was proclaimed in his stead under the title of Ahmed Shah. At the same time Sipahdar, an influential leader from the north of Persia, was made Minister of War, and a Bakhtiari chief, Sardar-i-Asad, Minister of the Interior. At one time fears were entertained for the safety of foreigners, but happily they were not realized. Some of the missionaries, however, had unpleasant experiences at the hands of robbers, and Dr. Emmeline M. Stuart was held up by footpads in Ispahan in December.† She was passing from one mission-house to another when three men stopped her and threatened her with swords; one held a dagger to her throat, while the others searched her for money and valuables.

Waning of the power of the mullahs.

There are two outstanding features of the events which have occurred. The first is the waning of the power of the religious leaders of Islam, from whom Christian workers have experienced great opposition in the past. Three of the chief mullahs in Teheran were publicly executed, and the Rev. J. H. Linton says that when a new governor at Shiraz began to execute murderers, Mirza Ibrahim, the chief mullah, who caused the C.M.S. school in that town to be closed in 1906,‡ wrote in a very haughty manner, pointing out that it was Ramadan, and that the governor ought not then to be hanging men. The governor replied, 'Get a photograph of the hanging of Sheikh Fazl Ullah in Teheran and send it to Mirza Ibrahim, and say that Sheikh Fazl Ullah was a far more important man than he will ever be. Ask him whether he wishes to——!' (indicating the gallows). Events such as these show unmistakably that the influence of the mullahs has materially diminished, at all events for a time.

The second salient feature is the rise of the Bakhtiaris,§ in whose hands much of the power in the country now lies. They are practically at the head of the reform movement, and for the moment are the rulers of that part of Persia in which the C.M.S. is at work. Although nominally Mohammedans their religion sits lightly upon them; they have often asked for an English doctor to live among them, and more than that they have begged for a teacher as well. In 1905 two C.M.S. women missionaries spent several weeks among them as guests of one of the leading chiefs, and his ladies begged that a European teacher might be sent to teach their girls. When told that the teaching would include reading the Gospel, they replied, 'Come and teach our children the Gospel; we want to read it. The Gospel will go forward with us; we are not afraid of the mullahs.' No teacher, however, could be sent, and now the chief whose guests those ladies were is Governor of Ispahan. Dr. D. W. Carr, writing of the opening among the Bakhtiaris, says:—

The Bakhtiaris anxious to be taught.

> It is a call which is urgent, very urgent, and an opening which if not entered at once or in the near future may, and probably will, be permanently closed against us. The Bakhtiaris are a fine race, and they have risen to a position of great power and authority in the country. It is heartrending to feel that here in this Mohammedan country, where work is proverbially difficult, there are people asking both for a teacher for their children and a doctor for their sick, and we are unable to send them. I do not mean that they are asking for definite Christian teaching, but they are at least willing that both the teacher and the doctor, whom they would welcome, should be Christians, and quite understand that they will teach definite Christian doctrines when they come.

It speaks well for these people that they have determined, so it is said, to put down opium-smoking, which is sadly prevalent in the country; indeed, at Kerman three-fourths of the population are stated to be addicted to the habit. In February, 1910, officials, attended by soldiers, raided the caravanserais, shops, coffee-houses, etc., in that town, and took possession of all the opium found in them, paying a fixed price for it. The Government proceeded to open its own depôts and to sell the drug at about three times the old price.*

Opium-smoking to be suppressed.

It is not only among the Bakhtiaris that there is a desire for education. The people in general are 'ripe for it.' Bishop Stuart states that their 'mind is awakening; there is a desire for knowledge and European education'; and another missionary speaks of some schoolboys, old enough to be earning their living, who when asked how long they intended to remain at school, replied, 'As long as you have anything to teach us.' Of another place he writes:—

A desire for education.

> An old Haji there came to renew an offer he had made previously. He would provide a school-house, with necessary equipment, a school servant,

* See C.M.S. Gazette, May, 1910, p. 145.

a house for a teacher, and twenty tomans per month if we would send a Christian teacher. I asked, 'Will you allow the Bible to be read in school?' He replied, 'We wish it to be read, that is why we ask for a Christian teacher. We ourselves have given up Islam.' We had that offer before us for seven months. Now it is withdrawn. The old Haji said he did not think we were very much in earnest about it.

Educational Work.

The Society's school work met with less interruption in 1909 than in the previous year. At Ispahan the Bakhtiari governor sent a message to the effect that if any one dared to molest either teacher or pupil of the boys' school, news was to be sent to him at once and he would speedily prevent any further attempt. In spite of the difficulty of ensuring regular attendance and of inducing the parents, even well-to-do people, to provide their sons with the necessary books, etc., there were usually about fifty lads present. In his report of the school, the Rev. W. H. Walker narrates the following incident as showing the innate selfishness of the Persians. He writes :—

I was explaining the parable of the 'Good Samaritan' in school, but the boys saw nothing whatever peculiar in the conduct of the Levite and priests and were absolutely certain the Good Samaritan only did what he did for a reward somehow. On questioning them closer I elicited the fact that no Persian would do anything for nothing, and that even a father, in giving bread to his child, looks forward to the day when the child will make him some return. The awful lovelessness of Persia!

'Awful lovelessness.'

The Armenian Schools at Julfa are much reduced in numbers through the opening of both Gregorian and Roman Catholic institutions, but they are still most valuable, if for no other reason, because from them are derived the native agents who are so necessary in the Mission. At Yezd the Parsi girls' school and the medical mission were mutually helpful. When the doctor gained an entry into new houses, Miss M. E. Brighty, who was in charge of the school, made a point of calling and getting to know the people; and on the other hand the people whose acquaintance she made in connexion with the school work were often induced to try foreign treatment. The number of pupils in the boys' school at Kerman was still small, for Mohammedans will not sit side by side with Parsis, whom they consider unclean. As long as the town was peaceful the school at Shiraz did well, ninety per cent. of the forty boys on its roll usually putting in an appearance. Unhappily Mr. Linton's health broke down in October, and he had to be transferred to Ispahan. When he went to bid farewell to the governor, the latter promised, if he would stay, to be his friend and do all in his power to help the school; but Mr. Linton was obliged to leave, and as there was no missionary available to take his place, the work at Shiraz had to be closed.

School and hospital mutually helpful.

Medical Work.

While the disturbed condition of the country prevented patients living at a distance from attending the mission-hospitals, it was also responsible for many cases of gunshot wounds, and the doctors were kept busy during the year. The number of patients and of visits of out-patients at Kerman was larger than ever before, and at Yezd one of the chief features of 1909 was the growing readiness of the Parsis to avail themselves of the advantages offered by the hospital. The high estimation in which the medical missions are held was shown in a variety of ways. At Yezd Dr. H. White received the warmest of welcomes on his return from furlough, and most of the principal people of the city called on him within a few days after his return,* while at Kerman three beds in the men's hospital are locally supported and nearly £200 was received in fees from purely Persian sources. Was there not also undesigned testimony to the hold which the medical work in Ispahan has over the people, in the remark made by some of them that should there be a renewal of the fighting they intended to take all their possessions to the hospital and remain there until peace was restored, because no one would touch them there, since the missionaries were the friends of all? The medical work was often instrumental in overcoming prejudice, and whatever the mind of the patients may have been concerning Christianity as a religion for themselves they appeared to have much faith in the prayers of the missionaries, and began to remonstrate if, through the doctor being delayed, it looked as though prayers would not be held in their ward. The motives of the workers were not always understood, however, perhaps because the selfishness of the Persian nature, which has already been spoken of, makes it difficult for the people to comprehend unselfish action. Miss Brighty illustrates this. She says :—

Medical missions highly valued.

Belief in the prayers of the missionaries.

> I had often heard that Persians believed that it added greatly to our chance of blessing if we relieved their wants, but it was very different hearing it said in all sincerity oneself. I had gone to hospital for the Sunday service as usual, and having a little time to spare afterwards before the English service, I was asked to read in the cataract ward. An old woman was lying there, and after a little quiet talk with her about God's love for us, and how He has prepared a place for us, and the Way, Jesus, by which we could come to Him, she suddenly said, 'Don't you be afraid; make my eyes well and you ladies will all go to heaven. It's all right; we often pray for you all in our part of the country!' No question of her own chance of salvation; I was the doubtful one!

A little cottage hospital was opened for the summer months at Dehbela, a village in the mountains, whither the people of Yezd resort during the intense heat; and Dr. Carr undertook one medical itineration, during which he went to Shuster, a large place, full of Sayyids (descendants of Mohammed), among whom he met with some encouragement.†

* An account of the welcome accorded to Dr. White was given in the C.M. Gleaner, Feb., 1910, p. 30; Mercy and Truth, ibid., p. 37.

† Further details about the medical work will be found in Mercy and Truth, June, 1909, p. 177; Oct., p. 347; Nov., p. 370; and Feb., 1910, p. 37. See also the C.M. Gleaner, May, 1910, p. 75.

Evangelistic Work.

There is little which can be said about the evangelistic work. Among the organizations carried on at Ispahan in connexion with the Mission are an Anglo-Persian Young Men's Association, of which all the princes in the city are members, and an Anti-Opium Society, to which many of the chief men belong. Visiting the women was up-hill work, but evangelistic meetings held for them were well attended, and at Yezd the Parsi women were present at the services in larger numbers than before and gave more heed to what was said. Four Jewesses were baptized at Ispahan, and at another station three Jews affirmed their faith in Christ.

Pastoral Work.

Several sad cases of backsliding occurred among the earlier converts in the Mission,* but real spiritual progress was discernible in some other Christians, and one woman in particular is mentioned as showing great earnestness in bringing others to the knowledge of the Saviour.† A Christian Endeavour Band has been set on foot at Ispahan and taken up warmly, and special meetings for the deepening of the spiritual life were held in that city at Christmas.

* Sakineh, the first convert, whose story is so well known, continues steadfast in her faith.

† Mercy and Truth, Aug., 1909, p. 260, contained an account of an earnest hospital worker, an Armenian, who was called to his eternal rest in the spring of 1909.

INDIA.

THE year 1909 witnessed the enactment of comprehensive measures of reform as concerned the government of India. Mr. Sinha, a distinguished Hindu barrister, was appointed to be the first Indian member of the Viceroy's Executive Council, and arrangements were made for the enlargement of the Legislative Council and the various Provincial Councils by the addition to them of a number of elected Indian representatives as well as of others nominated by the authorities. It is significant of the position which Indian Christians occupy, both that one of their number, Rajah Shiam Singh, of Jajpur, should be nominated by the Lieutenant-Governor of the United Provinces to represent the Christian community on his Council, and also that there should be a Christian of education and well-established reputation, and occupying the position of a Rajah, to be nominated. Notwithstanding these concessions to Indian national feeling, several deplorable outrages occurred, and the assassination of Sir Curzon Wyllie in London and of Mr. Jackson, the Collector of Nasik, in India, and the attempt to assassinate the Viceroy and Lady Minto by throwing bombs at the carriage in which they were driving through Ahmedabad, have shown that the extremists have by no means been placated.

Measures of reform.

Outrages.

The murderer of Mr. Jackson and those who abetted him in his crime were Brahmans. Indeed, it has hitherto been chiefly the high-caste student class that has been most deeply infected with the spirit of unrest, and many observers, as was pointed out in last year's Report,* have seen in the deeds of violence which have been committed the outcome of a merely secular education. It is true that the Government institutions, where men of different religions meet in community of life, like the mission-schools and colleges, are doing a valuable work in removing antipathies and animosities, and in welding men of diverse races and religions among the younger generation of India more closely into one whole. But, as the Bishop of Lahore, in his speech at the opening of new buildings for the C.M.S. Edwardes College, Peshawar, on January 7, 1910, pointed out, these institutions are failing in a matter of even greater importance than promoting a good understanding between erstwhile foes, in that they are precluded by their nature from giving any religious teaching. He said :—

How secular education fails.

> The instinct and experience of India has always been against a system of education divorced from religious and, in large measure, from high moral sanctions, and very many Indian parents express the extremest dissatisfaction with the Government system of education on this ground ; while Government itself has, through the mouth of some of its most prominent officials in India, attributed not a few of the more unsatisfactory aspects of the restlessness and movement which are at present occupying so much of our thought in India, to this negative character of the education given in Government institutions. Very much thought is being devoted at present to the question of how this disability can be removed, and how religious—or at any rate, much more definite moral—teaching in some living and effective form can be introduced into those colleges. No one would more heartily wish success to such efforts than myself, but one cannot be blind to the immense difficulties that beset the position, and I am not myself hopeful of a satisfactory solution being found. But in these mission-colleges the difficulty is solved; for here the professors are men of profound religious convictions and great personal devotion and earnestness, while the very basis of the teaching is the Holy Bible.

Bishop Lefroy went on to say that although to non-Christian parents the Bible-teaching is distasteful, yet they are ready to send their children to mission-schools because they recognize that no unworthy means are used to influence the pupils in favour of Christianity, that the moral teaching is high and pure and true, and that former pupils bear a good reputation for purity, trustworthiness and industry.* The Bishop of Lahore is by no means alone in holding these opinions. Many believe with him that, to use Lord Curzon's striking words, 'we are sharpening the wits of the people of India without forming their characters,' and urge that there is a loud call at the present time for a great extension of mission colleges and schools—schools as well as colleges, for it is not only in higher education that Christian teaching is required, since in the homes of the people of India, and even in their religions, moral training is sadly lacking. A distinguished Indian writer is quoted by Sir J. A. Bourdillon in the Church Missionary Review as having made the following statement:—

'Sharpening wits without forming character.'

> We have no moral education at home because our parents cannot give it. . . . Our mothers, wives, sisters and daughters are ignorant, and from infancy beliefs are instilled into our minds in the sanctity of certain dogmas and convictions. . . . Old ideals have faded, or are fast fading away from our visions; and the new one is barely visible to the most clear-sighted among us. Our priests cannot teach us religion and morality.†

Alternatives in female education.

While a Christian education is needed in the primary schools no less than in the secondary, it is called for by the women as well as by the men. The necessity of female education is becoming recognized not only by the Government but also by Indians themselves, and schools for girls, entirely secular in character, are fast being opened. The probable results for women of secular and Christian education respectively have been well expressed by Miss E. R. McNeile as follows:—

> Think what it may mean twenty years hence—a body of educated women cut adrift from their old faiths, owning no moral restraints, no longer a drag on the atheistical tendencies of the men, fanning sedition, increasing unrest, and only too probably turning their newly acquired liberty into something sadly akin to licence; or, on the other hand, the same body of educated women leavened by Christian influence and Christian teaching, no longer a drag upon the groping of the nation after Christ, teaching Christianity to their children of both sexes while they still have them in the zenana at the most impressionable age, and finally, having brought their power and influence to the feet of Christ, becoming leaders for Him among their fellow-countrymen.*

Need of patience in missionary work.

Much is already being done by means of Christian schools and colleges to spread the knowledge of the Saviour in India, and although direct results in the form of baptisms may not be as numerous as might be wished, there can be no doubt whatever that a leavening influence which affects a wide area is being exercised. In the educational work, as indeed in other branches of the missionary enterprise, patience is needed. The promise is that reaping shall be in due season 'if ye faint not,' and there are considerations which seem to indicate that in India especially the grace of continuance is called for even more than at home. The Rev. W. E. S. Holland intimates that the conditions in that land are widely different from those at home, and not least in the order in which stages of religious experience or practice occur. He says: 'It would seem that in India the diffusion of Christian ethics and enlightenment is to precede baptism. In Britain it has followed baptism by centuries. Among the low-castes it is often, as over so large a part of mediæval Europe, a case of baptized paganism. With the higher castes and educated classes it is unbaptized Christianity. Anyhow, there is as much truth in that as in most epigrams. Is the development of Christian character and ideas to precede or follow baptism? Is baptism birth or graduation?' The Rev. J. N. Mukand, an Indian clergyman, in calling attention to the desirability of sustained effort in evangelistic as in other forms of work, deals with a rather different aspect of the question. He writes:—

'A slow but sure work.'

I was travelling in a train from camp to Agra with a Mohammedan sub-inspector of police. He said, 'How far are you successful in your work?' I answered, 'What is the meaning of your question? Do you think that the number of converts gained marks the success of the work?' 'No, indeed, it does not,' he replied. 'I tell you, you cannot make a man a Christian; you cannot change people's hearts; you are a means to awaken them. Yours is a very slow but sure work. You should try to soften their hard hearts and influence them; it may take years, it may even remain incomplete after a life's work; but work—sit with the people, stay longer at a place, preach and instruct them; let them see your life, and let them realize that you labour for love, and when God has opened their eyes you will get converts from among a people with whom you have made friends.' I was amazed at his words; they gave me a new vision and a fresh courage, coming as they did from a non-Christian. In the course of our talk he also asked, 'Why have your missionaries removed the worker from —— ? Though after thirty or forty years' work there are no converts, still there is no reason to be hopeless.'

* See Church Missionary Review, Aug., 1909, p. 449, 'The Opportunity of the Unrest in India'; Sept., p. 513, 'The Hope of India'; Feb., 1910, p. 65, 'Young India and the Education of Girls.'

Signs of the progress of Christianity.

The exercise of the requisite patience is facilitated by the many tokens which are forthcoming of the impression made by Christian Missions. When non-Christian newspapers declare that the 'personality of Jesus Christ is irresistibly attractive'; * when it is stated by the Bishop of Madras that during the last forty years 350,000 out-castes have become Christians in South India alone, and that the daughters of leading Brahmans, merchants and high-caste families are now being taught in mission-schools by Christian women of out-caste origin; † when a Mohammedan gentleman recognizes and rejoices that the Hindu masses are joining themselves to Christianity; ‡ when the Arya Patrika, an organ of the Arya Samaj published at Lahore, bears testimony to the power of medical missions as an evangelistic agency; § when an Indian Christian fakir in his travels about the country is demonstrating that a man need not be denationalized by the acceptance of Christianity; ‖ when in a non-Christian school in the Mysore State the pupils are taught to pray daily, 'Merciful Father of all beings, may we love and respect our fellow-men as ourselves and be ready to forgive, may we conquer envy, passion, malice and indolence'; and when Brahmans plead for female education and the abolition of purdah, and condemn child- marriage ¶—then surely it is time for the servants of the King of Kings to 'lift up their heads.' It is a hopeful sign, too, that the Indian Christian community is beginning to realize its responsibility to the national movement. The Rev. W. E. S. Holland writes on this point as follows :—

Indian Christians and the national movement.

> They are themselves recognizing that it is their own 'Europeanization' which is responsible for much of India's present repulsion from Christianity. They also see that the Church must be the conscience of the national movement, or that movement will spell disaster. It is refreshing to hear Indian Christians discussing how they can help to present Christianity to their fellow-countrymen in a way which will attract them, and make them see that Christ is as 'natural' to India as to England. The thorough identification of the Indian Christian community with Indian national feeling will remove the strongest obstacle to the acceptance of Christianity by the educated classes. Only the move must come from within the Indian Christian community.

Indigenous missionary societies.

Moreover, both the Indian Missionary Society of Tinnevelly, founded in 1903, and the National Missionary Society of India, founded in 1905, are growing in influence and developing their work. The latter has agents in the Punjab, the United Provinces and Western India; its staff consists of three missionaries and eleven helpers; and it publishes journals in English, Persian Urdu, Roman Urdu and Hindi. The Tinnevelly Society, recruited during the year by the Rev. V. S. Azariah, formerly general secretary of the National Missionary Society, has five missionaries, an industrial instructor and sixteen catechists working among the Telugus or among the Pulayars of the Western Ghats; the contributions to it increased by 50 per cent.; and the number of adherents in the Telugu Country rose from 457 to 902.*

Independent testimonies to the success of Missions.

Testimonies to the progress of Christianity in India have been borne by others besides those who are directly associated with missionary work. Sir Andrew Fraser, late Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, speaking in London, described himself as one of those who 'can speak with thankfulness to God of what they have seen in the past, and with hopefulness in regard to the future.'† Brigadier-General Wallace stated at Jabalpur that he had been in many parts of India and had found almost everywhere the Church Missionary Society carrying on a good work, and he referred to the value of the education given in its schools.‡ The Deputy-Commissioner of Lyallpur, in the Punjab, wrote to a missionary that the Christians of Montgomerywala working under his supervision at clearing silt out of the Chenab Canal were a 'credit to the Mission.' Even the opponents of Christianity bear their witness to its advance. The Maharajah of Baroda is quoted by the Rev. J. P. Haythornthwaite as writing, 'Millions have in the past been driven to desert Hinduism for the Crescent and the Cross'; a non-Christian paper, published in Lahore, says: 'The number of Christians is ever on the increase'; and a tract issued by the Arya Samaj, a sect characterized by a spirit of bitter hostility to Christianity, contains the words, 'The followers of the Prophet of Nazareth . . . are sapping the foundations of Hinduism. . . . The Christians are year after year alluring the Hindus into the fold of Christ and thinning the ranks of Hinduism. . . . Christianity is gaining ground. . . . In many parts of India . . . unbelief and Christianity are making steady progress.' §

Unhappily, the Arya Samaj in its war against Christian Missions derives some of its weapons from European sources. In a tract which the sect gives to graduates the following passage occurs :—

The Bible said to have 'fallen.'

Belief in revelation is at a discount in this age on account of the impossibilities and improbabilities with which the religious books of the West are studded. Europe, from which educated India imports not only its outer clothing but also its mental tunic, has shaken off the Bible, the only revelation with which it is familiar. The Bible in its fall has dragged down God also from the altar of educated public opinion, and His place has been usurped by agnosticism. Young India, which apes more the defects than the merits of those whom it imitates, now prides itself on its godlessness, and scoffs at divinity as well as at revelation as an unscientific superstition.

Evils of Hinduism.

The plea for more strenuous effort for the evangelization of India derives force from the nature of the lives of its peoples and the character of much of the teaching of their religions, as well as from the great opportunities of the present day. The employment of devadasis (handmaids of the god) in Hindu temples, which means prostitution in connexion with religious worship, has been prohibited by the Government of Mysore, but in British India the Penal Code, which forbids the marriage of children to gods, is evaded by providing a nominal bridegroom, sometimes another girl dressed like a boy.* But even were such terrible and conspicuous abuses abolished, the people would still suffer many evils and be destitute of any real hope. They must endure without redress any damage which may be done to them or their property by the sacred bulls ; † at Shikarpur, in North Sindh, there were no weddings among the Hindus for two years, because one of their authorities forbade them ; ‡ the conception of prayer is that it consists in the constant repetition of the name of the god they address, as shown by the inquiry of a woman, 'How shall I pray? Will it be enough to say "O Jesus Christ, I love Thee?" or must I keep on repeating His name over and over again?'; while the nature of their hope is revealed by the remark of a woman that if God was going to call her to account she would say, 'Oh, god [meaning Krishna], you have sinned, and I have sinned; if you send me to hell, you must go there too. Therefore I do not fear to sin, nor have I fear of hell;' and by the words of another: 'The god died, so we shall die too: then who will take account of our doings?' What an appeal, though unconscious, for the Gospel of Hope! §

BENGAL MISSION.

THE PAST HISTORY.

Lutheran missionaries under the S.P.C.K. laboured in South India in the eighteenth century, and many thousands of converts were baptized; but the Missions, after the death of Schwartz and other leaders, languished, and at length only a few Christians remained. For some years prior to the renewal of the East India Company's charter in 1813 no missionaries were allowed to reside within the British Dominions, and Carey, the famous Baptist missionary, and his companions had to take refuge in the Danish settlements. Among the Government chaplains, however, there were men like Brown, Buchanan, Henry Martyn, Corrie and Thomason, who did what they could to prepare the way for future workers. The C.M.S. had an important share in the establishment of the Bishopric of Calcutta in 1814 by its publication of Claudius Buchanan's work on the subject; and it granted the first Bishop, Dr. Middleton, £5,000 towards the cost of Bishop's College. His successors have been: Bishops Heber (1822), James (1826), Turner (1829), Daniel Wilson (1832), Cotton (1858), Milman (1867), Johnson (1876), Welldon (1898), Copleston (1902).

Before India was opened to missionaries, a Corresponding Committee of the C.M.S. was formed at Calcutta, of which the above-named chaplains and several influential laymen were members. Two English missionaries were sent to Calcutta in 1816; Burdwan was occupied in 1817; Krishnagar (Nadiya) in 1831; and Bhagalpur in 1850. Great interest was aroused by a remarkable movement in the Nadiya district in 1838, when some 3,000 persons forsook Heathenism and Mohammedanism, and on one occasion 900 were baptized in the presence of Bishop Daniel Wilson. Work among the Santals, an aboriginal tribe in Bengal, was begun at Hiranpur in 1860; Taljhari was occupied in 1863; Godda in 1872; and Bhagaya and Barharwa in 1878.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK.

The Bengal Mission is divided into four sections:

I. In Calcutta and Burdwan, though the cities are 100 miles apart, the Indian Christians of the C.M.S. are under the same District Church Council.

In Calcutta itself there are a number of educational institutions, including a Divinity School, a College, High Schools for boys, and a Boarding-school for Christian girls. Hostels are maintained in connexion with some of these. Evangelistic work is carried on in several languages both in the city and district, and in Bengali at Burdwan and in its villages.

II. In the Nadiya district, with its large village population, Krishnagar, Chupra, Doyabari and Bollobhpur are occupied by British missionaries, and Santirajpur is a centre from which itinerating work is maintained.

A Training School and Boys' High School are found at Krishnagar, and a Christian Boys' Boarding and Industrial School at Chupra, besides a number of vernacular schools at various places, while at Bollobhpur there is an Orphanage for Christian girls. There are also a couple of Hostels. A Medical Mission is carried on at Doyabari.

III. Work is carried on among the Santals, an aboriginal tribe, in Santalia, which lies in the Rajmahal hills, south of the Ganges, and also in a Colony in British Bhutan, north of the river. The pastoral care of the Christians is entrusted almost entirely to clergy of their own race. The Society has Boarding-schools for boys at Taljhari and Godda and one for girls at Barharwa. At Godda there is also a Hostel for Santals.

IV. At Bhagalpur, in the Province of Behar, the institutions include a High School and Christian Hostel for boys, a Middle Vernacular School for boys and girls, a Boarding-school for Christian girls, a Boys' Orphanage, a Dispensary and a Leper Asylum, while at Jamalpur there is the Fraser Hostel for Indian Christian apprentices. A band of evangelists itinerates in the extensive district.

The women's work, save in Santalia, is mainly in the hands of missionaries of the C.E.Z.M.S.

There are twenty-five European clergy engaged in the Mission, five laymen, eighteen wives of missionaries, and six single women. Two of the above are doctors, and one is a trained nurse. The Indian workers consist of twenty-three clergy and 363 Christian lay agents.

The following are the members of the Calcutta Corresponding Committee: The Bishop of Calcutta, Sir C. G. H. Allen, Dr. P. N. Bose, Mr. W. R. C. Gourlay, Hon. Justice Caspersz, Hon. E. P. Chapman, Mr. J. C. Dutt, Hon. R. J. Greer, Mr. F. G. Hawkins, Mr. W. A. A. Wood, Revs. J. A. Cullen, Dr. C. G. Monro and E. T. Sandys (Secretary).

Death of Rev. P. H. Shaul,

THE death of the Rev. P. H. Shaul, which occurred at Nischintapur on May 28, 1909, has caused a great blank among the workers in the Nadiya District. Mr. Shaul was one of a band of three Islington students who in 1889 responded to an appeal to go to Bengal as associated lay evangelists. For fourteen years he did good work in and around Shikarpur, and then farther south, in the Nadiya district. When he returned to India from his second furlough, ordained and married, in 1904, he was stationed for a time at Krishnagar, and early in 1907 he was appointed chairman of the Nadiya District Church Council. His death appears to have been due to injuries which he received during a riot at Santipur in 1906, when, going forward to protect a woman missionary, he was hit on the head.* The Rev. E. T. Sandys, the Secretary of the Mission, wrote on June 2, shortly after Mr. Shaul's death :—

> He left Bollobhpur on his way to Calcutta on business and to see a doctor. For some time past he had complained of pain in the head, especially where he had that severe blow at Santipur. . . . After riding over to Nischintapur he had a long and trying day with the Roman Catholic priests and Roman Catholic Collector, who want to get land at Kapasdanga to build a church close to ours. . . . All through dinner Shaul was just his bright, happy self. . . . Suddenly his head fell forward and he was gone. . . .

Rev. E. L. Puxley,

Two former workers in the Bengal Mission have been called to their eternal rest. The Rev. E. L. Puxley, who passed away at Merton, Surrey, on June 30, 1909, was a graduate of Brasenose College, Oxford, and had been an officer in the 4th Light Dragoons when he offered his services to the Society as an honorary missionary in 1860. He was the first missionary to take up his residence among the Santals. He retired owing to ill-health in 1866.

and Mrs. A. W. Crockett.

Mrs. A. W. Crockett, who died on September 1, 1909, accompanied her husband when he joined the Bengal Mission in 1895. The state of his health obliged them to return to England after some eighteen months' service, and eventually to retire.

Reinforcement.

Only one recruit has been allotted to the Mission, viz., the Rev. Ernest Bell Sharpe, of Islington College, L.Th., Durham. The Committee have accepted the resignations of the Revs. J. Brown (after forty-one years' service), E. T. Butler, D. M. Brown and I. W. Charlton, and of Misses E. M. and R. A. Brown. Mr. H. J. Weston has retired on the expiration of his agreement.

Special meetings for students.

A series of special meetings for students was conducted in Calcutta in August, 1909, by Mr. Sherwood Eddy, Travelling

* See Annual Report, 1906–7, p. 149.

Secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association in India. The general subject was 'National Ideals,' and on successive nights the lecturer dealt with 'Patriotism,' 'Ambition,' 'Religion,' 'Character' and 'Service.' Each night the hall was crowded, the audience ranging in number from 650 to 850, and some taking their places an hour before the meeting began in order to secure a good seat. A dozen men professed their willingness to accept Christ, and more than 300 pledged themselves to read or re-read the Gospels with prayer and with an open and honest mind.* The C.M.S. missionaries were asked to follow up eighty of these. In some cases it was found that an incorrect address had been given; in others the men were already studying the Bible; while in more than twenty a desire was expressed to join a Bible-class. Arrangements were made to meet their wishes, but, unhappily, very few attended the classes.

Educational Work.

Divinity School.

THE Divinity School, Calcutta, began the year with nine students, three of whom completed their course and left, two for work, in Hindi and Bengali respectively, in Howrah, a suburb of Calcutta, and the third to labour among the villages in Nadiya. When the Principal, the Rev. A. G. Lockett, left for England his place was taken by the Rev. P. Biswas, an Indian clergyman. The High School, which is for sons of Christians, had 110 names on its roll, a larger number than ever before, and several lads had to be refused admission because of the lack of accommodation—a fact the more to be regretted seeing that in non-Christian schools the lads run great danger of contracting vicious habits. As far as could be judged, a good tone prevailed among the boys; some of them conducted meetings for prayer and Bible-study among themselves, while several expressed their determination to give themselves to missionary work, a vocation which has been adopted by twenty per cent. of the former pupils. All the lads who sat for the Entrance Examination of the Calcutta University succeeded in passing, and two of them were placed in the first class. The school did well in athletics also, carrying off for the sixth time in seven years the medal awarded at the Calcutta Athletic Sports for the best athlete in Bengal. There was a slight falling off in the number of boarders at the Girls' Boarding-school, but an increase in day-scholars. Most of the girls are the daughters of Christian parents, but five are young widows, converts from Hinduism; one of these, who when she entered the school early in 1908 was completely ignorant about Christianity, was baptized at the beginning of the school year. As at the Boys' High School, all the pupils (four in number) who sat for the University Entrance Examination were successful. There is a hostel in connexion with the school, with six students, who are reading for their Intermediate or B.A. Examination at the Government College in an adjoining compound.

Pastoral Work.

One branch of the pastoral work is seeking to shield the Christians from the temptations by which they are surrounded, and especially to protect the young people from the inducements to impurity. The hostel just mentioned is serviceable to this end, as is another hostel, one for Christian boys, which is maintained in connexion with the Hindi work, and is increasingly appreciated. Little is said concerning the character of the Indian Christians who are banded together under the Calcutta District Native Church Council, established in 1886.* In that year the grant of the Parent Committee amounted to Rs. 2,380; in 1909, though more work was being carried on, the grant was only Rs. 737, the balance required being made up by the Indian Christians. Many of them, however, are backward in the spiritual life, and the young men are somewhat lacking in zeal for the evangelization of others; but at St. Mark's Church some of them formed themselves into a 'Band of Faith' to assist the pastor in various ways. In 1909 the Council assumed the pastoral charge of the Christians at Howrah and Bosekati, to whom the S.P.G. had previously ministered, that Society in return assuming responsibility for the work at Thakurpukur and Diamond Harbour.

Growth in contributions of Christians.

Evangelistic Work.

Evangelistic work in Calcutta is insignificant in comparison with the requirements. The population of the city is given as 950,000, of whom 615,000 are Hindus and 286,000 are Mohammedans. Such work as is accomplished is directed largely to the student class and to women; indeed, it is stated that although 625,000 of the people of Calcutta are males and only 325,000 are females, yet there are quite as many (if not more) zenana missionaries in the city as there are missionaries engaged in all other kinds of work put together.† The C.M.S. works in three languages—viz., Bengali, which is spoken by 435,000 persons; Hindi, by 318,000; and Hindustani, by 24,000. Six adults were baptized in connexion with the Hindustani work. One of them was a middle-aged Pathan who was brought to the knowledge of the Saviour by another convert from Islam; his conversion led to marked hostility on the part of the moulvis of his neighbourhood, who had previously been very friendly.‡ Among other converts were three lepers, and also a woman, the fruit of the work of the

C.E.Z.M.S. at Mankar, in the Burdwan district.* Most of those who professed to be inquirers were found to be actuated by desire for material benefits.

II. THE NADIYA DISTRICT.

Mission-buildings destroyed in a cyclone.

THE Nadiya district suffered severely in a cyclone on October 17, 1909. The wind blew with hurricane force for thirty-six hours, and was accompanied by heavy rain; this caused the collapse of many of the mission-buildings, which were constructed of unbaked bricks or mud.

Medical Work.

Bright witness of a Brahman convert.

Among the places which suffered was Doyabari, where very few of the twenty-five beds in the hospital are ever vacant. The outstanding event of the year there was the baptism of a young Brahman from Behar, who afterwards in the hospital bore bright witness to his faith, dealing personally with almost every patient. His mother and an elder brother travelled 500 miles to win him back to Hinduism, but they soon recognized that it was useless to trouble him. The Rev. Dr. C. G. Monro says of him, 'It is a pleasure to know and see a life like this young man's.' Another man, a former patient, who had asked for baptism and had gone to his home to fetch away his wife and child, returned without them, but bringing with him two young men whom he had taught. Among other inquirers as fruit of the work at the hospital and dispensary were two women who were sent away to another station to be further instructed, and a blind high-caste man from Behar, who not only regained his sight but also became an earnest seeker after truth. Some medical itinerations were made which enabled a large number of people to be reached.†

Educational Work.

Eight of the twelve students at the Training School at Krishnagar passed the Government Certificate Examination, and all the High School boys who sat for the Matriculation Examination of Calcutta University were successful. The Boys' Boarding-school at Chupra, too, did well in examinations, especially in the Middle Vernacular. The workshop at that station employs sixty men and boys, who turned out more than Rs. 9,000 worth of work in the course of the year.

Pastoral Work.

There was no diminution in the trouble arising from the proselytizing efforts of the Roman Catholics which were spoken of in last year's Report,‡ but happily the majority of the converts resisted the bribes held out as inducements to join that communion. Although the Christians are not strong in character, many of them are 'steady, good-living men and women'; and while they are not free from the sins common among their neighbours, they differ from them in that they regard the sins as shameful. One convert in particular is commended, a former cook in the hospital at Chupra, who preaches without the slightest fear, and is a 'wonderful man among the common people.'

Evangelistic Work.

Two families, consisting of eight persons in all, were received into the visible Church at Shikarpur in February, 1909, and a Hindu barrister in the Kapasdanga district was led by the death of his only son to inquire into Christianity.* One difficulty in the way of evangelistic work is the undermanned condition of the mission staff. Many of the villages in the Ranaghat district can only be visited once in six years, and others have not been visited at all; while the Central Itinerancy, of which a man has again after a long interval been placed in charge, is in even worse case. Seeing how short a time any missionary is able to spend in one spot during an itineration, and the long intervals between his visits, what wonder is it that converts are few? The missionaries were not always welcomed when they did go to the villages, for the people for the most part are satisfied with their own religions; but still there were some instances of real readiness to listen to the Gospel. On one occasion the workers had an almost unique opportunity. During a mela held near Krishnagar arrangements were made by those who organized it for a puja, bearing the name of a 'puja for the good of everybody.' In keeping with the name, the C.M.S. workers were allowed to preach and show the magic-lantern every evening for two hours on the stage erected for the puja.

A remarkable opportunity.

III. SANTALIA.

Semi-centennial of the Santal Mission.

FIFTY years have now passed since the Santal Mission was set on foot by the late Rev. E. L. Puxley, who took up his residence in 1860 at a village in Santalia, called Hiranpur. Some efforts had previously been made to carry the Gospel to the Santals, who are an aboriginal tribe living between and around the Rajmahal Hills south of the Ganges, by means of schools opened by the Rev. E. Droese in their country, and in 1859 the Rev. T. E. Hallett was sent to Bhagalpur, whence he itinerated among them; but he soon broke down, and the Santal Mission was not formally established until Mr. Puxley at his own request (for he had been assigned to Lucknow) went to Hiranpur.

Evangelistic Work.

The development of the Mission, which is carried on over an area of 2,500 square miles, has been uneven. The district includes several ranges of hills which, running north and south, cut off the eastern slopes and lowlands from the western. The eastern side, with its three stations, Taljhari, Barharwa and Hiranpur, not far from the railway, has enjoyed a greater continuity of the missionary staff than the western side with mission-stations at Bhagaya and Godda, the last-named being forty miles from the line. This explains, partly, how it came about that when, after thirty years' work, it was determined to introduce a degree of self-administration into the Native Church, the Native Church Council was inaugurated on the eastern (Taljhari) side only, and not on the western (Godda) side. At that juncture the more advanced (eastern) side of the Mission showed a roll of 2,320 Christians with 764 communicants and sixty-two native workers, while the western side counted only 748 Christians with 169 communicants and thirty-five native workers.* In the last twenty years there has been marked advance in the better-manned districts. They now contain upwards of 4,000 Christians, whereas the western districts, covering the larger area (1,500 square miles), with an average of 440 souls to the square mile, has only some thirty more converts than twenty years ago. Unhappily, there does not appear to be much prospect of any immediate growth in the latter portion of the Mission. The situation is graphically described by Mr. S. J. Jessop in the following passage from his annual letter. He writes :—

* See the C.M.S. Gazette, July, 1909, p. 209; Sept., p. 273.

A great work carried on with small means.

For all branches of the native work and workers, our monthly income from the C.M.S. is Rs. 346, equal to £23 1*s.* 4*d.* The existing work comprises ten out-stations and congregations ; thirty village schools, twenty-one Santal and nine Pahari schools ; a Pahari boarding-school (middle vernacular) with a Santal hostel attached to it, in all 164 scholars ; one preachers' training class ; dispensary work ; evangelistic work ; women's classes ; and Sunday-schools. Altogether there are sixty-nine workers, including those in training.

When we take into consideration the immense district and the thousands of unevangelized souls, it is seen that the above modest sum does not allow much to be allocated for opening up these large areas. The benignant Government allows us grants on school-work, but for no other branch can we look for help from them.

Mr. Jessop goes on to refer to the effects of retrenchment, which obliged him to dismiss two of the Indian agents, and says :—

Is it realized what this means—the taking away of a man, and leaving a congregation of souls without a shepherd ? What happens ? They scatter, and perhaps wander back to a state of Heathenism, from which it has taken years to win them, for they are still only babes in Christianity. One of the workers dismissed is a man of some years' standing, and during the past year God has greatly blessed and used him to the conversion of many souls at a place where we are just on the point of finishing a new church, and where within the last few months thirty-two souls from Heathenism have been baptized. For the sake of ten shillings and eightpence a month this worker had to be dismissed.

A little advance, however, was made by opening an out-station in the Alwara district, south of Godda, which, though left to the C.M.S. in accordance with missionary comity, has not had an evangelist for forty-eight years. The results of such work as it was possible to maintain were good. At every station on the western side of the Mission some baptisms were recorded, and besides a number of children, thirty-eight adult converts from Heathenism were received into the visible Church at Bhatonda. On the eastern side 106 adults received baptism, several of them being the fruit of the efforts of the converts themselves.

Numerous adult baptisms.

Pastoral Work.

In many respects the character of the Santal Christians affords cause for deep thankfulness. They are surrounded by many temptations and trials. The Rev. D. M. Brown, writes :—

Trials and temptations.

> Village life is the co-operation and association, in many matters, of the whole community. The solitary, or almost solitary, Christian must be with, but not of, them. They drink collectively; he must abstain. They all dance; he must not. They, as a village, support the traditional heathenish customs; he must refuse to do so. They revel together at stated festivals; he must dissociate himself from his own race for communion with a new brotherhood which, in many parts, is scarcely in evidence at all. The heathen medicine-men, with some good in their skill and much evil in their sorcery, are not permissible to him; yet any other medical treatment may often be absolutely beyond his reach. Helpless grief for a dying child has sometimes driven the despairing convert back into the arms of heathen helpers.

But notwithstanding all the ostracism which the confession of Christ involves, and the temptations with which the converts are surrounded, Mr. Brown is able to speak of those who fall as 'exceptions' to the happier type of Santal Christian.' * In this connexion may be mentioned a little episode which occurred at Krishnagar. Some thefts occurred in the High School Hostel at that station, and it was decided that the boxes of all the inmates should be searched, but Christians and Mohammedans alike agreed that the boxes of the Santal Christian boys need not be examined, so high was their reputation for honesty and truthfulness.

Educational Work.

A Preachers' Training Class was set on foot at Godda in 1909, and had seven members. The Boys' Boarding-school at that station has been raised to the Middle English standard, and eight of the ten students who sat for examination in the new grade were successful. The Girls' Boarding-school at Barharwa, which for years was under the superintendence of Mrs. F. T. Cole, had a good record for 1909 as regards both tone and conduct, notwithstanding the absence for three months through ill-health of Mrs. R. Ayres, who was in charge; it also gained a satisfactory report in the Government inspection.

IV. BEHAR.

Educational Work.

GREAT progress has been made at the High School at Bhagalpur since 1903, when it was removed from its old quarters in the suburb of Champanagar. When it was opened at Bhagalpur in June of that year the number of boys on the roll was forty-one. Now there are four departments—the High School, Commercial Institution, and two hostels—with a total of 280 students. The Middle School, too, which occupies the old premises of the High School, improved greatly in 1909 under a new headmaster, and gained a capital report from the inspector. All the boys belonging to the Orphanage, as well as a number of others, are there educated. The Girls' Boarding-school, which taught up to the Upper Primary Standard and was commended by the inspectress, has been raised to the standard of a Middle School. Two of the girls, converts from Hinduism, were baptized during the year.

Medical Work.

Another institution at Bhagalpur is the dispensary, under the charge of an Indian doctor, which registered 25,000 visits of out-patients, and does an excellent work at small cost to the Society. The missionaries have the care also of a leper asylum; nine men, four women and three boys among the inmates were baptized in the autumn.*

Itinerating Work.

In the work at these institutions, and also in the evangelistic work, in which the Rev. H. Perfect had the help of ten Indian preachers, to whom he gives some instruction in the Bible, Church history, etc., the greatest harmony prevailed between the native and foreign labourers. Several itinerations were made, and the people were ready enough to listen to the addresses. The preachers received a special invitation to visit another village, called Maheshmanda, and the inhabitants of the place, after receiving some instruction in Christianity, discharged their moulvi, telling him that they were going to learn from the Christians. A large number of Scripture portions and Christian books were sold during the year, and two cases occurred in which the Word of God played a conspicuous part in leading men to inquire into Christianity. The first was that of a Brahman, who had bought and read a New Testament, and afterwards hearing the preaching in the bazaar, recognized the teaching as the same as that of the book, and therefore followed the preachers secretly to their house. He showed great interest in what he heard, and declared his intention of becoming a Christian as soon as the way opened. Of the second man, through whom the evangelists received the invitation to the village just mentioned, Mr. Perfect writes :—

Moslems exchange their moulvi for a Christian teacher.

Reading the Bible gives a new impression of Christianity.

He had known some professing Christians whose lives were anything but Christian, and from seeing their conduct had come to the conclusion that Christians were a wicked lot. Travelling one day from Bhagalpur to Pirpainti, at Colgong Station a Babu, whom he did not then know, offered some books for sale, one of which, the Gospel of St. Matthew, he bought and read. The book interested him and gave him an altogether new impression of what Christianity was, though there were parts of it he could not fully understand. Shortly afterwards he went to Colgong to take up work there, and sought out the Babu (Jayanti Prashad) who had sold him the book. He gradually became more and more interested and began reading and studying the Gospels regularly, comparing them with the Koran. He told me that he was now convinced that there was no Saviour except Jesus Christ, that he now believes that Christ is divine, and that he is only waiting to talk to his wife, who is living in Bhagalpur, so that he, she and his son may all be baptized together.

UNITED PROVINCES MISSION.

THE PAST HISTORY.

The Society's first agent in India was stationed in the United Provinces. He was a native, Abdul Masih, Henry Martyn's solitary convert from Mohammedanism, and he was placed at Agra, under Corrie's auspices, in 1813. Abdul Masih was ordained in 1826 by Bishop Heber, being thus the first Indian clergyman of the Church of England. Meerut was occupied in 1815; Benares, 1817; Gorakhpur, 1823; Azimgarh and Jaunpur, 1831; Lucknow, 1858; Allahabad and Dehra Dun, 1859; Faizabad, 1862; Aligarh, 1863; and Muttra, 1878. A remarkable work was done by W. Smith and C. B. Leupolt at Benares, which began in 1832. In 1853, St. John's College at Agra was opened as a High School by T. V. French (subsequently Bishop of Lahore) and E. C. Stuart (subsequently Bishop of Waiapu, and afterwards in Persia). The Sepoy Mutiny of 1857 destroyed much of the Society's property, but the deep interest aroused by it caused a great extension of the work. Lucknow was occupied immediately on its re-conquest, on the invitation of the Chief Commissioner, Sir R. Montgomery. Allahabad was also occupied, and Christian villages established there and at Gorakhpur. In 1892 a new diocese (Lucknow) was formed for Oudh and the Jhansi Division of the United Provinces, the Bishop (Dr. A. Clifford, previously a C.M.S. missionary at Calcutta) having also, by consensual jurisdiction, episcopal supervision over the remainder of the United Provinces. Dr. Clifford retired in 1909, and the Rev. Canon G. H. Westcott has been appointed to succeed him. In 1903 another new diocese (Nagpur), with Dr. Eyre Chatterton as Bishop, was formed, including the Central Provinces and Rajputana, and certain 'assigned districts' of Hyderabad.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK.

I. The C.M.S. has ten chief stations in the Province of Agra. They may be regarded as forming three groups, viz., Allahabad, Benares, Azimgarh and Gorakhpur, in the south-east of the Province; Agra, Muttra, Aligarh and Meerut, in the west; and Mussourie and Annfield, in the hills to the north-west.

The educational institutions include a Divinity School and the Oxford and Cambridge Hostel for students at Allahabad; St. John's College, with Hostels for Christian, Hindu and Mohammedan students at Agra; St. Andrew's College and High School at Gorakhpur; High Schools for boys at Agra, Benares (Jay Narayan's School), Jaunpur, Azimgarh and Meerut; a Girls' Normal School at Benares; the Queen Victoria High School for Christian girls at Agra; and Orphanages at Benares and Sikandra; besides a number of middle and elementary schools.

Itinerating is carried on among the numerous villages, notably those in the plains around Allahabad, Agra, Aligarh and Meerut.

II. In the Province of Oudh there are two stations, viz., Lucknow and Faizabad. A Boys' High School is carried on at Lucknow. Special attention is given to evangelistic work among Mohammedans in Lucknow, and tours are made in the villages of that and of the Faizabad and Sultanpur districts.

Medical work in the Mission is almost entirely in the hands of the Z.B.M.M., which also engages in women's work in close co-operation with the C.M.S. The latter Society, however, has women missionaries working in the zenanas at many of the stations.

The staff of the Mission consists of thirty-five European clergy, fourteen Indian clergy, six laymen, twenty-nine wives of missionaries (two of them doctors), thirty-three single women, and 316 Indian Christian lay agents.

The following are the members of the Allahabad Corresponding Committee: The Bishop of Lucknow, Sir G. E. Knox, Mr. Gardiner-Brown, Mr. E. G. Hill, D.Sc., Mr. H. R. Nevill, I.C.S., and the Revs. P. H. Chapman, H. B. Durrant, J. P. Haythornthwaite, W. E. S. Holland and E. H. M. Waller (Secretary).

Retirement of Bishop Clifford.

AFTER thirty-six years of arduous service in India, nineteen of them as a missionary of the C.M.S., Bishop Clifford has felt obliged to retire from the see of Lucknow. He has accepted the incumbency of St. Mary, Stoke Bishop, in the diocese of Bristol.

Reinforcements.

The Mission has been reinforced by the Rev. Leonard Ashby, M.A., Christ's College, Cambridge, and Ridley Hall, curate of St. Mary's, Leyton, who as a layman was on the staff of the Gond Mission from 1899–1904, and Mrs. Ashby; and by Mr. Philip Embury Curtis, who has been accepted as a C.M.S. missionary in local connexion, and Mrs. Curtis. The Mission has gained also by the transference of the Rev. S. Susunkur from Mauritius. On the other hand, Miss E. R. Hall has been transferred to the Central Provinces Mission. The Committee have also accepted the resignation of the Rev. A. W. Baumann, who first sailed for India in 1869.

I. PROVINCE OF AGRA.

Educational Work.

Divinity School.

THE Divinity School, Allahabad, had two men reading for ordination, six for the senior catechists' grade, and nine for that of junior catechist. A former student, the Rev. P. C. Chattree, was admitted to priests' orders in the spring of 1909.

Oxford and Cambridge Hostel.

The popularity of the Oxford and Cambridge Hostel at Allahabad continued unabated, as shown by the fact that 186 applications for admission were received, when there were only twenty-six vacancies. In order to meet as far as possible the imperative demands for extension, arrangements have been made to provide eighteen additional students' rooms, as well as a large hall capable of seating 250 people; and the foundation-stone of this extension was laid by the Metropolitan of India in November. Only two of the students, both of them converts from Mohammedanism, are baptized Christians; but many of the men are of their own accord studying the Bible with the missionaries, though they are deterred from openly joining the Christian Church. The Warden, the Rev. W. E. S. Holland, wrote in December, 1909, of three of these men:—

> They are really strong characters with the gift of leadership, men filled with patriotic fervour, and the passion to serve and help to lift their country. They are men, too, whose hearts have been deeply touched by Jesus Christ, who have felt His appeal and heard His calls, who have seen in Him God's light and God's salvation, and yet are repelled from forsaking their people and joining a body of foreigners, and are desperately wondering whether these things are only to be had in Christ. Will not a reformed Hinduism, re-understood in the light of modern advance, give India what she wants? Must India be de-Hinduized—which to them means de-Indianized?
> Only this morning I was telling a visitor that I believed that a quarter of our men were 'converted' if judged by the tests we apply in Christian England. If only some of their trusted leaders by becoming Christian, while remaining Indian as before, would demonstrate the consistency of Christianity with Indian nationalism, there would be a movement of the educated classes into the Church so gigantic that it could only be described as a landslide.

Character-forming.

While as regarded visible accessions to the Church the work at the hostel had to be carried on in faith, the missionaries had much to cheer them as concerned the important task of character-forming. There has been a marked development of grit and sense of responsibility among the men. It was a former inmate of the hostel who closed with the murderer of Sir Curzon Wyllie at the Imperial Institute in London, and who with two other Indian gentlemen organized a meeting shortly afterwards to express sympathy with Lady Wyllie. Another former hosteller, writing anonymously in the Hostel Magazine, enumerated as follows the benefits which he had derived from his residence at the hostel :— A former hosteller's testimony.

> [The hostel] taught me to work disinterestedly without a selfish motive for anything, especially in the work of a public cause. . . . Above all, it protected me very magnificently from one of the deadliest sins, viz., impurity, which is not an uncommon plague in the student world to-day. . . . I have to add that it is my sincere prayer to God that my debt to the hostel may be ever fresh in my mind, and that He may help me to build the edifice of character for which the hostel has laid a solid foundation.

May it not also be regarded as symptomatic of the changes which the spirit of the hostel is working that at the annual social gathering almost all the students and many former hostellers dined together, and that at the table at which the Rev. N. H. Tubbs was seated he had as his companions three Brahmans, two Kayasthas,* two Mohammedans and three Christians ? So unique was the dinner that a report gained credence in the bazaar that twenty of the men were about to embrace Christianity ! †

The number on the roll of the College Department of St. John's College, Agra, which was 222 on January 1, 1908, and rose to 245 in the next twelve months, further increased during the year under review to 260. In the Business Department, which is now self-supporting, there has been an even greater proportional increase ; while in the Collegiate School,‡ although the number of boys (650) returned is somewhat lower than in the two previous years, the diminution is due to the transference of the primary section to the branch schools, and there were in reality more boys reading in the High and Middle sections than ever before, in spite of the raising of the fees in all the higher classes, which in some are now in advance of those levied in Government High Schools. Since the college is the leading educational institution of the Society in India, it may be of interest to give a detailed list of the examination successes gained by the students. They were as follows : One man passed the M.A. Examination (Previous) in philosophy ; three passed the B.Sc. in biology, physics and chemistry ; twenty-four passed the B.A. in English literature, economics or history or philosophy, and a classical language—i.e., Persian, Arabic or Sanskrit—or mathematics, as these are the selections which students are allowed to make. Thirty students were also successful in passing the Intermediate Examination in either course 'A' or 'B.' Those who take 'A' are required to pass in English, a classical language, history, and logic or mathematics; while those who take 'B' must pass in English, mathematics, physics and chemistry. The results of examinations in secular subjects are easier to record than those of the spiritual work, but the Rev. J. P. Haythornthwaite is able to report that one of the Mohammedan masters is an earnest inquirer, and that the moral tone of the college, notwithstanding some much-to-be-regretted delinquencies, is steadily improving. He writes :—

Improving moral tone.

As an instance of the rise in a sense of honour, I may mention how pleased I have been for some years now, when at the morning 'roll-call' a student declares that he was 'absent' when called upon to explain his failure to respond to his name on the previous day. At one time the reply was usually 'Late,' a reply which, if untrue, was difficult to detect. The penalty for being 'absent' is a fine of four annas, i.e., fourpence, and for being 'late' it is only two annas. This may seem a small matter from some points of view, as an English boy in a public school would scorn a deception of this kind, and would be made to feel his cowardliness by his class-fellows if he told a lie in order to escape a 'licking' or other penalty. But in India it is different: to lie is easy, and to lie cleverly would meet with approbation rather than condemnation. It takes a considerable amount of moral courage to honestly say 'Absent,' knowing it will involve a fine of four annas, when a lie is so easy and involves so little loss of respect.*

An old boy, Syed Ali Nabi, has been elected to the Legislative Council of the United Provinces.

St. Andrew's College.

St. Andrew's College, Gorakhpur, has thirty-five men in the Collegiate Department, and the Collegiate School is crowded out and applicants for admission have to be refused, notwithstanding the transfer of the primary department to another building.

High Schools.

There are four C.M.S. High Schools for boys in the Province of Agra besides those already mentioned—viz., at Benares (Jay Narayan's School), Jaunpur, Azimgarh and Meerut. The last-named school obtained permission, which thus far has been very sparingly granted, to enter boys for the school-leaving Certificate Examination; this is intended to take the place of the Matriculation Examination, and will have to be passed by all candidates seeking subordinate posts in Government offices. Connected with the school are two hostels, one for Christians and the other for non-Christians, in which so good an influence is exercised over the boys that it is exceptional for any of them to be given a bad school report. A hostel has now been opened in connexion with Jay Narayan's School at Benares. An old boy of the Azimgarh School was baptized at another station at Christmas, 1909. Among the Middle Schools the largest is that at Alinagar, a ward of Gorakhpur, where many of the 230 boys are the sons of influential men in the city. The Swinton Memorial School in that same city has passed all but five of the fifty-nine candidates sent up for the Vernacular Middle Examination in the last four years. Six of the pupils at the little boarding-school at Jeyi were baptized during the year, and a happy account is given of a former pupil, who afterwards entered the High School at Meerut, where he died in November. The Rev. L. C. Perfumi tells his story as follows :—

A transformed life.

He must have been about twelve years of age ; I had got hold of him five years previously. He was then as bad as a boy of his age well could be. I was for some months at a loss how to win him from his evil ways to Jesus ; but at last he was won over, and from the moment he surrendered his heart to his Saviour there was no more going back for him. He was, in God's hands, the means of bringing two other boys into the Christian faith. On his death-bed the house-father of the Christian Boys' Hostel asked him, in the presence of his sorrowful heathen mother, whether he still believed and trusted in the Chuhra Hindu deity, Lal Beg. His reply to this was 'No.' Further questioned as to whether he believed in and trusted the Lord Jesus Christ alone, a faint smile hovered upon his lips, and in answering 'Yes' he closed his eyes on this world, to open them face to face with his Lord and Master Whom he had learned to love.

Girls' Schools.

Two of the girls at the Girls' Normal School at Benares completed their course, leaving eight under training at the close of the year. Three Normal students at the Queen Victoria High School at Agra passed their examinations and took up posts under the Mission ; two of them went to Azimgarh, and Miss E. A. Luce wrote that all through the hot weather she never saw them discontented or 'put out,' and that they had been an 'untold help' to her. The school, which has the names of eighty-nine girls (all but three of them Christians) on its roll, made such good progress that increased help was received from the Government, and consequently part of the grant from the Society could be relinquished. A good report was also received from the diocesan inspector, who stated that 'the children seem to have grasped the spiritual and practical bearing of the Bible-teaching.' A Girls' Boarding-school was opened at Meerut in February, 1909,* with about twenty day-scholars and three boarders ; the boarding accommodation was soon increased so that twenty-six girls might be received, and at once there were many more applications for admission than could be granted. A change has been made in the arrangements for the reception of orphans in the Mission. The Orphanage at Gorakhpur has been closed, and the boys are now concentrated at Sikandra, and the girls at Sigra (Benares).

Orphanages.

Elementary schools.

In addition to the secondary schools there are a number of elementary schools in the Mission, many of them for girls. The boys' school at Anupshahr, in the Aligarh district, has done much to remove prejudice. In 1907 the tahsildar sent his boys to it, endeavouring, but in vain, to stipulate that they should not be taught

* See C.M. Gleaner, June, 1909, p. 164.

A school removes prejudice against Christianity.

Christianity. Six months later those same boys made lanterns on which they wrote Bible texts; then, putting lights inside, they hung them about the city on Christmas night! A Mohammedan pupil at this school has lately been baptized. In this work, however, a good deal of opposition is often encountered. At Ghaziabad the teacher of the Arya Samaj school does not scruple to use every means, fair or foul, to entice the children away from the Society's school; at Agra, coercion and bribery were employed to induce the parents to withdraw their daughters from the mission-school in favour of the Arya Samaj institution; and at Aligarh the C.M.S. schools suffered not only from competition by Hindus and Mohammedans, but also by their decoying away the elder girls. The Hindu schools, Mrs. E. Rait says, 'do not trouble about beginners, but openly say that they leave us to do the grounding and hard work.' There are compensations in this resolve, for many of the children before they leave the mission-schools can read fluently and have committed much of the Bible to memory; while some, it may be trusted, are true Christians at heart. Thus Mrs. Rait tells of a former pupil in a mission-school, now a widow, who never goes anywhere without her Bible; and Miss E. Stroelin, of Meerut, states that 'there are many proofs that the daily Bible-teaching and Christian influence have not been in vain.'

Opposition from the Arya Samaj.

Evangelistic Work.

In the reports of the zenana work there is some mention of opposition at the hands of the Arya Samajists, who are very bitter, and also, at Meerut, of the Chaubis, a class of priests who go to different places and collect pilgrims, whom they afterwards escort; since the ignorant people are willing to do or give anything in the hope of earning salvation, the priests find their occupation lucrative, and it is hardly surprising that they should be hostile to those who preach full and free salvation through Christ. Openings, however, were gained in many new zenanas in that city, among others in that of a Brahman priest; while at Ahraura, in the Benares district, where Mrs. W. H. Gray stayed for a short time, on her farewell visit she was surrounded and dragged into zenanas, the inmates of which entreated her to teach them. At another village in the Meerut district, where in the spring of 1909 the doors were shut in the faces of the workers, the people afterwards became friendly, and the leading men even begged that a mission girls' school might be opened. At a third place, abounding in temples and idols, the women were anxious to learn. 'Come again soon' was the frequent remark. 'If not, how can we learn?' Many of those who were thus reached in their dark homes appeared to be influenced by the Gospel. In one village the men raised objections to the Bible-woman continuing her visits on the ground that their 'women's hearts changed'; at Meerut a woman abandoned the worship of idols, and there were signs of the Holy Spirit's working in the hearts of many others. Miss M. H. Laurence expresses her belief that at Ghaziabad 'the leaven is working, and in many a woman's and girl's heart the old beliefs are quite dead, and the seed of Life is quickening'; while at Mussourie several women expressed themselves as willing to accept Christ as their Saviour but for their husbands. The movement to hold purdah parties, such as that at Agra which was described in last year's Report,* is slowly gaining ground at Benares, and has resulted in the forging of bonds of real friendship between English and Indian ladies.

'Women's hearts changed.'

The general evangelistic work was carried on as in previous years by open-air preaching in the towns and villages, and advantage was taken of the special opportunities afforded by the frequent occurrence of melas. These were attended by the missionaries and their Indian helpers, who, though unable to address large crowds at a time, yet found many openings for conversations with individuals. Miss A. E. Lowick writes of her experiences of the mela at Garmuktesar as follows:—

Experiences at a mela.

Round bail-garis, close to little booths of matting and bamboos, under improvised tents of two poles and a piece of cloth, pressed on all sides by eager women, at times dodging to avoid the horns of the oxen or the feet of horses and donkeys—always in close proximity—with hardly a moment's intermission, we told the pilgrims the 'good news.' In some cases we were waved aside. The old sas had just bathed in the sacred river, and our presence would pollute her again; or the women were singing in honour of Ganza Ji; or perhaps the men were eating their food. We were surprised to find that the people sometimes said, 'Go, we don't want the Arya Samaj.' When we said we were Christians, then they eagerly asked for bhajans. Many women seemed riveted by the Gospel story, and we longed to be able to follow such up to their distant villages—probably totally unevangelized.

A tour in native style.

Besides the ordinary methods of work, an unusual plan was tried for a short time by the Revs. W. E. S. Holland and N. H. Tubbs. Accompanied by three Indian Christians, they made a four days' tour in the villages of the Allahabad district, living in native style, and the 'luggage' of each missionary consisting only of a couple of blankets, a towel, a tooth-brush, a Greek Testament and Prayer-book, and a change of inner garments. They, however, arrived at the conclusion that while such a manner of living and working might be possible for some Europeans for a few days at a time, it was impracticable as a general method.† In the district just named there was a more decided spirit of inquiry than in previous years, and from other parts of the Province the existence of distinct openings—of which, alas! but little use could be made—is reported. In the neighbourhood of Ghaziabad there were 'several very promising villages, but no one could be spared to visit them'; around Aligarh, in village after village the workers met with attentive audiences and something like a hunger after God; and in the Agra district the people almost invariably received the evangelists with friendliness. At Gorakhpur there is now an important opening for work among the Gurkhas. The Rev. R. J. Kennedy wrote in January, 1910 :—

For years there has been a Gurkha recruiting depôt here, young fellows coming down from Nepal every cold weather to be enlisted in the Indian army, and staying here a few weeks before being drafted off to the various regiments which compose the famous Gurkha Brigade. As many as two thousand recruits thus pass through Gorakhpur every winter. But now a further development has taken place, viz., the establishment of a Gurkha Reserve. Soldiers transferred to the Reserve go back to Nepal, but are bound to assemble in Gorakhpur for two months' training every year. At the present time, besides the recruits who are constantly changing, there are nearly one thousand Reservists here, many of them accompanied by their wives, and these men will return year after year. It is quite true that Nepal is closed to Europeans and consequently to the Gospel, but God has given the Society here ready to hand a unique opportunity for reaching the Gurkhas with the Gospel.

Itinerating in a State closed to European missionaries.

Although Nepal, as Mr. Kennedy states, is closed to European missionaries, the Rev. J. S. C. Bannerjee was able during the year under review to carry the Gospel within its borders. It was at the time of a mela, to which large numbers of people flock, and he and his companions, all being Indians, were able to enter the country without arousing suspicion. Mr. Bannerjee says :—

When we were at the borders some of my sincere non-Christian friends tried to dissuade me from an adventure which was, in their eyes, beset with dangers. A Mohammedan police officer at the frontier was simply alarmed to know my intention. He looked upon this adventure as a wild-goose chase, and pitied me as a rash youth actuated by religious fanaticism. But when he saw that I was determined to go at any cost, he gave me a few friendly hints as to how I should behave in that foreign territory. He gave me to understand that the Nepalese were extremely unreasonable and bigoted, and that I should on no account give myself out as a Christian. His other minute advices were extremely amusing; as, for instance, 'Don't get up on any wall; don't break any green branch of a tree.' This last-named direction caused not a little commotion amongst our workers. The one perplexing question of the day was—where are we to get our tooth-brushes from? For we Indians get our supply of tooth-brushes from green trees.

However, as we entered into the territory we determined under no circumstances to make a compromise, and we all along made a bold profession of our faith; and we felt that the Lord was with us, preparing our way before us. The octroi officer at first took us for traders and stopped our cart, demanding octroi duty on our goods. I opened my box of Christian literature and presented him with a copy of St. Luke's Gospel in the Nepali language, and showed him the goods we were trading in. He felt pleased with the present, and then we explained to him the object of our visit and the subject of the books we meant to offer for sale. On our explanation he gave us free permission to sell our books without any octroi duty, and to speak to the people about our religion, provided that we did not collect a huge concourse of people in one place and did not give rise to quarrel.

Huge districts.

Where the people seemed unimpressionable it was more because they had had so few opportunities of hearing about Christianity than because they regarded it with any feelings of antagonism. The size of some of the districts is immense. The superintending missionary at Aligarh has under his charge seventeen places where services have to be held, two English congregations, nine schools, and three districts covering 5,595 square miles and containing nearly 4,000,000 people. The district of which Gorakhpur is the centre contains a population of 3,000,000; and in other parts of the Mission the work is little less overwhelming. The Rev. P. Webber says that within a radius of three miles from Bichpuri, one of his camping places, there were twelve villages, each with an average population of well over 500 souls, and he points out how comparatively little could be done by a party of three Europeans, three Indian catechists and two Bible-women even during a stay of nearly a month. He writes :—

> A good deal of our time is spent in getting from place to place. When we get to a village we cannot assemble the whole of its inhabitants ; the women are within doors ; to a few at a time the Bible-women can speak. Perhaps in five hours they may be able to address thirty to sixty women, but will anyone say that these women have been evangelized ? The ideas are probably quite new and more or less unintelligible, the language and expressions strange, and at best they will only take in one idea, and that but partially. With the men it is even more difficult, for they rise early and go off to their work, and in the daytime we can seldom get even ten men to sit down and listen to what we want to say. After dark we can sometimes get a large crowd to see the magic-lantern pictures. At one village we had about 200, but we found that number too many, as speaking was difficult.*

The conservatism of the people.

Another difficulty is the intense conservatism of the people. 'My forefathers were wise men ; they knew best' is a common remark when men are urged to accept Christ as their Saviour ; and the Rev. J. N. Mukand, an Indian clergyman who is engaged in evangelistic work, says that he and his colleagues are often reproached in such terms as these : 'You have left your own forefathers and are bastards. The religion of one's ancestors should not be given up merely because we are not satisfied with its doctrines and principles. Faith itself bears fruit, no matter of what nature that faith is.' To these obstacles must be added the ignorance which prevails. Perhaps it is that their unwillingness to change their religion makes the people fail to attend even while they seem to listen ; but, at all events, strange misconceptions often prevail, as in a village which has frequently been visited, where yet one man after being present at a lantern meeting was able to say to the catechist, 'Now we understand who Jesus Christ is ; before, we thought that you were Jesus Christ.'

Inquirers.

A good many of the inquirers who came forward drew back, some because they found that the profession of Christianity would not be followed by the material benefits which they had anticipated, and others because they were not prepared to face the consequences which baptism would entail in the form of persecution and ostracism ; but there were several of whom good hopes were entertained—a Brahman youth and his wife, and also a Mohammedan, at a town in the Benares district; a man and his wife at Agra, who declared, 'Though we are not Christians in name, we are in spirit'; and a former mission schoolgirl in the Muttra district; while at Brindaban a man died singing 'Help me, O Christ; without Thee I have no help,' and left his wife to the protection of the Bible-woman. Among those baptized during the year were a Brahman artisan at Allahabad, who for years had treasured in his heart what he learned as a boy at a mission-school,* and an old nurse; a sadhu, an uneducated man, at Benares who prayed for a revelation from God, saying: 'Oh, speak to me, Master, my Lord; O God, O King, speak to me. Others have the Book, and I have not. Let me hear Thy Voice, O God, O King'; a woman at Aligarh, all of whose children have embraced Christianity and in whose behalf prayer had long been offered, brought to a decision for Christ by the death-bed appeal of her daughter; a Mohammedan widow, a native of Behar, at Annfield; an ayah and a Lal Begi woman at Mussourie; and a number of persons, including two lepers, in the Meerut district. Of another convert, a low-caste man, at Aligarh, the Rev. T. Law wrote in December:—

Converts.

> He could read a little, so he gave all his spare time to reading, and taught his family and many others the way of salvation. He built a little prayer-room out of his own money in which to instruct those whom he was bringing to Christ, even before he was baptized himself. After two years of instruction he was baptized with his wife and family. He is now leading a consistent Christian life, and has been a great help to us in finding out heathen practices followed by the low castes.

Medical Work.

The medical work of the C.M.S. in the province of Agra is limited to a dispensary at Ghaziabad, under the charge of an Indian hospital assistant and other native workers. During the first eleven months of the year visits of more than 3,600 new patients, some of them from far-distant villages, were recorded, and the dispensary is so much appreciated that the municipal grant of Rs. 50 per annum was doubled when application was made at the suggestion of the municipal secretary, who is a Hindu.

Pastoral Work.

Among the converts a few cases occurred which called for the exercise of Church discipline, and the Rev. L. C. Perfumi says of the village Christians in the Meerut district, concerning whom a sad account had to be given in last year's Report,† that they have 'many vices and very few virtues,' and that some of them have not yet separated themselves even from the grossest forms of idolatry; but he is able to add that many testimonies reached him as to the good and consistent conduct of others. Miss Lowick, who labours among the women in the same part of the Mission, confirms his report, but she also points out that the converts suffer from many serious disadvantages, and that they do not compare so very unfavourably with many at home who have been baptized. She writes :—

Many converts secretly keep up the customs connected with their old idolatry, e.g., the feast on the third day after a death ; they have recourse to the medicine-man with his charms and offerings when no other remedies are within reach ; they betroth their children when quite young, and even marry them to non-Christians ; they seldom attend the weekly services. In short, they are Christians only in name.

But there are exceptions. Take the 'Christian' out-castes in any of our villages, and compare them with the same number of the 'submerged tenth' in Christian England, where public opinion is in favour of what is right, where churches, chapels, mission-halls, clergy and district visitors are all within reach. The Indian out-castes have been despised, depressed and oppressed for generations. Heredity and environment are dead against them ; in many cases the fact that they have become Christians increases the ill-will and tyranny of the zamindars. A few years ago these people were taught a little ; they expressed a desire to become Christians, and were baptized. The terrible lack of workers (English and Indian) has left many of them in distant villages, untaught, unhelped. They cannot read ; in many cases they quickly forget what they have been taught ; their minds are still full of their old Hindu customs ; there is little or nothing to take the place of their many former social-religious gatherings. Having no caste to lose, their coming over to Christianity has made no sharp line of demarcation between them and their heathen relatives and friends. Would that it had ! Their path would have been easier ! There is nothing coarse about the women ; in fact, many of them are as refined in looks and in manners as any high-caste woman. To anyone who knows an Indian village, it is enough to say 'they dwell among the refuse-heaps'—among sights and smells indescribable ; and can we doubt but that the spiritual powers of wickedness are active against those who have even taken the name of Christian in this land of darkness ?

The disadvantages of converts.

We have worked in the East of London and in other slums, and should have rejoiced there if one twenty-fifth of the people we visited lived Christian lives. What do we see here ? In one village, out of sixteen women three or four attend the services regularly ; their houses are clean, their faces bright, and apparently, according to their light, they are living Christian lives.*

Special services with a view to the edification of the Christians were held at Gorakhpur by the Rev. T. Walker, of the Tinnevelly Mission,† and at Azimgarh by Mr. J. Devadasan, an Indian professor at St. John's College, Agra, and were instrumental in much good—so much so that a woman who had been away from home exclaimed on her return, 'The men are all changed.' During one of the services at the latter station a lamp fell in the midst of the women who were kneeling in prayer ; it broke, and the oil flowed out and blazed up, while one of the benches caught fire. Providentially, no one was hurt, and very heartfelt were the prayers and praises which were offered after such a striking and merciful preservation. One of the men present prayed as follows : 'Lord, we thank Thee that Thou hast taught us a lesson about Special services.

* The story of the trials of a young convert, who was robbed of his wife because he became a Christian, was given in the C.M.S. Gazette, April, 1910, p. 112.

Thy Holy Fire from Heaven: as long as the chimney was on the lamp there was only a little, glimmering light, but as soon as the lamp and the chimney were broken, what a great blaze and flame shot up from the burning bench and floor-covering, etc. Even so, Lord, break us all to bits, so that the Fire of Thy Holy Spirit may blaze up in us, and so set others on fire too.' Another effort, though of a different character, for the benefit of the Christians was the institution of a drawn-thread class at Meerut.* The women belonging to it subscribed every month a certain portion of their earnings to religious work, and some of them gave up one afternoon a week to carrying the Gospel to others; this involved some self-sacrifice, for the time had to be taken from their industrial work; and as they are paid by piece-work, that meant loss of money.

Self-denying labours.

II. PROVINCE OF OUDH.

Educational Work.

In the last five years the number of boys attending the High School at Lucknow has more than doubled; the annual expenditure is likewise twice what it was; but, thanks to the increased number of boys to pay fees, the growth of the Government grants, and the raising of the fees in some sections of the school, there has been no increase in the cost to the Society. A business department, in which the boys learn typewriting, shorthand, and the like, has been set on foot. The lads listen attentively to the Bible-teaching, and a few of them asked for Bibles to take home and read. One of the branch schools has been raised from the Upper Primary to the Middle English standard.

Evangelistic Work.

Attempts to reach the educated classes in Lucknow were made by means of a couple of addresses to Europeanized Indians, delivered in Christ Church and attended by some fifty non-Christians, including a Hindu judge and several leading Mohammedan barristers;† a Bible-class for young men; and calls on Mohammedan gentlemen in their homes. The Rev. J. Qalandar, who is responsible for the last-named branch of work, mentions that among those on whom he called was a man of great literary qualifications, whom he found engaged in translating St. Mark's Gospel into idiomatic, polished Urdu! Mr. Qalandar was also present at some meetings for Mohammedans which were held at Cawnpore at the end of 1909, just one hundred years after Henry Martyn's first address to Mohammedans in that city. He writes:—

A Mohammedan translates St. Mark's Gospel.

> It was my privilege to address an overflow meeting of about 800 Mussulmans in the S.P.G. school. For three evenings the truth regarding the Incarnation and the Atonement was presented in the light of Moslem thought, and discussion followed each lecture. The man who conducted the discussion from the Moslem side was the Principal of the Mohammedan Divinity College at Cawnpore. I visited this institution, which is quite new, and found the young students being trained as preachers of Islam. Lectures on the New Testament form part of their study, and I had full two hours' talk with the 'Professor of Gospel' (as he is called) on 'Textual Criticism and the Province of Reason and Faith.' There is something remarkable and even hopeful in the fact that the study of the so-called abrogated Gospel has a place in a Mohammedan college.

A great deal of sickness prevailed in the Lucknow district and hindered itinerations, but several melas at Ajodhya in the Faizabad district were visited, and both on those occasions and also at other times there were many opportunities for personal conversation with all sorts and conditions of men in the temples, at the ghats and in the monasteries. A new dispensary was built at Bachhrawan, of which and of the dispensary at Nigohan, an Indian doctor, Dr. Amos Miller, was placed in charge.

Baptisms.

The missionaries at Lucknow were cheered by the baptism of a young Brahman, and of a Mohammedan munshi with his four children and, a little later, his wife; and by the reclamation of a former Mohammedan hafiz, who had been baptized but had reverted to Islam. Mr. Qalandar writes of the munshi and the Brahman as follows :—

The munshi is the son of a pleader, and was educated at St. John's, Agra. For some time he was employed as a novelist by a well-known theatrical company in Bombay, where he came across a body of earnest Mohammedans, who ever tried to discuss with Christian preachers and preach Islam wherever they went. Having left their company, he found his way to Lucknow and became a munshi and a draftsman. It seems that he had a leaning towards the Arya Samaj, and was accustomed to attend their weekly meetings in the city. Their teachings did not satisfy him. Providence brought him to our reading-room, and he found a few books on the table. The worn pages of some made him anxious to read them. His interest grew daily and he offered himself as a catechumen. After due preparation it was my joy to baptize him with his children. His wife followed him later on.*

Usefulness of a reading-room.

The young Brahman gained his first knowledge of the Bible in a mission-school. The folly of idolatry soon convinced him of the untruthfulness of the Hindu creed, but the final step of severing himself from his relatives was only taken after his arrival in Lucknow. Our reading-room was again the means of bringing an anxious soul under Christian influence. During the time of preparation for baptism he was an eager student of the Bible, and longed to bring in his wife and child, who are still outside the Church. He chose for himself the name of Prabhu Dass—a slave of our Lord.

A Brahman woman, first brought into touch with Christianity as she went to bathe in the sacred river at Ajodhya, was baptized at Faizabad. Besides these who openly confessed Christ in baptism there were several more or less hopeful inquirers, some of them only held back by the fear of man;† and besides these, again, and in a different category, was a fakir, a man 'with a great sense of right and wrong,' who in his solitude had read portions of the Gospels, and had been greatly impressed by them.

CENTRAL PROVINCES AND RAJPUTANA MISSION.

THE PAST HISTORY.

The Central Provinces of India, together with Rajputana and the other Native States known as Central India, were formed into the Diocese of Nagpur in 1903, the first Bishop, Dr. Eyre Chatterton, being consecrated on March 25 of that year. The Society's work, which is carried on in the Central Provinces (since 1854), in Rajputana (since 1880), and in the Bombay Presidency (since 1901), was separated from that in the United Provinces and placed under a separate Committee in the same year. Jabalpur, the oldest of the C.M.S. stations in the diocese, was occupied in 1854; Mandla, 1879; Marpha, 1892; Patpara, 1897; Katni Murwara, 1899. In Rajputana, Kherwara was occupied in 1880; Sukulpura, 1901; and Bharatpur, 1902. In the Bombay Presidency Biladia and Lusadia were occupied in 1901.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK.

The Mission is carried on in four sections: among Hindus in (I.) the Central Provinces and also (II.) in Rajputana; and among people of animistic cults: (III.) the Gonds, and (IV.) the Bhīls.

I. and II. At Jabalpur and Katni Murwara, in the Central Provinces, and at Bharatpur, 300 miles from the former and within some thirty miles of Agra, but situated in Rajputana, the work is mainly among Hindus, and is carried on by means of a High School, a Middle School and a Hostel for Christian boys at Jabalpur, an Anglo-Vernacular School at Bharatpur, and several vernacular schools, and by evangelistic efforts in the villages. The women's work is, for the most part, in the hands of missionaries of the C.E.Z.M.S.

III. The Gonds, an aboriginal tribe, are reached from Mandla, Patpara and Marpha, which are in the Central Provinces and within about 100 miles of Jabalpur. There are Orphanages for boys and girls at Patpara.

IV. Another aboriginal tribe, the Bhīls, are found at Kherwara, Biladia and Lusadia, villages more than 400 miles west of Jabalpur, in the Bombay Presidency. There is the Thompson Memorial School and an Orphanage for boys at Kherwara, and an Orphanage for girls at Lusadia, where also medical work is carried on.

The Society's staff comprises ten European and two Indian clergy, three laymen, eight missionaries' wives, one of whom is a doctor, and eleven single women. The Indian Christian lay agents engaged in the Mission number ninety-six.

The following are the members of the Jabalpur Corresponding Committee: The Bishop of Nagpur, Archdeacon C. J. Palmer, Mr. W. G. Bagley, Mr. C. H. Candy, and the Revs. A. I. Birkett, C. W. Darling, R. Hack, C. Price, E. D. Price and E. A. Hensley (Secretary).

A sadly thinned staff.

OWING partly to absences on furlough and sick leave the Mission was greatly handicapped in 1909 by the lack of ordained missionaries, the staff in the field consisting only of three men in full orders and one deacon, besides three Indian clergy. The Gond Mission had but one ordained man and one layman, and Bharatpur was dependent for clerical ministrations, so far as the Mission was concerned, on monthly visits paid to the station by the Rev. P. M. Zenker, of Muttra.*

Help given by Anglo-Indians.

A good deal of help continues to be given to the Mission by English residents, and the Rev. R. Hack met with much kindness and encouragement in his deputation work.† He refers to one church in which he had previously been unable to gain permission to preach for the C.M.S. on the ground that the congregation was entirely military and therefore unsympathetic, and says :—

> I had the opportunity to take a parade service there. The soldiers seemed the reverse of unsympathetic, and gave a record offertory, though none had been announced. One man offered to take a subscription list round the barracks; the officers took me to their mess for breakfast, and promised if I would stay for an evening service they would all come to church. That evening, however, I had to preach in another church, also new to a C.M.S. deputation, and here again the offertory was almost a record one.

At Jabalpur an effort is being made to enlist more systematic help than that afforded by offertories, and a Missionary Association has been formed among the English and Eurasian residents, with the Bishop of Nagpur as President and the two chaplains as Vice-Presidents.

Death of Rev. J. B. Wheeler.

The Rev. J. B. Wheeler, who worked at Jabalpur under the C.M.S. in 1860–1, died at Folkestone on August 23, 1909.

Reinforcements.

Miss E. E. Smyth, from the Mauritius Mission, and Miss E. R. Hall, from the United Provinces Mission, have been transferred to the Central Provinces and Rajputana Mission. Mr. F. D. O. Roberts, who has been working in local connexion in the Mission since 1906, has been accepted as a C.M.S. missionary in home connexion. On the other hand, the Rev. Luxman Hari has been transferred to the Western India Mission. The Committee have accepted the resignation of the Rev. H. Blackwood.

I. JABALPUR AND KATNI MURWARA.

Pastoral Work.

THE position of the church at Jabalpur in the centre of the city makes it difficult for some of the converts to be present at more than one service on a Sunday, but the attendance at the services was generally good, and the number of independent young Christian men in the congregation was noteworthy. The people showed increased interest in the National Missionary Society of India, and about a score of them voluntarily engaged in Sunday-school work.

Educational Work.

Several of the Sunday-school teachers referred to belong to the Christian Hostel at Jabalpur. Most of the seventeen inmates of that institution attend the High School or Middle School, which between them have 600 pupils. The High School passed five out of the twelve boys who sat for the University Entrance Examination, while the other three schools in the city only succeeded in passing seventeen out of ninety-seven.

Evangelistic Work.

Evangelistic work is carried on by means of bazaar and street preaching, house-to-house visiting, etc., and also by means of lectures and conversations with individuals at the Book Depôt, which was visited by more than 5,000 persons during the year. There was a large sale of the Scriptures and other books, and nearly 1,000 non-Christians, besides a number of Christians, were among the purchasers. Another evangelistic agency is the dispensary at Panagar, which is visited by a number of pilgrims on their way to Benares. A little informal dispensary work was also carried on at Jabalpur. Notwithstanding the opposition of the members of the Arya Samaj, an entrance was gained into many zenanas previously unvisited, and the women frequently expressed their agreement with what was said as to the claims of the Lord Jesus, while those who already knew a little about Him showed anxiety to learn more. In the country districts it happened now and again that the missionaries and native workers were repulsed as 'plague spreaders,' but as a rule such suspicions as were entertained were soon overcome. Miss A. A. C. von Schmiedeseck records a curious incident which occurred in connexion with the village work. She writes :—

A strange opening.

One man called us into his house, because his wife did not want to obey him, and he wished us to tell her that it was also written in our Bible that the wife had to obey her husband. It was fasting time. The women had to fast for their husbands to get them into heaven, and this woman had refused to do it. The husband went away, and we had a very good time with his wife and some other women. When we wanted to go, she asked us to stay on ; she said, 'You always bring us wisdom and joy and happiness, but these Hindus are so small-minded they only want us to cook and to fast for them.'

A new out-station was opened at Majhouli, in the Jabalpur district, where bitter opposition to Christianity has been shown in the past, while in the Katni Murwara district two Christian landowners offered to give a house for a preacher and a room for a school in their villages. Eleven adults were baptized at Jabalpur and three at Katni Murwara, the latter the fruit of the personal influence of some of the converts. There were also several inquirers,* while a number of women have a 'quiet faith in Jesus Christ which is unmistakable,' but are unable to come out for baptism. The Rev. E. A. Hensley briefly narrates a story which shows what confession of Christ may mean to a convert from Hinduism. Writing of the Mid-India Convention, which was held at Jabalpur in the autumn, he says :—

Baptisms.

Mysterious death of a Brahman inquirer.

A pathetic incident took place at one of the meetings. A young Brahman stood up and confessed Christ publicly. A few days later one of our ladies went to call at his house and was told that he had died suddenly a day or two before. All the family had been sent away to another place. On further inquiry it seemed only too clear that this young man had been poisoned.

II. BHARATPUR.

BHARATPUR had no resident ordained missionary of the Society during the year, but the ladies carried on the work among women with diligence, visiting a number of zenanas and superintending the three schools which are maintained at the station.

* The story of one was given in the C.M.S. Gazette, March, 1910, p. 83.

III. GOND MISSION.

Pastoral Work.

THE work among the Gonds was sorely prejudiced by the smallness of the staff of missionaries, which not only prevented much evangelistic work being attempted, but also made the pastoral oversight of the 650 scattered Christians a matter of much difficulty, which is not likely to be lessened by the recent advent of a well-manned Roman Catholic Mission into the heart of the district. Special services were held at Mandla and Patpara, some of them by an Indian catechist from the Punjab,* and at the latter station the Bishop of Nagpur confirmed twenty-seven candidates, several of whom, headed by their native pastor, had walked some sixty miles, enduring peril from wild beasts on the way, in order to be present.†

Educational Work.

Little that was noteworthy occurred at the Orphanages and Orphanage schools at Patpara, beyond the baptism of one of the boys, and the same may be said of the ministrations to the inmates of the Leper Asylum, four of whom were admitted to the catechumenate.

In the villages the men appear to have plenty of leisure, but the women are hard-worked, and, being ignorant and superstitious as well, it is not easy to win their attention.

IV. BHĪL MISSION.

Pastoral Work.

THE ordination of Mr. G. C. Vyse at Lusadia in December, 1909, was an event of special interest from the fact that it was the first held in the Bhīl Mission. The service was conducted in Gujerati, and converts gathered from all parts of the Mission to take part in it. Earlier in the year some special services were held at the various stations, and were productive of much good. At Khetadara many persons were brought under conviction of sin, and at Lusadia the revival was accompanied by some striking scenes. Miss R. Carter says :—

Revival scenes.

At the afternoon meeting of the first day the fire fell, and one of our honoured Christians was brought face to face with God. What he heard or saw in his trance we do not need to know, but he got up suddenly and, seizing the cymbals, in an impassioned chant he exhorted the people to a confession. He fell exhausted on the ground but rose after a little while, and, as God gave him strength, with very broken utterances our brother confessed his own sins before those who in former days had regarded him almost as divine. A deep spirit of awe fell on the congregation.

Sunday, February 7, will ever be a memorable day in the annals of the Bhīl Church. At the early meeting the veil was lifted from many hearts and we saw the appalling sinfulness of our own individual sins wherewith we have been wounding our Master. At Morning Prayer the love which led Jesus to die for us broke down the last barriers between us and God. One lad confessed that all through the meetings he had been hardening his heart, but the sight of the Lord's Table and all the love with which Jesus was waiting to receive him quite broke him down. Several backsliders were brought back to the Lord, and the three brothers to whom God first revealed himself in the early days here were especially touched by the Spirit, and their confession of sin opened the way for the weaker brethren. That morning the Spirit just swept through our Church; confession followed confession and the secrets of many hearts were laid bare. In the afternoon came testimony and praise, followed by signing of temperance pledges and restoration of stolen monies, and a joyous sense of deliverance from sin and the possibility of victory through the blood of Jesus began to be evident.

* Accounts of the services at the former station were given in the C.M. Gleaner, July, 1909, p. 109, and C.M.S. Gazette, Jan., 1910, p. 19.

† The C.M. Gleaner, Nov., 1909, p. 165, contained a description of the Christians at Deori, a Christian village thirty miles from Mandla, and of the conditions under which work among them is carried on.

The evening meeting was the crowning time. There was such joy in all hearts, joy which could not find adequate expression in singing, so our Bhīl brethren must needs dance, and praised God as truly in their dance as did David of old.

Immediately after the special services came the annual meeting of the District Church Council. It was a time of great enthusiasm. In the midst of a discussion on a resolution forbidding the Christians to take part in customs connected even remotely with Heathenism, one convert, who had been very undecided, suddenly rose and said, 'The Church must be entirely separate from these things; it must put them away altogether and have nothing to do with them.' Then the whole assembly raised the cry, 'Isu Masih ki jai' ('The Victory of Jesus Christ') and the resolution was passed by acclamation. The work which was thus begun has happily proved lasting. Early in 1909 several persons had to be excommunicated, but after the services there was only one case calling for the exercise of Church discipline, and many who had been under the power of sin were seen to be leading godly, righteous and sober lives.

A decided break with Heathenism.

The results of the special services were evident in evangelistic as well as the pastoral work. In spite of strong opposition at the hands of the Arya Samaj, several persons put themselves under instruction at Lusadia, including two heathen wives of men who have been excommunicated; and at Mori, a village in that district, a number of catechumens who had been holding back asked for baptism, and others became inquirers. They were led to take this step by the example of a man and his wife occupying an influential position. They had been taught and prepared for baptism, and subsequently drew back, but were brought to the knowledge of God by the wonderful way in which the woman was restored to health. They had tried all sorts of remedies, and offerings had been made to the evil spirit supposed to be afflicting her, but all in vain. As a last resource she was brought to the medical mission and soon improved in health. The old people then definitely yielded to God, and on their return to their village they cast out of their house the little altar to the evil spirit. Some time later they and their daughter were baptized.

The Catechists' Class at Lusadia had three members. At the Girls' Orphanage and Orphanage School at that station an improvement was witnessed in the conduct of the children as a result of the special services. All the non-Christian boys attending the Boarding-school at Biladia were drawn away by the Arya Samaj. The school was removed to Kherwara in June, 1909, with the result that the number of names on the roll soon doubled. It is difficult, however, to get the Bhīls to attend the school, not through any unwillingness on the part of the boys, but because the parents want them to help with the care of the cattle, etc. One of the senior boys in the school was baptized, and two old boys, one of whom some years ago asked for baptism but was held back by the opposition of his father, a subadar-major in the Bhīl regiment,* put themselves under definite instruction. The school in future is to be known as the Thompson Memorial School, after the late Rev. C. S. Thompson, the pioneer missionary to the Bhīls, who died in 1900, a victim to his efforts to relieve the people during the terrible famine of that year.

Former mission school-boys ask for baptism.

Medical Work.

The number of in-patients at the hospital at Lusadia increased greatly, notwithstanding the absence of Mrs. A. I. Birkett (who is a qualified doctor) for some months, during which the work was efficiently carried on by Mr. John Brand, the hospital assistant. Several of the patients became earnest inquirers.

Literary Work.

The Rev. A. I. Birkett completed a simplified version of the Church Catechism, and progress was made in the preparation of a Bhīl hymn-book, some of the converts contributing original compositions.

PUNJAB AND SINDH MISSION.

THE PAST HISTORY.

The Punjab Mission was begun in 1851, soon after the annexation of the province to British India. The first station occupied was Amritsar, the sacred city of the Sikhs; Kangra was occupied in 1854; Peshawar, 1855; Multan, 1856; Narowal, 1859; Dera Ismail Khan, 1862; Srinagar, 1864; Bannu, 1865; Lahore, 1867; Clarkabad, 1869; Batala, 1878; Dera Ghazi Khan, 1879; Tarn Taran, 1885; Quetta, 1886; the Jhang Bar and Simla, 1899; Islamabad, 1902. Work was commenced at Kotgur in 1847, prior to the annexation of the Punjab. At Lahore, the capital of the province, a Divinity School was founded in 1870 by the Rev. (afterwards Bishop) T. V. French. The Rev. G. M. Gordon (who was killed at Kandahar, August 16, 1880) established, mainly at his own expense, stations at Pind Dadan Khan and Dera Ghazi Khan, the latter as a base for work among the Baluch tribes. Several other stations fringe the British frontier, the most important of which is Peshawar, where work among the Afghans was established in 1855 under the auspices of Sir Herbert Edwardes, then Commissioner of the Division. In the Valley of Kashmir a medical mission was started by Dr. Elmslie in 1865, which has been a great blessing to the people, especially at the time of the famine in 1880 and the earthquake in 1884. The work in the Punjab is deeply indebted to men like Lord Lawrence, Sir H. Edwardes, Sir R. Montgomery, Sir D. McLeod, Generals Lake, Taylor and Maclagan, Colonel Martin and others, who nobly exerted themselves to bring the Gospel to the people under their administration.

The Sindh Mission is slightly older in date, having been begun in 1850, but is far behind in progress, owing mainly to its having always been quite undermanned. Yet important fruit has been granted to the patient labours of the Rev. J. Sheldon and others at Karachi (commenced 1850) and Hyderabad (1856), and later at Sukkur (1887) on the Indus.

The Diocese of Lahore was founded in 1877, the Rev. T. V. French, a C.M.S. missionary, being the first Bishop. He was succeeded on his retirement in 1887 by the Rev. H. J. Matthew; and he in 1899 by the Rev. G. A. Lefroy, of the Cambridge Delhi Mission.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK.

There are five sections of the Mission: the Punjab, Kashmir, the North-West Frontier Province, Baluchistan and Sindh.

I. Of the thirteen stations in the Punjab, eight are in the plains, viz., Lahore, Clarkabad, Multan and Toba Tek Singh (in the Chenab Colony), in the Lahore district, and Amritsar, Batala, Tarn Taran and Narowal, in the Amritsar district; four, Simla, Kotgur, Kangra and Dharmsala, are in the Himalayas; and one, Dera Ghazi Khan, is across the Indus.

Educational work is carried on by means of a Divinity School at Lahore; High Schools at Amritsar, Batala (Baring School for Christians and A.L.O.E. School for non-Christians) and Multan; Anglo-Vernacular Schools at Fathgarh and Narowal; a Christian Boys' Boarding-school at Clarkabad; a Middle School at Bahawalpur; and the Alexandra High School and a Middle Class School at Amritsar for girls. There are Orphanages at Clarkabad and Industrial Work at Lahore; at the latter station there is also a Widows' Home.

Medical work is represented by a Hospital at Amritsar, with affiliated dispensaries at Narowal, Jandiala, etc.; a Women's Hospital at Multan, with a branch dispensary; and a Hospital at Dera Ghazi Khan. Some medical work is also carried on at Kotgur.

Considerable bodies of Native Christians are found in the Amritsar, Narowal and Tarn Taran districts, at Clarkabad, and in the Chenab Colony, to whom both European and Indian clergy minister.

II. The Society has two stations in Kashmir—Srinagar, the capital, and Islamabad, some thirty miles to the south.

At the former there is a High School for boys, with a branch school at Islamabad; also a General Hospital, and a Leper Asylum supported by the Kashmir Government, but managed by the Society's missionaries. There is also a Women's Hospital at Islamabad.

III. At each of the three strategic points occupied by the Society in the North-West Frontier Province, viz., Peshawar, Bannu and Dera Ismail Khan, a Hospital is maintained, by means of which many members of the wild frontier tribes are influenced. Branch dispensaries are also carried on at outlying places.

There are the Edwardes College and High School at Peshawar, and High Schools also at Bannu and Dera Ismail Khan.

IV. At Quetta, the Society's only station in Baluchistan, there is a Hospital with two branch dispensaries.

V. Karachi, Hyderabad and Sukkur, three important centres, are occupied in Sindh. At the first-named there is a High School and also a Book Shop.

The C.E.Z.M.S. is responsible for several hospitals and for the greater part of the women's work in the Mission.

The foreign staff of the Mission consists of thirty-two clergymen, twenty-four laymen, forty wives of missionaries, and twenty-seven other women missionaries. Sixteen of the above are doctors and nine are trained nurses. In addition twenty-one Indian clergy and 192 Indian Christian lay agents are on the staff of the Mission.

The following are the members of the Punjab Corresponding Committee: The Bishop of Lahore, Mr. H. E. Clark, Dr. Datta, Mr. F. E. Gwyther, Colonel Hendley, I.M.S., Mr. H. T. Knowlton, I.E.S., Dr. A. C. Lankester, Mr. W. de M. Malan, Dr. A. Neve, Captain R. Skinner, R.E., Mr. E. Tydeman, and the Revs. Canon J. Ali Bakhsh, E. Guilford, Ihsan Ullah, Canon H. U. Weitbrecht, E. F. E. Wigram and P. Ireland Jones (Secretary).

'Real and visible unity.'

A GREAT work in drawing together Christians of all nationalities and all classes is accomplished by Conventions such as that held each autumn at Sialkot. It was attended in 1909 by about 2,000 Christians from all parts of the Punjab, and it is said that while there was 'little talk of reunion, there was a very real and visible unity.' * The C.M.S. missionaries and the Indian Christians are also brought into close contact and a wider sympathy with each other at the meetings of the various District Mission Councils and of the Central Mission Council of the Punjab Mission, which were established in 1904, and for general administrative purposes have taken the place of the previously existing Mission organization.†

Literary Work.

The Rev. Dr. H. U. Weitbrecht, who, together with the Rev. J. Ali Bakhsh, has been appointed an Honorary Canon of Lahore Cathedral, completed the first draft of a Commentary on St. Matthew for the Indian Bishops' series, and revised his translation into Urdu of Norris's Key to the Acts; he also served on a Committee for the revision of the Urdu Hymn-book. Another Committee, of which the Rev. J. Redman is a member, made good progress with a new translation of St. Matthew and St. Luke into Sindhi, while the Rev. T. Mansukhani brought out The Pearl of Great Price and Hinduism of India's Millions in Sindhi and Studies in the Rig Veda in English, and the Rev. E. Guilford revised the Gurmukhi translation of about one-third of the Psalms. There is great need of more translation work, for with the spread of education the demand for literature is increasing, and the enemies of the truth are circulating large numbers of the most pernicious pamphlets and tracts.

Miss A. Robinson, a member of the nursing staff at the Srinagar Hospital, Kashmir, died there after much suffering on October 20, 1909. She received her professional training at the Zenana Medical College, Pimlico, and afterwards at the Mildmay Mission Hospital, Bethnal Green. She went out to India in 1900, and her nine years' earnest missionary service were all spent at Srinagar.* Death of Miss A. Robinson,

The Rev. C. E. Barton, a graduate of Trinity Hall, Cambridge, laboured in the Punjab Mission, first at Multan and afterwards at Srinagar, from 1893 to 1904; ill-health shortly afterwards obliged him to retire, and he died at Rousdon, near Lyme Regis, on October 3, 1909. and Rev. C. E. Barton.

The Mission has been reinforced by Miss A. W. Elwin, transferred from the Sierra Leone Mission; Mr. Arthur Crawford Jacob Elwin, B.A., Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, L.M.S.S.A., who spent a short time at Islington College; Mr. John David Finlay, who was in charge of the industrial work at Lahore from 1903 to 1908, and now after a course at Islington College has been accepted as a C.M.S. missionary; and Miss Lilias Margaret Blackett, M.B., B.S., London University, and Miss Louisa Ella Annie Fagg, a trained nurse, both of whom received their training under the Society at The Olives. Mr. Elwin's father and sister were formerly on the staff of the Mid China Mission; his brother, the Rev. W. H. Elwin, is a missionary of the Society labouring among Chinese students in Japan; and Miss A. W. Elwin, just mentioned, is his cousin. The names of the Rev. Parm Anand and Lal Chand Karia have been added (on their ordination) to the list of Indian clergy connected without the Society. The former was once a fakir, and wandered about to the different shrines as a seeker after God. The Bishop of Lahore met him at Sialkot, and sent him to Tarn Taran, where he was baptized and afterwards worked as a mission agent.† He first brought his own brother to Christ, and later he had the joy of presenting his sister and her husband for baptism. The names of the Revs. B. L. Datt, M. H. Izhaq and Mulaim-ud-din, retired Indian clergymen, which were removed from the list in error a few years ago, have been restored. The Committee have accepted the resignations of the Revs. T. R. Wade (who sailed for the mission-field in 1863), W. F. Cobb and A. H. Storrs, Dr. W. F. Adams, Miss A. E. Bunn, and Dr. C. Muriel Scott.‡ Reinforcements.

ordination candidates, two of whom were admitted to deacons' orders at the end of the year.* Among the High Schools, that at Multan suffered greatly during a terrible outbreak of the plague,† and the numbers fell in a few days from 450 to nineteen, but the school had almost recovered itself by the end of the year. The Anglo-Vernacular School at Narowal grew both in numbers and efficiency, and boys' primary schools at Fathgarh, Clarkabad and Kotgur were raised to the Middle Standard. Both at Narowal and Clarkabad some industrial work has long been carried on, but it has now been largely superseded by that at St. John's College, Lahore, which, however, had rather fewer scholars than in 1908. Early in the year under review a revival took place among the boys. A Saturday evening prayer-meeting, conducted by themselves, was established; the study of the Bible received a great impetus; and some of the lads formed themselves into a volunteer preaching band, which worked in the bazaars and villages under the leadership of one of the divinity students. A little trouble, owing to petty thefts and deceitfulness (both common faults in India), was experienced at the Alexandra High School for upper-class Christian girls at Amritsar, but the general feeling in these matters was good. One member of the teaching staff passed the senior vernacular teachers' examination, and two of the three girls who entered were successful in the corresponding examination for juniors. Steps were taken to introduce light and useful industries at the Middle School for girls, also at Amritsar. At the invitation of the Lady Dufferin Fund Committee the Society has assumed responsibility for the management of the Lady Lyall Home for women medical students at Lahore. The vernacular schools in the Tarn Taran district continued throughout the year to feel the effects of the scourge of malarial fever which visited the Punjab in the autumn of 1908 and caused them to be closed for a time. The number of pupils suffered in consequence, and the Government grant-in-aid, which is given on the basis of attendance, was correspondingly and seriously diminished.

Medical Work.

The Women's Hospital at Dera Ghazi Khan, which had to be abandoned in the summer of 1908 in consequence of the encroachments of the River Indus,‡ was reopened in the autumn of 1909, but the arrangements were necessarily of a make-shift character, the stables and all spare servants' houses being converted into wards, while one of the out-houses served as a dispensary. The medical work among the men was carried on at a camp, seven miles from Dera Ghazi Khan, where roads have been marked out for a new city, to take the place of the old.* Some signs appeared that the medical work carried on at the hospitals and dispensaries in the Mission and in the course of itinerations was effective. At Multan the doctors were able without difficulty to gain admittance into strict Mohammedan homes, and when the patients asked in wonder, as they sometimes did, 'How is it that you King's people (i.e. English people) are willing to do this work?' the missionaries had the joy of telling of the King in Whose name the sick are tended. The patients there are very ignorant, and the Mohammedans among them have been so long treated with contempt that it is difficult to convince them that God really cares for them, but one Moslem woman became a definite inquirer, and several Hindus appeared to be greatly drawn to the truth. At Kotgur, too, a couple of inquirers came forward from among the patients; one of them remained firm, notwithstanding a good deal of persecution, but the other soon proved himself unworthy. Here may be mentioned the Leper Asylum at Tarn Taran. Dr. P. A. Dass, of the Amritsar Medical Mission, was appointed medical officer in charge in the place of Mr. Kashi D. Nath, who left to join the National Missionary Society. The Home for Untainted Children, attached to the Asylum, has abundantly justified its existence, and many former inmates are now doing well in various positions, while only one out of some fifty or sixty children has shown any signs of leprosy.†

Doctors gain admittance into Moslem homes.

A feature of the evangelistic work in 1909 was a series of lectures at Lahore arranged and financed entirely by Indians, and followed by discussions. Canon J. Ali Bakhsh, one of the originators of the lectures, tells in his annual letter how the idea was suggested to him. He writes:—

Evangelistic Work.

Lectures.

In April I was invited by the American Presbyterian Mission at Manipuri (U.P.) to deliver six lectures for Hindus and Mohammedans. Accordingly I went there and lectured to a mixed audience specially invited. The chief feature of the meetings was that after each lecture the audience was allowed to ask questions. Most of the questions were about the inspiration of our sacred books and the incarnation of our Lord.

The questions betrayed misunderstandings caused by Western garb and mode of representation of Christianity. But I was glad to notice that religious study has revived because of the national schools, in which instruction in Hinduism or Islam is compulsory.

Having noticed this spirit of inquiry among the people, some of us consulted together and arranged a series of lectures here and allowed discussion after each lecture. People took great interest and the audience increased day by day. One day we allowed five hours for questions, from 11 A.M. to 4 P.M. Lots of people got leave from their work and attended the discussion. Every thing went on nicely. People not only behaved well, but expressed their gratitude for such an opportunity.

The lectures were well attended, and the Rev. E. F. E. Wigram says that 'Hindus and Mohammedans alike abjured anything of the nature of partisan controversy, and seemed genuinely anxious not to snatch a dialectic victory, but to advance towards ultimate truth.' Other opportunities for bringing the truths of Christianity before the educated classes were afforded by a series of religious discussions held at Lahore under the auspices of the Arya Samaj. From 300 to 500 Indians assembled to listen to the presentation of the doctrine of salvation by Hindus, Mohammedans and Christians, and Canon Weitbrecht says that the Arya chairman, as well as the audience, showed both fairness and attention. Rather different in character was the fourth Prem Sangat mela, which was held at Asrapur on December 31, 1908, and the following day, and was attended by about 1,000 persons, including a number of Sikhs, who were not only allowed but even encouraged by one of their gurus to be present. One Sikh, as a result of what was said, stood up and publicly confessed his sins; another, a guru, prayed with tears that his sins might be forgiven, and begged the Christians to think of him as one with them; and a third man, a moulvi, once a bigoted opponent of Christianity, appeared wonderfully softened.* In the work among the poorer classes the need of more missionaries and agents was sorely felt; their number has decreased of late years, while, on the other hand, the openings have multiplied marvellously. Constant requests were made to Mr. Guilford by men whom he saw at Tarn Taran that he would visit their villages, in which, he says there are many who are convinced that Christianity is of God, but it was comparatively rarely that he was able to leave the station. In the Batala district, covering an area of 480 square miles and containing 300,000 people, there is but one missionary for evangelistic work, and many openings are perforce neglected, while one of the Indian clergy working in the Jhang Bar district of the Chenab Colony laments that three-quarters of it is unvisited. It is not as though there was no prospect of fruit. On the contrary the mass movement towards Christianity referred to in last year's Report † seemed to be extending. The Rev. Ihsan Ullah, writing of the Jhang Bar, in one part of which 260 men were baptized during the year, says that practically the whole of the community desire to embrace Christianity,‡ and from Clarkabad comes the report that a movement towards Christianity is in process among the low-caste Chuhras, that if sufficient workers can be found many hundreds or even thousands of these people can be gathered into the Church, and that the Arya Samaj is recognizing the opportunity and beginning to work among them. These movements are probably largely social, but the Rev. C. M. Gough rightly urges that they nevertheless constitute an opportunity which should not be lost. He says :—

> Whatever be the original motive which inspired them, we have to face the fact that there are thousands of people belonging to the poorest classes asking to be taught about Christ and the way of Salvation. While it is necessary to use the greatest care in admitting such people to baptism, we ought not to let any suspicion that many of them are not actuated by the highest motives prevent our teaching them. The same criticism might be applied to the patients who throng our mission-hospitals, or to the Mohammedan and Hindu boys who attend our mission-schools. No one can desire Christ or the salvation which He gives from the truest and highest motive until he has learned Who Christ is, and what the blessing is which may be obtained through faith in Him. When we have, as we have in the Punjab, thousands of people asking to be taught about Christ, it seems a plain duty that we should assign at least a large proportion of our mission workers and resources to teaching these people.

Baptisms.

While these new movements were beginning there were no signs that the older movement in the Narowal district had spent its force. The people there are described as more keen on learning about Christ than they were ; 144 adults received baptism, and at the end of the year there were the names of 1,780 catechumens on the roll. A good many baptisms took place at some other stations : forty persons were baptized on one day in a village near Majitha ; three adult Mohammedans were received into the visible Church at Tarn Taran ; a Brahman pundit at Asrapur, where was another hopeful Brahman inquirer ; eleven adults at Ajnala ; an old mission schoolboy at Simla, whose faith in idols had been shaken by finding that they were impotent to harm a Christian friend when he put their power to the test ; and a Swami, led to the Saviour by the study of the Gospels, in the Kotgur district.* In the last named district the brotherhood founded by Mr. S. E. Stokes, the members of which live among the people native fashion, was joined by a former sadhu, who tramped from Burdwan to Benares, begging his bread there, was baptized by the name of Samuel Paul Ishananda ('the joy of God'), and now pursues his old method of life, save that he expounds the Gospel instead of the Hindu sacred books.† When the plague was raging at Multan, Mr. Stokes lived in the segregation camp, and by so doing in some degree removed the objections of the people to it. Among the inquirers at Lahore was the husband of a Mohammedan lady of high class, who was accommodated at the Widows' Home for a few days when her state of health demanded a change of air. The man visited her regularly, and one day expressed his desire, materialist though he was, for some faith which would give him comfort. There were also two or three families of inquirers in Kulu, who were being taught by a retired Indian clergyman; * while in the Tarn Taran district two incidents occurred which are described by the Rev. E. Guilford as follows :—

Disappointing cases.

One day I had a long talk with a Moslem who, with his wife, was on the point of confessing Christ about six years ago, but the fear of man and the love of the world proved too strong for them then, and they held back. The woman was one of the first patients to be admitted to the Zenana Hospital here when my wife started it twenty-one years ago. Ever since that time the woman has shown a drawing towards Christ, and I believe that she had a real love for Him in her heart. Just before Easter [1909] she died, and her husband told me that on her death-bed she said to him, 'The one great error of my life has been that I did not confess Christ in baptism. See that you are not guilty of the same folly.' The man was so profoundly impressed by his wife's earnestness that he at once took steps to rent his land so that he might be able to come in here and be instructed for baptism. Whether he has failed to let his land, or whether the impression made on him by his dying wife has passed off, I know not, but I have seen nothing of him lately, as he has kept out of my way. A few months ago a woman brought her fourteen-year-old son to me from one of the villages, saying that she wished to make him over to my charge. On asking why she was willing to part with one so precious, she said, 'Years ago, when I had no son to bring light and hope to my home, I prayed to your Jesus to bless me with a son, and promised, if He did, I would dedicate him to His service, and now I have come to fulfil my vow.' I asked her if, in this, she had the consent of her husband. On her replying in the negative, I sent her to consult with him. I suspect that the result was contrary to her wishes, for I have seen nothing of her since.

Pastoral Work.

There is only one single mention of a lapse from Christianity in all the annual letters received from the Punjab, and though many of the converts are very ignorant, and the task of raising them to a higher standard of Christian life and knowledge is by no means easy, yet sufficient is said to show that a good measure of success has attended that difficult task. Mr. Gough, writing of Clarkabad, a Christian settlement consisting of two villages with about 900 Christians, some of them from Missions in which the standard required for baptism is lower than that demanded by the C.M.S., says, 'There are many who are leading Christian lives, and show that the Gospel has power to raise even those belonging to what are called the depressed classes.' In the Chenab Colony, when Miss M. E. Farthing and an Indian helper were on an itineration, they were greeted by a party of Christians from a village which they had not intended to visit, and were literally compelled to turn aside and teach them, while in that village there were some who were eager to take them to yet other villages, so that there, too, the people might have the advantage of further instruction than they can usually be given by the shorthanded staff. Among some of these Jhang Bar Christians there is an 'increasing desire to read and possess God's Word and to meet together for instruction,' and the Rev. Ihsan Ullah, after remarking that the poor Christians ought not to be compared with those drawn from higher castes, but rather with non-Christians of the same community, adds, 'A marked difference is noticed in their religious and social as well as intellectual state.' * The verdict concerning the converts at Simla, where an Indian Christian Association has been formed with the object of helping forward in their spiritual life those who are already Christians, and of bringing the claims of the Gospel before non-Christians, is that 'there is much to encourage, for the Christian life of the members has found expression in various ways,' i.e., by active efforts to spread the knowledge of Christ as well as in Christian life and walk. In the Narowal district a hopeful sign was the desire of many of those who have been baptized to learn more so as to be confirmed and admitted to the Holy Communion. Much progress has been made in that part of the Mission in the direction of self-support, and the contributions of the people have advanced from Rs. 13 in 1903 to Rs. 691 in 1909. At one village the offertory on the occasion of a visit from the Bishop of Lahore amounted to Rs. 57, and Dr. Lefroy afterwards wrote in the mission log-book, 'In my thirty years of mission work I have never seen anything in the least like this among people of the poor and comparatively ignorant type with which we are dealing here. I feel perfectly certain that this money would not be forthcoming in such a way if the work of the Church had not got a most real hold upon them.' In the same report he also wrote: 'I do not remember on any previous occasion in the ten years of my Episcopate to have observed in any place such striking signs of progress as I have found here on this visit after a lapse of two years.' † Perhaps even greater grace was shown in the Tarn Taran district, for there the liberality of the people increased not only towards the work in their own neighbourhood, but also towards outside objects. Among the coins in the offertory on one Sunday morning were a couple of war medals, one gained in battle on the Frontier and the other in China. These were afterwards redeemed so that they might be handed down to the donor's descendants as heirlooms.

Christian life 'finds expression.'

II. KASHMIR.

Pastoral Work.

THE Society's missionaries in Kashmir had a great disappointment in the perversion of the convert, a nurse in the hospital at Islamabad, whose baptism was recorded in last year's Report; ‡ in consequence of dissensions with the other Christian nurse, she left to go to her mother, and was persuaded again to declare herself a Mohammedan.

Medical Work.

The medical work at Srinagar continued to increase, both in the hospital, where the annual number of in-patients approaches 2,000 and of new out-patients is about 22,000, and also at the women's dispensary, where, however, there was a falling off towards the end of the year owing to the opening of a similar institution by the State. There was a slight decrease in the number of patients at Islamabad, where some appear to regard it as a disgrace to have recourse to the European doctors; e.g., a woman who prayed every day that she might not live to go home because of the shame of having been an in-patient in a mission-hospital. There was plenty of scope for evangelistic work among those who visited the medical missions, and the attitude of the people towards the teaching was as a rule friendly and receptive, though some of the women did not pay any attention to it. Miss M. N. Neve writes:—

Words 'without the ring of sincerity.'

My Kashmiri hearers day by day assent to much, but their words come too glibly, and without the ring of sincerity. It makes one wince to hear the most sacred words and expressions used to flatter or as compliments to oneself, the smallest girl now reeling off benedictions, as a few minutes before she was giving tongue to foul abuse, all picked up parrot fashion from the women around or at home.

And Dr. Kate Knowles declares that though many of the regular patients seem warmly to approve of our Lord's teaching, they do not grasp that it really concerns them. Moreover, beneath the apparent friendliness of the people there is, Dr. E. F. Neve says, 'a deep and fanatical hatred of any of their number who professes the Christian faith and is baptized. A Mohammedan who leaves Mohammedanism is ipso facto an outcast, and in Kashmir the boycott is very complete.' And he mentions the case of one man, who with his family expressed a desire to embrace Christianity, and was informed that if he did so his house would be burnt over his head. A few persons, however, appeared to be genuinely impressed, and at the Leper Hospital, the cost of which is borne by the Kashmir State, but which is superintended by the Society's missionaries, there were a couple of inquirers among the eighty inmates.*

Educational Work.

A great change has come over the scene at the High School at Srinagar during the last twenty-five years or so. When it was first established some of the boys were cast into prison for attending it—now it is fairly popular with the State authorities, though a steady resistance is offered to projects for extension, and the grant-in-aid is only one quarter of the amount per boy received by the Roman Catholic School, and one-eighth of that given to the Hindu College. The number on the rolls of the school and its branch institutions has grown largely and now is very nearly 1,500. But the greatest change of all has taken place in the character of the lads and of the school staff, who, urged by the Rev. C. E. Tyndale-Biscoe's unconventional but judicious methods, have developed a manly character, and show in many respects a sense of social responsibility and a spirit of benevolence which twenty years ago appeared utterly foreign to their nature. The masters and boys alike are encouraged in social service, such as nursing the sick in their homes; taking out the sick from the city and mission hospitals in their boats for fresh air on the lake —300 were taken out during the summer of 1909; saving the drowning; rescuing people from houses and trees in a flood, and animals from cruelty; saving people and property in fires; carrying loads and cutting up firewood for old people; clearing the snow off roofs and streets; supporting with money those in distress; protecting and raising up women; helping to bring hooligans to justice; trying to lead public opinion in matters of sanitation and public health. How successful Mr. Tyndale-Biscoe's methods have been is shown by the following incident which he relates in the Church Missionary Review :—

* An article on the work among the lepers appeared in the Church Missionary Review, Aug., 1909, p. 473. For notes about the patients at Srinagar see Mercy and Truth, June, 1909, p. 166; Oct., p. 346; Nov., p. 355; and C.M.S. Gazette, April, 1910, p. 114.

Practical exemplification of Christianity.

We are in a dimly lighted room full of Hindus, male and female, relatives of a teacher, who lies in the last stage of cholera; these relatives have come to add their cries and groans to those of his household. His brother masters have been fighting for his life for some hours; it is 10 P.M., and one pair of tired men, with coats off and sleeves turned up, are just giving up to make way for two fresh ones who are coming on for another two hours' hard work, keeping his body warm with hot bottles and hot bricks, and massaging his limbs to ease the terrible cramps. His end is much nearer than we suppose, for as I put a spoonful of brandy into his mouth he gives a sigh and is gone. Yesterday he was full of life, rejoicing in his work, for he had the rare power of making others do cheerfully what they naturally hated. He was a coming leader of men. He was gone! and only the masters who were rubbing him knew that all was over. At their whispered request I left, but they never ceased all through that long night to massage the limbs and put hot bottles to that corpse, knowing well the danger they were running by so doing. When the morning light came stealing in at the windows they then broke the news to the roomful of relatives. 'Why did you act thus?' I asked. 'Sahib,' said the head nurse, 'if they had thought that he had died when he did the relatives would have charged you with his death, and there would have been a terrible row; and also women can bear bad news in the morning better than in the dark at night.' *

At one of the branch schools some fifty girls are received, and in addition two little schools for Mohammedan girls are carried on, one in the city and the other in a village.

Evangelistic Work.

An attempt to reach the people of Srinagar who have never been to the High School and have no need to consult the missionary doctors, was made by opening a free library and reading-room in a leading thoroughfare. The library consists chiefly of books dealing with the central doctrines of Christianity, Mohammedanism and Hinduism, and contains such works as Urdu translations of Wace's Christianity and Morality, Dale's Living Christ and the Four Gospels, etc. There is also at the library a small room set apart for private conversations with any who may seek them. The Rev. E. Johnson-Smyth says of this part of the work :—

Conversations at a mission-reading-room.

One interesting conversation of real import was with a moulvi, an old man who had some years past had a considerable interest in Christianity, having once bought a Bible in the city. He is a slow reader, but during the year has read such books as Sweet Firstfruits, some of the late Dr. Imad-ud-din's lectures and controversial books, as well as an introduction to the Old and New Testaments, the latter written by the Revs. John Ali Bakhsh and H. G. Grey. Another Mohammedan took away to read Dr. Tisdall's Mohammedan Objections to Christianity, with answers. A pundit who had never before, he said, heard of Christ, asked for a loan of Dr. Hooper's Doctrine of Salvation.

A pundit copied this example by opening a library on his own account about a mile away, and through this means Christian literature, borrowed from the mission-library, found its way into homes inaccessible to any other agency, and was read there by men who would have scorned to borrow directly from the Mission. The pundit's library was closed after a time through lack of funds, but the Mission has since opened a second library in the heart of the city. Magic lantern addresses were given every week at the reading-room, and a few zenanas in the city were visited from time to time.

Educational Work.

New buildings for Edwardes College.

In the past the Edwardes College at Peshawar has merely been an extension of the High School, but separate college buildings and the initial block of a hostel, erected at a cost of Rs. 50,000, towards which the Government made a generous grant of Rs. 24,000, and the Punjab University one of Rs. 9,000, besides Rs. 2,500 towards the hostel, were opened by the Bishop of Lahore in January, 1910. The erection of these buildings is of special importance, since the Government has announced the project of a Mohammedan College at Peshawar, for which public subscriptions will be invited.* The Society's College had eighteen students at the end of 1909. The number of boys at the High School at Bannu was 606, the highest on record; some of these were attracted from Bokhara, Merv and other places inaccessible to the Christian missionary.†

subscription as a memorial to the late Dr. S. Page Barton, while at Thal the Lord Roberts Hospital was opened by Captain Bolton, Deputy-Commissioner of Kohat, in the absence of the Viceroy, whose visit had been cancelled in consequence of the unsettled condition of that part of the frontier. Later in the year the new hospital was visited by the Commander-in-Chief, Sir O'Moore Creagh, who made a donation to its funds. It was daily thronged by sick and wounded from all the surrounding districts. At Peshawar likewise the medical work was popular, the accommodation of the hospital was often taxed to the utmost, and a large number of people applied for treatment as out-patients. The Gospel was faithfully and earnestly put before all the patients, and the missionaries were cheered by the baptism of a Mohammedan moulvi and his two sons as fruit of the medical work. The moulvi, who belongs to a village in the Hazara district, was first drawn towards Christianity by reading some books lent to him by the Rev. T. R. Wade when he visited Abbottabad, and he had been instructed at the hospital for more than a year before he was baptized. His change of faith involved loss of property and complete separation from most of his relatives, but his wife afterwards joined him, and placed herself and her two youngest sons under instruction. Another baptism was that of a boy from Swat. Dr. R. J. H. Cox gives his story as follows :—

Baptism of a Mohammedan moulvi and his two sons.

We had staying in the wards for some time two talibs (or learners in a mosque) from Swat, away over the border to the north. One of them had blown his hand to bits with a gun. They stayed some time, and although apparently unaffected by the teaching they received and all the kindness they were shown, really this was not so, for after they had been gone some days they came back, bringing a small boy of about fifteen years old to the hospital. He, too, was a Swati, and they had found him walking about the bazaar in Peshawar, and had brought him back to be 'a servant in the hospital,' and to work with the Christians and help us all!

Dr. Lankester took him on as a helper, and the way he drank in the teaching from the very first, and wanted more and more, was wonderful. In the autumn he went with some other delegates from Peshawar to the Sialkot Convention, and there, it seems, really gave his heart to the Lord Jesus Christ.

Shortly after returning he went off back to Swat to see his people, and, although they chaffed him and abused him, he remained firm and true to his new-found Master, and shortly after returning he was baptized.

A branch dispensary in connexion with the Peshawar Hospital is carried on at Akora. At first there was a good deal of opposition, but now the one complaint of the people is that the Mission delayed so long to give them a resident doctor.*

Evangelistic Work.

An interesting movement towards Christianity began in the summer of 1908 among a little colony of Mihtars (out-castes) at

* A description of the evangelistic work at the Peshawar Hospital was given in Mercy and Truth, Nov., 1909, p. 363. For other details of the medical work in the North-West Frontier Province see ibid., June, 1909, p. 170; Aug., p. 263; Dec., p. 394.

Jamrud, ten miles from Peshawar. They were joined in the year mentioned by some relatives who had been baptized in the Narowal district, but seemed to have lapsed into indifference. In order to win them back the Rev. Khair Ullah visited the place from time to time, and his efforts resulted not only in the reclamation of the backsliders, but also in all the rest of the colony putting themselves under instruction, though they live among the Khyber Rifle Guards, composed of fanatical Afridis. Thirteen of these people were baptized in Peshawar church in the summer, and twenty-eight others on Christmas day.* One of the workers at Bannu was baptized after a prolonged search after truth, and lost his wife and home in consequence, while at that station there were other inquirers who, however, were deterred from openly confessing themselves Christians lest they should undergo similar loss. There was some fruit also of the evangelistic work at Dera Ismail Khan, where the Church was happily almost entirely free from dissensions, and showed more corporate life. While some of the converts there cause sorrow, the 'average standard of their lives and morality is far higher than that of the non-Christian world around.'

Baptisms.

IV. BALUCHISTAN.

Medical Work.

THE medical mission at Quetta lost a valued Indian worker by the death of Dr. Martin Luther—a man with a 'passion for work,' who 'lived for the success of the medical mission'—after eighteen years in the service of the C.M.S. Several family wards were built by grateful patients, besides two erected with a sum of Rs. 600 voted by the Hindu panchayat (local committee) of Jacobabad, where Dr. H. T. Holland spent two busy days at the end of 1908. Several inquirers came forward, and one of them was baptized, not, however, by a C.M.S. missionary, but by one of the workers of the Episcopal Methodists, who was satisfied to receive him into the visible Church without his first going through a proper course of instruction and probation.†

Thank-offerings for special mercies.

The Rev. A. E. Ball, after reporting the apostatizing of one of the converts in a fit of anger, on recovering from which he asked to be received back into the Church, refers to the character of the Christians, who are twice as many as seven years ago. Speaking of their custom of making thankofferings for special mercies, he says :—

> The most striking instance is that of a young hospital assistant in Government service expressing his desire to join the mission-hospital in place of the late much-lamented Dr. Luther. This would mean a lower stipend and the refunding of £800 to Government. In regard to the former, he would be satisfied to receive less, and, as to the refund, he believes his father would gladly make it. It is a fact not to be questioned, that the hearty reception of Christ does work moral and spiritual miracles in the lives of many of our people, and makes hope strong for the future of Christianity in India.

Evangelistic Work.

Seven adults, including a Chinese man and his wife, were baptized, and several Mohammedans were under instruction for a time, but four of them proved to be animated by unworthy motives in seeking baptism. Visits were paid monthly to Chaman, an out-station on the Afghan frontier, where the services are conducted by Colonel Southey, commanding the 130th Baluchis. The congregation consists of a few low-caste Christians, with whom the Director-General of Fortifications sat side by side when he was on the visit to the place.

V. SINDH.

Evangelistic Work.

THE population of Sindh is nearly 3,250,000, and of these seventy-six out of every hundred are Mohammedans, and twenty-three call themselves Hindus. The C.M.S. has three stations in the province: at Karachi, a modern city containing 116,000 people; Hyderabad, the old Mohammedan capital, with a population of 69,000; and Sukkur with 31,000 souls, most of them belonging to the old indigenous trading community.* The staff of the C.M.S., however, has always been small; indeed, in 1909, Hyderabad was left without a resident missionary, and was only visited once a month, although the deputy-collector there states that he knows of no other place in India where the people generally are so open to Christian teaching and influence. An Indian clergyman is stationed at Sukkur, and is 'efficient and earnest as a pastor and evangelist, and his literary labours are fruitful and useful.' Another Indian, a Sindhi convert, was ordained at the end of the year and has been assigned to Karachi.

Among the inquirers in Sindh are a 'Sufi Pir' (mystic saint) in the Hyderabad district, who has undergone much persecution for Christ's sake, and some Punjabis of the Chuhra caste, who, however, live in out-of-the-way places where it is difficult to arrange for their instruction.

Medical Work.

A visit was paid to Shikarpur, in North Sindh, by Drs. A. Neve and H. T. Holland. They were entertained by a Hindu banker, who had offered to put Mr. Holland up, pay all expenses, and house and feed all in-patient and operation cases. About 6,000 patients were seen by the doctors during their month's visit.†

Educational Work.

The High School at Karachi has the names of some 600 boys on its roll. Steps were taken in 1909 to increase the efficiency of the work, and marked advance is anticipated in the immediate future. At one time the Christian boys in the hostel caused anxiety, and two of them ran away, but by the end of the year a decided improvement was discernible in the conduct of the lads.

WESTERN INDIA MISSION.

THE PAST HISTORY.

For fifty years after Bombay became a British possession the English had neither church nor chaplain in the city, and it was not till a century later still that any effort was made for the evangelization of its inhabitants. The first Protestant missionaries, agents of the American Board of Foreign Missions, arrived in 1813. It was in 1820 that the C.M.S. work was inaugurated in Bombay by the Rev. Richard Kenney. The operations of the Society there have been very limited, but in 1832 the work was extended to Nasik; Junnar was occupied in 1843; Malegam, 1848; Aurungabad, 1860; Poona, 1882; and Manmad, 1901.

The first Bishop of Bombay, Dr. Carr, was consecrated in 1835. His successors have been: Bishops Harding (1851), Douglas (1869), Mylne (1876), Macarthur (1898), Pym (1903), and Palmer (1908).

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK.

Five stations are occupied by European missionaries (of whom there are eleven clergymen, eight wives, and five single women on the list) in Western India.

The institutions in the Mission consist of the Robert Money School for boys and a Boarding-school for Christian girls in Bombay; at Poona, to the south-east, a Divinity School and a High School for Parsi girls; while at Sharanpur, a suburb of Nasik, which lies to the north-east, there are Orphanages and a Middle School, as also at Aurungabad, about 100 miles east of Nasik. There are Hostels in Bombay, Lonauli, Aurungabad and Badnapur.

Special efforts are made to reach the Mohammedans in Aurungabad; and itinerating work is carried on from Manmad, rather to the north, and also from some of the other stations. The Z.B.M.M. does most of the work among the women, but the C.M.S. has some zenana work at Aurungabad. The Indian clergy, ten in number, are responsible for the oversight of most of the 3,500 Native Christians. There are also 145 Indian Christian lay agents.

The following are the members of the Bombay Corresponding Committee: the Bishop of Bombay, Mr. A. H. S. Aston, Mr. R. G. Monteath, Hon. Mr. H. E. E. Procter, Mr. W. L. Weldon, and the Revs. W. Kennelly, H. J. Smith and Canon R. S. Heywood (Secretary).

Death of Rev. H. C. Squires.

THE Rev. H. C. Squires, a former member of the Mission, died at St. Albans on April 15, 1910. He and the Rev. R. A. Squires, his twin brother, after graduating at Oxford and Cambridge respectively, offered to the Society and sailed for the Western India Mission in 1870; Henry laboured there with a brief intermission till 1889, and Robert till 1894, both holding at different times the secretaryship of the Mission and various other important positions, and both were Fellows of Bombay University. Since 1893 the former was, until a few weeks before his death, Vicar of Holy Trinity, Richmond.

The Rev. Luxman Hari has been transferred from Rajputana to the Western India Mission. The Committee have accepted the resignation of the Rev. A. Manwaring, after thirty-one years' service.

Steady decrease in the male staff of the Mission.

The Rev. Canon R. S. Heywood, the Secretary of the Mission, laments the fact that the number of C.M.S. men missionaries in Western India has steadily decreased of late years, and at the end of 1909 was smaller than at any time since 1891. In June, 1905, the staff consisted, besides women missionaries and Indian lay agents, of sixteen European and seven Indian clergy and one layman. When Canon Heywood wrote his annual letter there were twelve British and nine Indian clergy and no laymen, and six of the Indian clergy were in deacons' orders. There is some compensation in the fact that five single women missionaries are now on the staff, but, valuable though they are, they cannot make up for the shortage of men.

Pastoral Work.

While the lack of men is felt in many departments of the work, it perhaps specially affects the pastoral work, seeing that so many of the Indian clergy have not yet been admitted to priests' orders. Some of the districts are of considerable size—that which is worked from Aurungabad covers an area of about 100 square miles, and is divided into seven pastorates—and the congregations in the country parts only see the face of a missionary about once in two years, if as often as that. Yet there is great need that they should be visited more frequently. There are quarrels to be adjusted, jealousies to be removed, cases of relapse into idolatry to be inquired into—with a view, if necessary, to a report to the Bishop for excommunication—and hindrances to the spiritual life to be taken away. Some of these hindrances arise from the connexion of the converts with 'village service'; as village servants they are required to perform certain duties which are connected with idolatry, and yet their livelihood largely depends upon the dues received for the service. Then there is the necessity of preparation for Confirmation. The Rev. J. P. Butlin of Aurungabad describes the steps which had to be taken for the preparation of the village Christians, who were already under regular instruction, when notice was received that the Bishop of Madras, in whose diocese Aurungabad is situated, proposed to hold a Confirmation. Mr. Butlin writes :—

Preparation for Confirmation.

I called in all my chief agents, that I might give them instruction to be imparted to others. We all sat in the infant school, and the pastor wrote it all on two blackboards, written behind and before. It was so fresh to them that when they had written it all down they asked me kindly to go over it again that they might get it into their heads. The instruction was on the lines of C. J. Vaughan on Confirmation, and included the baptismal covenant, the Creed, the Lord's Prayer, the Ten Commandments, the nature of prayer, the Sacraments, the meaning of Communion, the reason of Confirmation, the laying-on of hands, and the questions and answers of the Confirmation office. Then it had to be taught to the people 'precept upon precept, precept upon precept, line upon line, line upon line; here a little and there a little.' The instruction had to be given at night when the people, who often could neither read nor write, came home tired from work, all in the simplest Marathi. And then came their examination. Poor things! The great majority had no notion what such a thing meant; only a ghastly fear in their minds that their ignorance would be hopelessly exposed and their Confirmation thereby postponed. Only those who could read well were asked the questions of the Catechism; the others were asked questions like these: 'What is the good of Confirmation?' 'What are you going to confirm?' 'Why should one be confirmed?' Then came others certainly not in the Prayer-book: 'Do you intend marrying your children by Hindu rites?' 'If your children were ill, would you rely on prayers or charms ?' 'Would you impersonate the cholera goddess in time of cholera ?' Many will, perhaps, be surprised at these questions, but when you are bringing a people out of Heathenism there are bound to be some relics left, and we were saddened on more than one occasion during these rains by instances of baptized and confirmed people impersonating the cholera goddess. Also the number of marriages of Christian people by Hindu rites in this district is appalling.* In short, I made Confirmation a definite stand against Heathenism and a definite decision for Christ.

Marriages of Christians by heathen rites.

The reason for the Hindu marriages referred to is that the people desire to marry their children as infants. Mr. Butlin says of the people of one village which he visited :—

Their faith is very simple. 'What have you gained by becoming a Christian ?' I asked a simple cultivator among his fields. 'Gained !' he almost turned on me. 'Why, I have gained the protection and blessing of God on myself and wife and family.' And yet when we came to inquire we found that nearly all the people with one consent were withholding their children from Holy Baptism to marry them as infants by Hindu rites. 'On Sunday afternoon next at 4 P.M. Holy Baptism will be administered to children; kindly bring all those not yet baptized.' Such was the notice given. Not a child was brought, and the mothers took them off into the jungle instead, for fear we might take them by force and baptize them. We must not blame them overmuch. They had had very little teaching.

It is only Christianity that can insist on the marriage age being raised, because Christ has the strength to raise the moral character. Now the men were willing, but the women refused. Who says women have no influence in the East ? So the remedy was to organize women's meetings by the Mem Sahib. The women came every day for a week for about two hours in the middle of the day. It was a tedious business. Every point was repeated by one of themselves and discussed until it got into their heads; then the next point, and so on. Laboriously, however, the subjects—What it means to be a Christian, Child marriage, Christian marriage—were all gone into from the Scriptural and practical point of view. The result was that the following Sunday eight children, ranging from the age of nine months to six years, were brought willingly by their mothers to Holy Baptism, and the tide towards Hinduism turned.

Growing liberality.

While the condition of some of the congregations caused anxiety, that of others afforded ground for rejoicing. In particular the Marathi congregation in Bombay, which is under the Rev. D. L. Joshi, has made noteworthy advance of late years. The members of the Pastorate Committee take a greater interest in their duties; the people have responded to efforts to induce them to take up evangelistic work; and whereas thirteen years ago they could not collect more than four annas a week for their pastor's support their contributions in 1909 amounted to Rs. 1,460. The converts at Nasik also displayed increased liberality. One factor in the growth of the Bombay congregation, in which young men are conspicuous, has been the opening of a Hostel four years ago for young men from up-country visiting Bombay in search of work. So great has been its success that a second Hostel—for clerks and students—has since been established. Hostels may indeed be regarded as a special feature of the Mission for, besides those just mentioned, one was opened at Poona for Tamil-speaking young men; another at Lonauli, in that district, for youths working on the railway; others at Aurungabad and Badnapur. Special services for Christians, combined with evangelistic meetings for non-Christians, were conducted by the Rev. T. Walker of Tinnevelly at most of the stations in the Western India Mission.

Evangelistic Work.

But few abnormal hindrances were met with in the evangelistic work, though in Bombay, it is true, the interest in ameliorating the lot of the depressed classes lately discovered by the Hindus and Unitarians has flattered the pride of the low castes and tended to keep them away from Christianity. Dissensions among the Indian workers in the Mohammedan Mission at Aurungabad and the subtle snare of ambition for higher rank and pay affected the efforts in that city, and the lectures on Christian doctrine which were delivered both in the old book-depôt and in a new one which was opened during the year were but poorly attended. On the other hand abundant openings were found in visiting the zenanas of Aurungabad,* and the meetings held in a new preaching-hall in Bombay attracted audiences which crowded the room. In the Manmad district a growing friendliness towards Christianity was shown in some parts, two new out-stations were opened, and twenty-two persons were admitted to the catechumenate. A few other inquirers are mentioned: a man and a woman, inmates of Leper Asylums; and a number of Mohammedans at Badnapur, in the Aurungabad district, who were influenced by debates which they and their fellow-villagers held with the mission schoolmaster, and who, when opposition arose, visited him by night to learn about Christianity. The adults baptized during the year included a man and a woman of the Naidoo caste at Poona, a Mohammedan at Aurungabad, and several persons who were baptized by immersion during a festival near a town called Kaigaon, in the presence of crowds of pilgrims who had visited the place to bathe in the 'sacred' stream.†

Educational Work.

Robert Money School.

The Divinity School at Poona was reopened in the summer with four men reading for priests' orders. In Bombay the Robert Money School contains nearly 200 boys, most of them Hindus. The Rev. J. H. Robinson, the Principal, says: 'Day by day we see the working of the Holy Spirit in the hearts and lives of the boys and masters. They realize that the "Word of God" is a living force, and some indeed have learnt to love Jesus and look to Him for help, and even pray in His name.' He adds that he hopes before very long to be able to tell of some baptisms. Though the number of pupils in the Girls' Boarding-school is still small, the day-school connected with it grew, and when the time came for any of the children to leave the school it was evident that they did so with regret. At St. Helena's, Poona, which is attended by the daughters and some sons of the best Parsi families, a couple of lads in Standard VIII., when asked to describe the book which in their opinion was the best that had ever been written, selected the Bible and gave a number of reasons for their preference. A large number of children of both sexes are accommodated in the Orphanages at Nasik and Aurungabad, to some of whom industrial training is given. The children of the mission agents and other Christians are admitted to the Lower Secondary Schools connected with the Orphanages, and at Aurungabad at all events the privilege was much valued and applications for admission were more numerous than the vacancies. Besides the above there are a number of primary schools in the Mission, and a new one was opened, with the kind permission of the commanding officer, for the Tamil-speaking camp-followers attached to the 27th Light Cavalry stationed at Ghorpuri, a suburb of Poona. The effectiveness of the educational work is shown by the remark of certain Mohammedan parents who objected to their children learning verses of the Bible by heart, since, they said, 'the verses so remain in the boys' minds that they repeat them when they are dying.'

The Bible described as the best book ever written.

The Rev. D. L. Joshi has undertaken the editorship of an Anglo-Marathi magazine, The Torch of Religion, of which the first number was published towards the close of the year.

SOUTH INDIA MISSION.

THE PAST HISTORY.

The Tamil Country south of Madras was the scene of the S.P.C.K.'s Missions in the eighteenth century. But the first two clergymen of the Church of England who went to India as missionaries were sent to Madras by the Church Missionary Society in 1814. The East India Act of 1833 made provision for a new bishopric of Madras, and Daniel Corrie was consecrated in 1835. His successors have been Bishops Spencer (1837), Dealtry (1849), Gell (1861) and Whitehead (1899). Work was commenced at Ootacamund, on the Nilgiri Hills, in 1870.

The Telugu Mission was begun in 1841 by two of the most devoted men on the roll of C.M.S. missionaries, Robert T. Noble and Henry Watson Fox. Noble started in 1843 the famous English school at Masulipatam, now known by his name, worked it for twenty-two years, and died at his post in 1865. Many Brahmans trained in it have embraced the Gospel, and it has sent forth several Indian clergymen to labour among their countrymen. Fox was a preaching missionary, and set the example of those itinerating and rural missionary efforts which have resulted in the foundation of an increasing Native Church, hitherto chiefly drawn from the Malas and other out-caste or low-caste people. Ellore was occupied in 1854; Bezwada, 1858; Raghavapuram, 1872; Khammamett, 1888; and Hyderabad, 1901. A Mission among the Kois, a non-Aryan tribe on the Upper Godavari, was founded at Dummagudem by General Haig in 1860.

In 1820 the Rev. J. Hough, Chaplain at Palamcotta, drew the attention of the Society to the claims of Tinnevelly, where there was already a community of 3,000 professed Indian Christians, an offshoot from the S.P.C.K.'s Lutheran Mission in Tanjore. Two missionaries were at once set apart for this work, and from that time to this, through the labours of Rhenius, Pettitt, Thomas, J. T. Tucker, Hobbs, Sargent and others (not to mention workers of the S.P.G., which has a fruitful Mission contiguous to that of the C.M.S.), the Gospel has not ceased to spread among the Tamil population, chiefly among the Shanars, or cultivators of the palmyra tree. In North Tinnevelly a vigorous Itinerant Mission was established by Ragland, D. Fenn and Meadows. Dr. Sargent and Dr. Caldwell were consecrated in 1877 as assistant-Bishops to the Bishop of Madras for the Native Churches. The former died in 1889 and the latter in 1891. Dr. Morley was consecrated in 1896, his jurisdiction (consensual) extending over Tinnevelly and Madura. He resigned in 1903, and was succeeded by Dr. Williams.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK.

The South India Mission, in which twenty-five European and Colonial clergymen, two laymen, twenty-one wives of missionaries, and eight single women are engaged, falls into three divisions.

I. The first division comprises the work in Madras, the Nilgiris and the Wynaad, though these are widely separated, Ootacamund being 300 miles south-west of Madras.

Pastoral and evangelistic work in Madras is almost exclusively in the hands of a District Church Council, which is manned and for the most part financed by Indians; but the Society has a Divinity School and the Harris High School, and is responsible for special efforts to influence Mohammedans. In the Nilgiris and the Wynaad there are several schools for boys, and a number of hill tribes are reached by the evangelistic work.

II. The Telugu Country stretches 500 miles northward from the city of Madras along the eastern coast of India, in some parts extending inland for 300 miles. About half-way up, near the coast, lies Masulipatam, the head station of the Telugu Mission; the other chief stations are Bezwada, on the Kistna, some fifty miles from its mouth; Ellore, north of Masulipatam; Dummagudem, 100 miles up the Godavari; Raghavapuram, on the borders of the Nizam's dominions; and Khammamett and Hyderabad, both in those dominions, the latter being the capital.

The chief educational agencies are the Noble College with an attached High School, a Training Institution, and the Sharkey Memorial Girls' School, at Masulipatam, and High Schools for boys at Bezwada and Ellore. Twenty-two Indian clergy are engaged in ministering to the numerous but scattered bodies of converts.

At Hyderabad the work is chiefly among Mohammedans; and at Dummagudem a few Kois are reached.

III. In Tinnevelly, at the extreme south of the Indian Peninsula, a District Church Council with an English chairman, under which forty-three Indian clergy are labouring, is responsible for the pastoral work among the 63,500 Christians, and also, with the help of an Itinerating Band of evangelists, for most of the evangelistic work, the majority of the Society's missionaries being engaged in education.

There is an Ordination Class at Dohnavur, a Preparandi Class at Palamcotta, a College and High School in Tinnevelly Town, High Schools for boys at Palamcotta, Mengnanapuram and Srivilliputhur, and Boys' Boarding-schools at Surandei, Sachiapuram and Dohnavur; while female education is provided for by the Sarah Tucker College and a Boarding-school at Palamcotta, the Elliot Tuxford School at Mengnanapuram, and Boarding-schools at Nallur and Suviseshapuram. There are schools for blind boys and girls at Palamcotta.

The C.E.Z.M.S. carries on women's work at most of the C.M.S. stations.

The following are the members of the Madras Corresponding Committee; The Bishop of Madras, Mr. A. S. Cowdell, Captain Elwes, Mr. P. Hawkins, Mr. E. S. Hensman, Mr. S. D. Pears, and the Revs. E. L. Cox, H. Hacking, E. A. L. Moore and Canon E. Sell (Secretary).

Death of Rev. J. Harrison.

One of the older workers in the Mission, the Rev. J. Harrison, was called to his eternal rest at Bezwada on September 11, 1909. He was ordained by the Bishop of London in 1867, after training at Islington College, and left for Bezwada in the autumn of that year, so that, at the time of his death, he had completed forty-two years' service. During that period he had been permitted to see the work grow in a marvellous way.*

Rev. N. Honiss.

Three other veterans, former workers in South India, have passed away. On December 2, 1909, the Rev. Nigel Honiss died at Cannes. He joined the Tinnevelly Mission in 1860, and after labouring there for sixteen years was transferred to the Mauritius Mission, with which he was connected for a similar period.

Rev. T. Y. Darling.

The Rev. T. Y. Darling passed away at West Compton, Dorset, on December 8, 1909. For twenty-eight years (1847–75) he laboured in the Telugu Mission, nearly five of them as a lay agent; then for twelve more (1877–89) he served as an Organizing Secretary at home, and for the last twenty years of his life he was Rector of Compton Abbas, in Dorsetshire. He was greatly honoured and loved for his simple faith and staunch fidelity.

and Rev. R. L. Allnutt.

The Rev. R. L. Allnutt, who died at Guildford on March 23, 1910, resigned a living in Cambridgeshire in 1846 in order to join Ragland in Tinnevelly, but ill-health obliged him to retire in the following year.

Reinforcement.

The only recruit assigned to the Mission has been the Rev. George Harvard Cranswick, B.A., Sydney University, Curate of St. Margaret's, Brighton, of the New South Wales Association. The Committee have accepted the resignation of Miss E. D. Stansfeld. A Kaisar-i-Hind medal of the second class has been awarded by the Government to Mrs. J. Cain of Dummagudem.

* The Rev. J. E. Padfield, who was closely associated with Mr. Harrison in India for many years, wrote an affectionate tribute to his friend's memory, which was printed in the Church Missionary Review, Nov., 1909, p. 678.

Madras District Church Council.

The Madras District Church Council, of which the Rev. W. D. Clarke is the chairman, is supported and governed entirely by Indians. In the Southern Pastorate, which is Mr. Clarke's special charge, there was an outpouring of the spirit of prayer on a number of the lay members; several dedicated themselves to missionary work, and a new missionary association, called the 'Zion Church Missionary Association,' was formed with the desire of inducing every member of Zion Church to undertake some voluntary service for the glory of God and the evangelization of India. Fourteen adults, a larger number than in any previous year, were baptized; they included the clerk of the Madras District Church Council and his wife, and a young man who was brought to the knowledge of Christ by his own father. The latter was won twenty years ago by the consistent Christian life of an earnest young Englishman, who was the means of leading three of his domestic servants to the Saviour.

I. MADRAS, THE NILGIRIS AND THE WYNAAD.

Educational Work.

AFTER an interval of eighteen years, during which he was at Hyderabad, Canon M. G. Goldsmith returned to the supervision of the Harris High School at Madras, which has the names of 301 boys on its rolls, all of them Mohammedans with the exception of five Hindus and two Christians. Six of the lads passed the Matriculation Examination. Educational work at Ootacamund prospered, and even in the Wynaad, where the oversight of the schools has largely to be left to catechists, and the inconsistencies of certain of the teachers were a stumbling-block, there were signs that good work was being done.

Pastoral Work.

The Christians at Ootacamund increased their contributions towards the maintenance of the work, and a good many of them took an active part in it from time to time, while a happy spirit of unity characterized the Church Committee. One or two persons, however, had to be excommunicated, and at Coonoor a great deal of dissension prevailed.

Evangelistic Work.

The missionaries in Madras were in touch with a certain number of Mohammedan and Hindu inquirers, and in the Wynaad, where the work is handicapped by the extreme unhealthiness of the district, indications were seen of a movement towards Christianity among the hill-tribes. Several Kurichers, a Kurumber and an Irular, the last named the first of his race to be received into the visible Church in the Wynaad, were baptized in December, and the early baptism of one or two more Kurumbers was expected, while, besides these, there were some who may be regarded as inquirers. The Rev. A. N. C. Storrs wrote as follows in the month mentioned :—

Baptism of hill-men.

The day before yesterday I visited three Kurumber villages, in each of which the men joined in prayer with us, kneeling down on the ground and with apparent earnestness repeating every petition. In the first village we visited, the headman spontaneously said, before engaging in prayer, 'I believe that Jesus Christ is the only God.' To prove their sincerity, they broke off the charms which were tied round their children's necks and threw them away, and the headman promised he would build a little prayer-house.

There were also some promising inquirers among the Paniars, but it was difficult to arrange for their systematic instruction.*

II. TELUGU COUNTRY.

Progress in the Telugu Mission.

THE Rev. J. B. Panes, reviewing his twenty-five years of service in the Telugu Mission, points out that during that period the Native Christians have increased by 370 per cent., the communicants by 634 per cent., and the annual number of baptisms by 480 per cent., while the number of villages with resident teachers has advanced from 250 to 692, and the contributions of the Christians have risen from Rs. 2,270 to Rs. 12,616. There has also been considerable growth in the staff of Indian agents, which in 1908 (the latest year for which the full figures were available when Mr. Panes wrote) consisted of twenty-two clergy and 510 lay workers, as compared with three and 109 respectively twenty-five years before.

Educational Work.

But while there has been a gratifying increase in the number of Indian agents, the staff is not commensurate with the needs, especially in view of the remarkable movement towards Christianity of late years, and arrangements have therefore been made to raise the number of boarders at the Training Institution at Masulipatam from seventy-five to 100. The work there is carried on in several departments. There is the divinity class, which is composed of six men, tested by years of experience as catechists; a new class for evangelists, with some fifteen members; a normal school, which was materially strengthened during the year; and a boarding-school. The new buildings for the Noble College, which were begun in 1908,† collapsed in the summer, just as they were approaching completion, and the engineer who was called in expressed his opinion that bad workmanship and materials were responsible for the disaster, and advised that the whole building should be demolished. The number of names on the rolls of the college, high school and six branch schools is 1,110. A young Brahman, belonging to a very good Madras family, was baptized at the college in the autumn. The curriculum of the Sharkey Memorial School was extended by adding a sixth form in which two girls studied for the Matriculation Examination of the Madras University. The many openings for vernacular schools in the Ellore district emphasize the importance of the extension of the Training Institution just mentioned. As a case in point may be taken that of a large caste village, called Kykaram.* Two of its chief men, local officials, and former pupils at the Ellore High School, visited Canon F. W. N. Alexander, and asked him to open a school for their girls. They offered to guarantee fifty pupils, to pay fees, and to provide a school-room and a house for the teacher at their own cost. The village was visited a little later, and it was found that 100, instead of fifty girls, would be forthcoming as pupils, and that the buildings promised for occupation were ready. Unhappily neither the teacher nor the means to take advantage of such a remarkable opportunity was available.

There was but little abatement in the mass movement towards Christianity which began in 1907 and continued during 1908. In the Masulipatam district 226 adults were baptized during the year under review, and at its close the names of 590 inquirers were on the list; in the Ellore district the numbers were 168 and 892 respectively; in the Raghavapuram district, eighty-four and 1,695; in the Khammamett district, 263 and 3,403; and in the Bezwada district, seventy-three and 1,934; while in the Dummagudem district, where the number of Christians has increased by 50 per cent. in the last seven years, there were more Malas seeking to place themselves under instruction than ever before. Five new out-stations were opened in the Masulipatam district; and in that worked from Khammamett forty-eight villages asked for teachers, and the tide was evidently rising, for almost as many fresh inquirers came forward during the last four months of the year as in the previous nine months. Most of these were Malas (685), then Waddaras (511), and then Madigas (164) and Yerakalas (161).

Converts' well poisoned.

It not infrequently happens that the inquirers suffer sore persecution. At Vartalapalli, in the Masulipatam district, fifty-three members of the small congregation died in a couple of days in the summer, it was reported from cholera, but there was reason to suppose that the water in their well had been poisoned by the village authorities. Later in the year at that same place the masonry of the well used by the converts was destroyed and the well filled with rubbish and sand, while the village official by means of false evidence called before a heathen judge established his claim to the burial-ground, and proceeded to plough it up. In the Khammamett district a number of Waddaras, all closely related to one another, bore opposition and persecution patiently for two years, but at length it proved too much for them, and on the very day fixed for their baptism they drew back. At Pulla, in the Ellore district, devil-dancers erected an idol-shed opposite the prayer-house, and began their howling and dancing whenever the converts assembled for divine service; and at other places as well, those who joined the Church had to suffer much.* It would be thought that the prospect of undergoing such trials would deter all but those thoroughly in earnest from becoming inquirers, but this does not appear to have been altogether the case. A number of Sudra inquirers had their names removed from the list in the Raghavapuram district because they were found to have committed crimes, which brought the police down upon them; others drew back when they found that they would be required to discontinue field work on Sundays; and others were found to be actuated by a desire for material benefits in seeking instruction. Two adults were baptized at Hyderabad, in the Nizam's dominions, where the work is carried on among Mohammedans.†

Why some inquirers withdrew.

Albeit on the whole the Christians endured with fortitude and faithfulness the persecution to which they were exposed, a few of them gave way, and there were others who fell into gross sin, and others again who openly apostatized because they were called upon to associate with out-castes. There was a good deal of unrest, too, among some of the congregations, especially in the Ellore district. At one place quarrels arose out of marriage disputes; at another the converts failed to get on with three successive teachers; at others caste feeling was at the root of the troubles. On the other hand, the contributions of the converts increased, and in many cases involved real self-denial, particularly on the part of the workers. Indeed, from what the Rev. R. W. Peachey says, it would appear that these furnish by far the greater part of the gifts. He estimates that in the district under his charge not more than Rs. 600 out of a total of Rs. 1,894 comes from the rank and file of the Christians and inquirers, who number some 5,000, and that the balance represents the offerings of the 100 or so paid Christian workers. Among the encouragements of the year in connexion with the pastoral work were the successful organization of a new pastorate in the Ellore district; the return to the Church in another part of some converts who had seceded; a striking disregard of caste on the part of a young Christian of Tank-digger caste, who in a time of peril by flood carried out of danger some children of the Madigas, who are regarded as unclean by other Hindus;‡ the efficient work of some of the agents, notably the catechist at Hyderabad; the offer of a young man at that station to go to a theological college (where his expenses would be defrayed by his brother) so as to qualify for work as a mission agent; and the zeal of many individuals among the converts, such as of those at Malkanagiri, who undertook an eight days' walk to Dummagudem through a wild district infested by tigers and panthers so as to present themselves for confirmation,* and of a sub-assistant of police who when present in the discharge of his duties in a temple which none but Brahmans are supposed to enter, boldly avowed his faith, declaring that he was a Christian 'to the core of his being.' When mass movements towards Christianity are in progress there is always special danger that in spite of all precautions some who are unworthy will gain admission into the Church; but it should be remembered, when estimating the character of the converts in the Telugu country, that one case of wrong-doing is likely to bulk more largely in the reports of the missionaries than ten of consistency of life, simply because the former is exceptional and the latter the rule.

Literary Work. The Rev. J. B. Panes completed and carried through the Press some notes for Telugu students on the Acts of the Apostles, and began to translate and adapt Part I. of The Catholic Faith, by Dr. Griffith Thomas.

III. TINNEVELLY.

Educational Work. THE Preparandi Institution at Palamcotta had thirteen students in the theological class, to whom practical training in evangelistic work is given as well as instruction in divinity. Both they and the normal students acquitted themselves well in examinations.

Tinnevelly College. The Rev. H. J. Schaffter and his colleagues at Tinnevelly College continued as in 1908 to suffer much inconvenience through being called upon to give evidence in cases arising out of the riot which took place in Tinnevelly Town in March of that year, and the first named, writing at the end of the year under review, said that news had lately reached him that a fresh lot of suspects had been arrested and were awaiting trial. One member of the staff, a Brahman convert, left to read for ordination, and his place was filled by another convert from Brahmanism, won at a C.M.S. school 100 miles away. 'Brahman baptisms,' remarks Mr. Schaffter, 'are becoming less rare.' A former student at the College, Mr. V. S. Azariah, was ordained in 1909 and appointed to superintend the work of the Indian Missionary Society of Tinnevelly in the Telugu Country.† The High School at Palamcotta had a successful year in athletics, and better still, the Brahman youth mentioned in last year's Report ‡ as desirous to become a Christian openly avowed himself as such; he had in consequence to be sent to Madras, where he was baptized in January, 1910. Several of the non-Christian boarders were under instruction for baptism with the consent of their parents, others of them were baptized, and a former pupil, a Hindu of influence and position at Sivakasi, joined the Christian Church in spite of the opposition of his friends and relatives. Three former students at the Mengnanapuram High School took up mission-work in connexion with the Native Church during the year.

Sarah Tucker College.

The Sarah Tucker College at Palamcotta was exceptionally successful in the examinations held at the close of 1909. In the Peter Cator Scripture examination, open to the whole Presidency, in the senior grade two of the girls gained prizes—the first and third out of only three given, and in the junior grade five prizes were won out of twelve, one being the first prize, while all the students who appeared for the examination passed. The two students who appeared for the University F.A. examination both passed, and four out of the twelve who appeared for the matriculation—a higher proportion than gained by any other girls' school in the Presidency. In the training classes all the four upper secondary students passed, and only five failed out of the thirty-two who appeared for the elementary grade. A former student who was a teacher at the college last year, while she studied her third subject (English) for the B.A. (she had already passed two subjects last year in Madras), was successful in her examination and took her B.A. degree.

Blind Schools.

With the sanction of the Committee, Miss A. J. Askwith has resigned the Principalship of the College, in order that she may devote all her time to work among blind children. Some years ago she opened small schools for them in the college compound, and in June, 1909, more commodious premises for the boys were opened in a healthy suburb of the town, while the foundation of a girls' school was laid in the following month; a grant of Rs. 15,684 has been sanctioned by the Madras Government towards the cost of the buildings. Twenty-five of the children were baptized in 1909, and several others were under preparation for baptism at the end of the year.

Girls' Boarding-schools.

Nearly two-thirds of the 120 children at the Girls' Boarding-school at Palamcotta are the daughters of Indian clergy or other agents of the Mission. The school was highly commended by the Government inspectress, and it won two s lver medals and two parchment certificates at the Nagpore Exhibition by its needle-work. On Gospel Day* several of the girls visited some village schools, where they repeated selected texts, told Bible stories and sang suitable lyrics before a number of heathen as well as Christian mothers. The good work done at such schools is shown by the following story, told by Miss M. L. Pawson, concerning a former pupil at the boarding-school at Nallur, who has married and lives in a village

* On a certain day in each year the Tinnevelly Christians are asked to make a united personal effort for the evangelization of their fellow-countrymen. This day is called 'Gospel Day.'

where she and her husband are the only Christians. Miss Pawson paid a visit to this girl, who is named Esther, and writes as follows of what she saw :—

A former mission school-girl's good work.

I found her living with her husband's family in a small mud house, in which she had for herself and husband a tiny slip of a room about seven feet long and two feet and a half wide. The door out of this was the only opening, and looked straight on to a blank mud wall. This small 'room' was given to her and her husband because by going to church on Sundays they became unclean and so could not be allowed to touch the food of the rest of the family. She and her husband had to walk some distance to church, and on the way had to cross a river. Her husband is a young convert and quite uneducated. Esther was teaching him to read and they had prayers in the morning. Not only so, but she had persuaded little girls to come to her to learn to read and to learn of Christ. She was also allowed to go to a few houses of a higher-caste set and teach some little girls.

Primary schools as an evangelistic agency.

The primary schools, like the secondary, constitute a valuable evangelistic agency, and the experience of the Itinerating Band has shown that wherever there is a mission-school in the neighbourhood prejudice is broken down and the Gospel gets a fair hearing. Several examples are given by the Rev. H. A. D. Moorhouse. He tells not only of openings gained through the instrumentality of village schools, but also of faithful pastoral work accomplished by the schoolmasters, and writes :—

On going to a village one morning we had active opposition from the Mohammedan portion of the population. I began to think we should not get a hearing. Fortunately, at that moment a mission teacher from a neighbouring village arrived at the head of his scholars. He pointed out to the people that their own children who were with him were receiving the great benefit of our school, and asked for a hearing. They consented, and at the close the Mohammedan and Hindu parents gave their children leave to buy our books. Out of about seventy non-Christian boys in that school, sixty purchased copies of the Gospels. The headman of the Mohammedans was curious to read our books in spite of his opposition.

Preaching at another place I found the boys in the crowd answer the Scripture questions put to them so well that I said to the catechist, 'These boys are all Christians surely.' He replied, 'Nine out of ten are Hindus, but they are well taught from the Bible.' That man had his heart in the work.

In another centre of work a very earnest inspecting schoolmaster proved of great assistance. On one occasion we had decided to hold a magic-lantern meeting for Hindus at a convenient centre. A pandal had to be erected. Our friend undertook to be responsible. On the day appointed duty called him away to a place many miles distant till late in the afternoon. He hurried back, however, worked untiringly with his own hands to erect a shelter, headed the band of Christians, who gathered the people from the neighbouring villages, and gave a good address at the meeting afterwards. As we walked back together at two o'clock in the morning he cheerfully admitted that he had not eaten food for twelve hours. When I remarked that he must feel very exhausted, the reply was, 'We can eat at any time, but we must work while there is opportunity.' That man has been the means of winning many for Christ.

Mr. Moorhouse also mentions a number of instances in which a friendly reception was experienced at the hands of those from whom the contrary might have been expected, education in a mission-school having been instrumental in bringing about the change. Actual fruit, too, was reaped in several of the schools. At Dohnavur there is the son of the head of a zamindari family, who has learned to love the Gospel, and whose father is willing that he should be baptized; and in another village in that neighbourhood the majority of the sixty boys who attend the school have abandoned the use of their caste mark and regularly attend the services at church, while one of them, the son of a devil-dancer, notwithstanding severe beatings from his father, refuses to worship idols or partake of food which has been offered to them.

Mission school-boys abandon the use of their caste mark.

The Tinnevelly District Church Council has fifty-seven pastorates connected with it; these are grouped in fourteen circles, from which representatives are sent to the Council, which consists of two missionaries, twenty-five Indian clergymen and forty-nine lay delegates. The Rev. E. S. Carr, the chairman of the Council, says that the pastors and other workers have a number of difficulties to contend with. Many of the adherents among whom they labour are very ignorant; prejudice often runs high; marriage irregularities are not uncommon; there is a tendency to disregard the Lord's Day; and of late drinking habits have increased, introduced often by those who learnt them during their sojourn in the Straits Settlements, Burma, etc., whither they had proceeded in search of work. At some places, too, the action of the Roman Catholics in conniving at caste observances—as at Pannikulam, where they have built a pucca church for the Vellalas (who rank next to the Brahmans in the social scale) and undertake that it shall be reserved for them—has not made easier the work of the Protestants who refuse to recognize any distinctions in the house of God; while the persecution to which the Romanists subject the Protestants is a real and sore hindrance.* The Rev. V. Daniel speaks of the 'spiritual lethargy' of the majority of the converts in the Ukkaramcotta district, and another pastor refers to the 'deplorable state' of his flock; but many are able to tell of zealous efforts on the part of their people to win the Heathen around them, manifested especially on Gospel Day, and of praiseworthy liberality, particularly in the erection of pucca churches. In the Kovilpatti pastorate, for example, some members of the Church gave one quarter of their income for that purpose, while a little congregation in the Shermadevi pastorate, numbering only 156 persons, contributed Rs. 2,600 for a new church. The people also showed growing interest in the work of the Indian Missionary Society of Tinnevelly. A summer school for the evangelists maintained by the Tinnevelly Missionary Association under the Council was held at the end of September,† and in some of the circles special gatherings were held occasionally for the benefit of the lay agents.

Evangelistic Work.

The Itinerating Band † met with little hindrance to their work through political unrest. Now and again, it is true, some English-speaking young men, educated at a college where no religion is taught, displayed rudeness, and bitter hostility was experienced at the hands of the Mohammedans, but the common people as a rule listened patiently if not gladly, a large number of scripture portions was sold, and an 'undercurrent of dissatisfaction with Hinduism' appeared to pervade the minds of all classes. Concerning the sale of the Scriptures, which was made a matter of earnest prayer, Mr. Moorhouse wrote in December :—

Large sales of the Scriptures.

Twelve months ago we felt happy if we succeeded in selling 100 copies during a tour. To-day we are selling ten times that number in a month. One day I was preaching in a village, and at the close of my address I urged the people to read for themselves. A man who had been listening attentively said, 'I will not pay a price for the book, but if you give it to me I will read it.' I said, 'The price is small, but the book is worth untold rupees to you. Listen to its teaching.' Calling a boy from the crowd, I opened St. Matthew's Gospel and asked him to read from the Sermon on the Mount. He had not read half a dozen sentences before our friend, who had objected to payment, said, 'That is a good book; give it to me. Here is the money.' His example was followed by others. We disposed of twenty on the spot. Again, when preaching in a better-class street several young men began to ridicule our Message. An elderly man stopped them, saying, 'You must not mock these people, they are speaking good words. It is the first duty of every one to find out the truth.' He bought three gospels and had a short conversation about their contents.

Among the incidents of the year was a controversy with a Mohammedan champion at a place called Neduvel. On one occasion he interrupted the bazaar preaching, but was dragged away by an older companion. The latter called on the missionaries the next day and suggested that a public discussion should be held in some building on the relative merits of Christianity and Mohammedanism. About thirty-five Mohammedans attended and behaved most politely. Mr. E. Keyworth gives the following account of the discussion, which illustrates the objections sometimes brought forward against Christianity. He says :—

A Mohammedan controversy.

The Mohammedan champion commenced by asserting that all sacrifices were always unnecessary, for in Hosea vi. 6 and St. Matthew ix. 13 and xii. 7 God says, 'I desired mercy and not sacrifice.' We showed by the context that the real meaning of the passage was that God preferred kindness from man to man to mere outward ceremonies without love. The champion had apparently not looked much at the context and dropped the subject, knowing that in the Pentateuch God had ordained many sacrifices, and that in Mecca itself sacrifices are now being offered and are ordered in Suras 108 and 22 of the Koran itself, as we reminded him. He then took up a new line, quoting Isaiah xlii. 1. He stated that this text, beginning, 'Behold my servant, whom I uphold,' referred to Mohammed. We again advised him to read the context, especially the second and third verses, 'He shall not cry, nor lift up. . . . A bruised reed shall he not break,' etc. Did Mohammed not go to war many times? The champion gave no answer to this, but when we pointed out that the same verse was quoted in St. Matthew xii. 18 as referring to Christ, he said, in his eagerness to disprove our statement, that it could not refer to our Lord, as He was not a servant but the Son! A wave of amused pity passed over the attentive audience, who saw their 'engineer hoist with his own petard,' and giving away the chief stronghold of Islam. We said that a son could and often did become a servant to his mother and father, etc., as the Duke of Connaught, though a prince, served in a subordinate position in the Indian Army for several years. The champion then changed the subject again, stating that there was no teaching about 'substitution' in the Bible. We asked him to look at Levit. i. 4 about sacrifices, where God Himself says, 'It shall be accepted for him to make atonement for him'; also to Isaiah liii. 5, 'But He was wounded for our transgressions,' etc.; and said that the word used for 'atonement' in the Arabic Bible, and also in Hindustani for 'propitiation,' as in 1 John ii. 2, is the word kafara, i.e., 'expiation.' He took up another point now which I have heard from other Moslem zealots also. 'God could not become man,' he declared. We asked him to consider that he was hereby denying one of the greatest doctrines of his own creed, viz., Divine Omnipotence, as God is called in the Koran frequently 'Qadiri Mutlaq,' i.e., 'the Almighty.' We admitted that a perfectly holy God would not become a sinful man; but surely all of us must believe that He could become a sinless man.

Some interesting details are also given by Miss A. M. Naish of certain out-caste people, the Kulavars, which show that an impression is being made on them. She wrote in March, 1910:—

Children's faith in the power of prayer.

There are some Kulavars near Palamcotta who go almost every day to Tinnevelly Town (four miles off) to beg rice and gruel. On our way to and from Sunday-school we have seen them, and, having made friends with the children, have taught them as they ran behind our bullock-cart. This is the story one of these children, a little girl, told us after we had seen them (at intervals) for about a year: 'One day our mothers and we were very sad, as we went to Tinnevelly to get congee (rice-gruel), because we did not get anything. Then we said to our mothers, "We shall pray to that Jesus about Whom we have heard, and we are sure He will give us rice to-day." Our mothers said that it was no good to pray to Jesus for rice; and they made an agreement with us that, if Jesus should give us rice that day, they would know that He was the True God, and if He did not give the rice, then He was not the True God. After this we went our way. Very soon a Brahman woman called us, and without our asking gave us a pot full of congee. After we had received it we said to our mothers, "Now, Who gave us the congee? Who are the victors? Are not we, who prayed to that Jesus?" Our mothers replied, "Yes, you have won the day. What those Ammals say is true. You have more understanding than we, in believing that Jesus can give congee."'

Converts.

A large number of adult baptisms and of inquirers are reported. At Palamcotta a Brahman was received into the visible Church, who for six months had been kept in chains by his friends so as to deter him from being baptized, and another Brahman was under instruction, who was beaten and carried off by his relatives, but was rescued by the prompt intervention of the Inspector of Police.* In a village in the neighbourhood five former devil-dancers were received into the visible Church; an old pupil in the mission-school at Srivilliputhur, for some time a secret believer, and also a notorious thief, were baptized in the Virudupatti pastorate; and in another pastorate a poor widow was baptized who testified, 'I have been overwhelmed with grief and sorrow, and have known very little of joy and happiness, and I thought grief was my lot for life; but ever since I came to understand that my Saviour died for me, my joy has been so great that I feel as though I were crowned.' At Nallathamby, near Panneivilei, the village munsif, a priest at one of the temples, accepted the Lord Jesus as his Saviour and now is diligent in preaching Him to others, † while several baptisms took place among the Paliyans and Mannans, a couple of hill-tribes.‡ The inquirers included a great Sanscrit scholar, who has a wonderful knowledge of the Bible and the important truths in it, and professes to believe that it is necessary for himself and his salvation; an ex-Sepoy and a police constable at Kovilpatti; a devil-dancer, long a bitter opponent of Christianity, who publicly told his people that devil-worship is useless, and broke down the devil altar in the presence of the whole population of the place; and a number of people belonging to a village near Mengnanapuram. Mr. Carr writes as follows of the causes which led the last named to inquire into Christianity and the difficulties in the way of any open confession of Christ on their part:—

Inquirers.

Difficulties in the way of baptism.

They have, in times past, been so influential amongst the Hindus, mainly on account of their wealth, that it has been the custom at Trichendur, one of the most important sacred places in the district, for the Brahmans to come with garlands and music and take them in procession to the car so that they may touch it, and thereby sanction its being drawn along in the car festival. They have not been accorded this honour in the last few years, and are not allowed to enter the temples, as their caste is not considered high enough. This has been one factor in their becoming dissatisfied with Hinduism. They have also been sending their sons for education to our high schools and have received Christian instruction in that way. Some of their relatives at a place in the S.P.G. district have definitely put themselves under instruction, and this is another inducement. There are considerable difficulties in their way. Their women are kept in goshah and only leave the house very seldom, being wrapped up and carried to another house even then. They will not easily give up this custom. Then there are naturally the loose habits and ways which not infrequently characterize rich Hindus, but if they do finally become Christians it will probably mean the opening of the door for many others to follow their example.

TRAVANCORE AND COCHIN MISSION.

THE PAST HISTORY.

The Mission in the protected Hindu States of Travancore and Cochin, which occupy a narrow strip of country on the Malabar Coast, in the extreme south of India, between the Ghats and the Indian Ocean, was established in 1816 at the invitation of Colonel Munro, the British Resident. The Metran (or Bishop) of the ancient Syrian Church of Malabar, which claims to have been founded by the Apostle St. Thomas, had in 1806 requested help from the English Church. For twenty years the Mission was worked by Benjamin Bailey, Joseph Fenn, Henry Baker, sen., and others, their object originally being to benefit the Syrian Church by encouraging and aiding it to reform itself. Since 1837, however, the missionaries have aimed directly at the evangelization of the Heathen, thousands of whom have been baptized, while, as an indirect result of the work, a love of the Gospel has sprung up among the ancient Christians, whom the missionaries have urged to remain in and reform their own Church. Mar Athanasius, an old C.M.S. schoolboy, who was Metran from 1843 to 1877, was an active reformer. Since his death a large section of the Syrians has become an autonomous episcopal Church (known as the Reformed Church of St. Thomas), which maintains reformed worship in the vernacular, holds annually a convention for the deepening of the spiritual life, and carries on evangelistic work. The labours of Peet, Hawksworth, H. Baker, jun., and others, among the Heathen, particularly the lowest castes and the Hill Arrians, have also been greatly blessed. Allepie was occupied in 1816; Kottayam and Cochin, 1817; Mavelikara, 1839; Trichur, 1842; Pallam, 1845; Tiruwella, 1849; Kunnankulam, 1854; the Arrian Mission was begun in 1855; and the Alwaye Itinerancy in 1881.

On July 25, 1879, the Rev. J. M. Speechly, a C.M.S. missionary and for some time Principal of the Cambridge Nicholson Institution, was consecrated first Bishop of Travancore and Cochin. On his resignation in 1889 the Rev. E. N. Hodges, who had previously been Principal of the Noble College, Masulipatam, and then of Trinity College, Kandy, Ceylon, was nominated to the See; he was consecrated on April 25, 1890. Dr. Hodges retired in 1905, and Dr. Charles Hope Gill, a missionary of the Society, succeeded him.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK.

Three of the stations at present occupied by the Society's missionaries, viz., Kottayam, Pallam and Allepie, are in the State of Travancore, where also are the Tiruwella, Alwaye and Ettamanur districts, which are worked as itinerancies, while two, Trichur and Kunnankulam, are in the Cochin State.

The majority of the 52,000 converts in the Mission are linked with one or other of the pastorates connected with four Church Councils, and the care of them appertains to Indian clergy, with whom some of the European missionaries occasionally join in evangelistic work.

The latter find their special sphere at the Cambridge Nicholson Institution (a theological college and normal school), a College, and the Baker Memorial School for girls at Kottayam; the Buchanan Institution (a normal school) at Pallam; and High Schools for boys at Mavelikara and Trichur. They also labour in the Tiruwella and Alwaye Itinerancies. The C.E.Z.M.S. has several stations in the country.

The staff of the Mission consists, besides Bishop Gill, of ten European clergymen, nine missionaries' wives, and five single women. The Indian clergy number thirty-six, and the Christian lay agents 747.

Death of Mrs. W. Johnson.

MRS. JOHNSON, the widow of the Rev. W. Johnson, who was a C.M.S. missionary in Travancore from 1866–77, died at Cheltenham on February 23, 1909.

Educational Work.

The Cambridge Nicholson Institution, Kottayam, which was founded on Aug. 13, 1859, in memory of an old secretary of the Cambridge University C.M.S. Association, the Rev. J. Y. Nicholson, Fellow and Tutor of Emmanuel, celebrated its semi-centennial in the summer of 1909. During the fifty years of its existence more than 700 school-teachers and seventy-five clergy have been trained in it; thirty-five of these clergy have served in one or other of the two Syrian churches, and have doubtless done much to promote the reform movement which has gone forward in one of them more especially. Shortly after the semi-centennial celebrations a former student, Titus Mar Thoma, was appointed to succeed his namesake and uncle as Metropolitan of the Reformed Syrians of Malabar.* Another post of honour in the Reformed Syrian Church has fallen to the lot of an old C.N.I. student, viz., that of its first foreign missionary. A field in the Nizam's dominions has been assigned to that Church in connexion with the National Missionary Society of India, and a former C.N.I. student, who, since the completion of his course, has occupied posts as a schoolmaster under the C.M.S., has been accepted by the National Missionary Society and assigned to North Canara. During the year under review the Institution had thirty-six men under training—a larger number than usual. Two students completed the divinity course, and nineteen the normal course, while three of the 1908 men were admitted to deacons' orders. At the Buchanan Institution, Pallam, where girls are prepared for work as schoolmistresses, there were fourteen students in the training class and nearly 200 girls in the school department. The value of the school department is shown by the fact that of the fifteen girls admitted into the training class (the only one for female teachers in North Travancore) in the last two years, thirteen have been from the School Department. There was a decrease in the College Department of the College and High School at Kottayam, but it was compensated for by a growth in the School Department. The results in the Peter Cator Scripture Examination were so good as to deserve to be placed on record. Three boys were sent in for the higher grade, and all passed, one of them being placed in the first class, second on the list, and gaining a prize of Rs.70; while for the lower grade all the seventeen who entered were successful, ten of them were placed in the first class, and four won prizes, one being top of the list. The buildings of the Bishop Hodges High School at Mavelikara were enlarged, and a similar step is called for at the Baker Memorial High School for girls at Kottayam, for many would-be pupils had to be refused admission because of lack of accommodation. The interest of the girls in missionary work is fostered by frequent meetings, and is said to be on the increase. Nearly all the children at the Boarding-schools at Tiruwella belong to the backward classes.† There is an Industrial School at Trichur, and a school of like nature for the backward classes has for many years been doing a good work at Kottayam.

Evangelistic Work.

Nearly all the pastoral work and the greater part of the evangelistic work in the Mission is in the hands of the Native Church Councils,* and that part of the latter work which is still carried on by the Society was handicapped by the smallness of the staff, which left the Rev. F. Bower, who is in his forty-third year of service in India, in charge of the Trichur, Kunnankulam and Alwaye districts. It is said that there never was a time when the Gospel message was listened to with more respectful attention by Hindus and Mohammedans; officials welcomed Mr. Bower when he called upon them; scripture portions met with a good sale; and Christian handbills were in great request. The Mission Press at Kottayam brought out a large edition of Christian Lyrics for the Malayalam Religious Tract Society, and an edition of 17,500 copies of the Malayalam New Testament for the Madras Auxiliary of the British and Foreign Bible Society, etc. The baptisms reported include an inmate of the Leper Asylum for women at Allepie, and twelve other adults in that district; twenty-five adults, among them many Pulayans, in the Alwaye Itinerancy; and four in the Tiruwella district.

CEYLON MISSION.

THE PAST HISTORY.

Ceylon, which became a British possession in 1796, was one of the first fields to which the fathers of the C.M.S. turned their eyes. It was not, however, until 1817 that the Mission was commenced among the Singhalese and Tamils, the two races (with distinct languages) which mainly form the population of the Island. For the Singhalese population, work was begun at Kandy in 1818; at Baddegama, 1819; at Cotta, 1822; and at Kurunegala and Kegalle, 1880. For work among the Tamils, Jaffna was occupied in 1818; Colombo, 1850; Galle, 1903; while the Tamil Coolie Mission was begun in 1855.

The first Bishop of Colombo, Dr. Chapman, was appointed in 1845; he has been succeeded by Bishops Claughton (1862), Jermyn (1871), R. S. Copleston (1875), and E. A. Copleston (1903).

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK.

The greater part of the pastoral work in the Mission is in the hands of native clergy, twenty-five in number, who are supported by Native Church funds; only two of the many District Councils are now subsidized by the Society. Both the pastoral and the evangelistic work may be regarded as carried on in four sections, viz., in Southern and Western Ceylon; in Kandy and the Kandian Singhalese Itinerancies among the Singhalese of the hill country; in the Tamil Coolie Mission, an itinerant Mission among the labourers from South India on the tea and coffee estates; and in Jaffna, the peninsula at the north of the Island.

I. The chief stations in Southern and Western Ceylon are Colombo, the headquarters of the Mission, where pastoral and evangelistic work is carried on in both Singhalese and Tamil; Cotta, within a few miles of Colombo, and Baddegama, near the southern end of the Island, where Singhalese is spoken; and Galle, farther south, and Negombo, north of Colombo, where the work is in Tamil.

II. The work of the Kandian Singhalese Itinerancies is carried on in three districts, viz., the central, with Kandy as its headquarters; the northern, worked from Anuradhapura; and the western, worked from Kegalle.

III. The Tamil Coolie Mission has three divisions, viz., the northern, the central and the southern, with their headquarters at Kandy, Hatton (south of Kandy) and Haputale (farther south-east), respectively.

IV. In northern Ceylon the chief station is Jaffna, near which are Nellore and Copay. All the work is in Tamil.

The educational work is on a large scale, over 23,000 children being under instruction in the schools. The chief institutions for male students are Trinity College, Kandy, St. John's College, Jaffna, and an English school at Cotta; and for girls, the Ladies' College, Colombo, and English schools at Cotta and Jaffna. Provision for the supply of teachers is made by means of Training Schools for Male and Female Singhalese Teachers at Colombo and Cotta respectively, a Training Institution for Tamil men at Copay, and a class for Tamil women at Nellore.

The work is carried on by a staff of eighteen European clergy, six laymen, sixteen missionaries' wives, and twenty-three other women, with whom are associated, beside the native clergy mentioned above, 834 native catechists, school-teachers and Bible-women.

Death of Rev. R. W. Ryde.

THE Ceylon Mission has suffered a great loss by the death of the Rev. R. W. Ryde, which occurred at Colombo on August 8, 1909. A graduate with classical honours of Jesus College, Cambridge, he offered to the Society while an assistant master at Monkton Combe School, and after a year at Islington College he was ordained by the Bishop of London in 1895 and sailed for Ceylon. For several years he was engaged in educational work at Trinity College, Kandy, and St. John's College, Jaffna, but since the beginning of 1904 his duty had been to superintend the Singhalese work at Colombo or Cotta. Miss A. Higgens says of him :—

> From high and low, rich and poor, adults and children, come testimonies to his loving sympathy and patience with them, and his untiring zeal and earnestness in working among them. In their joys and in their sorrows he was one with them, and each felt individually that his or her spiritual good was the one thing he ever had before him. Even Buddhists are agreed in this, and feel that not only Christians but they, too, sustained a personal loss when he was called to higher service above. It would be difficult to find one more courteous and patient, sympathetic and whole-hearted in his Master's cause.

and Rev. S. Morse.

On Sept. 8, just a month after Mr. Ryde's death, the Rev. S. Morse passed away at Jaffna. After service as a catechist at Vavoniya and Nellore he was ordained by the Bishop of Colombo in 1893, and stationed at Nellore. In 1903 he was transferred to Pallai, where he worked until his death.

Reinforcements.

The Rev. Arthur Kington Finnimore, of Islington College, M.A., Durham University, who was a C.M.S. missionary in South India from 1885–93, and then for eight years in Mauritius, and since 1901 has been an Organizing Secretary of the Society at home, has rejoined and sailed for Ceylon with Mrs. Finnimore. The names of the Revs. Nathaniel Gunaratnam Nathaniel, Benjamin Perera Wickremesinghe, James Gregory Newsam Senewiratne and Sangarapillai Samuel Somasundaram, B.A., Calcutta University, who have been admitted to deacons' orders, have been added to the list of native clergy connected with the Society. The Committee have accepted the resignation of Major G. H. F. Mathison.

Revival of Buddhist activity.

Ceylon has witnessed of late years a marked revival of Buddhist activity, as though alarm had been taken at the progress of Christianity. The revival sometimes takes the form of opposition to mission-schools. Rival institutions are opened which, with the help of the influence of agitators, draw away the children from the C.M.S. schools and cause so great a diminution in the Government grant as to make it impossible to keep them open; this happened in several instances in the Cotta district in 1909.* The Buddhists also issue tracts and books from the press, and carry on street-preaching at prominent places in Colombo and elsewhere, in which women as well as men take part. Both in their addresses and publications they indulge rather in the vilification of Christianity than in any constructive teaching about Buddhism, and one of their preachers in 1909 was sentenced to three months' imprisonment for blasphemy, a Mohammedan policeman being among the witnesses against him. One reason for this revival of Buddhism is said to be a desire to make it a political motive power, and it is aided by the natural conservatism of the people and by their ignorance and indifference. But do what they will the propagators of that religion cannot make it answer the deepest needs of the human heart. Indeed in its essential principles it is opposed to them. The Rev. J. P. S. R. Gibson writes of the pundit with whom he is studying Pali and Sanscrit :—

* In the Kegalle district the Roman Catholics, also, did their best by bribing the parents and children to entice the latter from the C.M.S. schools into their own institutions.

Buddhism deprecates love.

He has a great tenderness for his son, but according to the Buddhist doctrine this is one of the bonds from which one must become detached. We argued the position, and it was almost with tears in his eyes that the pundit confessed that this affection was a blemish in his Buddhist life. This seems to point to a failure to grasp the highest meaning of love, and this is borne out by a statement lately made to me by a Christian of five years' standing. He told me that it required even now a distinct mental effort for him to make the word love convey to his mind the spiritual meaning which it brings to the Christian mind of the West.

Controversial lectures.

In the prevalent ignorance and indifference rationalism finds a congenial soil. This was shown in 1909 by the large sale met with by a rationalistic book, The Credentials of Christianity, published by the Young Men's Buddhist Association; it contained many deliberate misquotations from Sanday, Salmon and other Christian writers, but was 'plausible, readable and distinctly clever,' and disquieted the minds of many even of the Christians. At the invitation of the Colombo Missionary Conference Messrs. A. G. Fraser and K. J. Saunders delivered a course of seven lectures in Colombo in reply. They were listened to by large audiences of 1,000 or more, chiefly young men, and have since been issued in pamphlet form under the auspices of the Christian Literature Society. Similar lectures were given by Mr. Gibson at Kalutara and Galle.*

Literary Work.

Some other literary work was accomplished by Messrs. Gibson and Saunders, who are on the staff of Trinity College, Kandy, in the form of a pamphlet on the Atonement and a couple of tracts which have been translated into Singhalese, and the contribution of a number of articles, chiefly on subjects connected with Buddhism, to various magazines and newspapers; while Mr. Saunders has been appointed sub-editor of the Rivikirana, a Singhalese newspaper. Much of their time, however, was spent in the study of Pali, the classical language of Buddhism, as a preparation for future literary efforts.

Educational Work.

Ten members of the Singhalese Men's Training School passed the Government examination in the summer; the school has since been transferred from Cotta to Colombo, and a C.M.S. Hostel has been opened, at which other students who attend the lectures at the Government Training College are received. The Singhalese Women's Training School passed all the candidates who sat for examination, and five of the twenty-two students left for posts in Training Institutions.

* Some notes by Miss A. Higgens on the remarkable impression produced by the lectures at Colombo appeared in the C.M.S. Gazette, Jan., 1910, p. 22.

the Mission. Seven members of the Training Institution for Tamil Men at Copay were baptized during the year. During the last fifty years two of the students have become pastors and twenty-six catechists; eighty-seven old boys are at present working in the Jaffna district as agents of the C.M.S., and twenty-six in connexion with other Missions. Some normal work is also carried on at Trinity College, Kandy, and the Ladies' College, Colombo.

Trinity College, Kandy.

The return of the Principal, Mr. A. G. Fraser, to the Mission, accompanied by a strong reinforcement of the staff, has led to great advance in the work at Trinity College, Kandy. A College Council, composed of the Principal, Vice-Principal, Headmaster* and Bursar (ex officio), all graduates who have taught for a year in the college classes, and three representatives of the masters of the lower school, has been created, and deals with appointments to and dismissals from the staff, and all matters affecting the internal working of the college. In December new buildings, consisting of chemical and physical laboratories, designed by Mr. N. P. Campbell, and making provision for 120 boys, a large boarding-house, etc., were opened. With the increased accommodation more boarders have been taken; the total number of boys in the school, however, shows little increase, though there were many applicants for admission,† since Mr. Fraser considers it important not to receive more than can be thoroughly well known and influenced. A good deal of attention is given to various forms of recreation, chiefly athletics, which have real value as affording the opportunity of personal touch between the masters and boys. They have their influence on character, too. Concerning cricket Mr. G. R. Mulgrue writes, 'Not only does it give the boys something to live for and work for out of school hours; it also forms a clean and healthy recreation in after-life, and draws the men from their often unhealthy surroundings for a match with some rival team.'

Influence of games on character.

Methods of spiritual work.

In turning to notice the religious work at the college it is well first to glance at the nature of the material on which the missionaries are engaged. The boys belong to many classes and races—Kandian Singhalese, low-country Singhalese, Jaffna Tamils, Indian Tamils, Burghers and Europeans are all represented among them—and are described as lovable and easy to manage, and frankly indifferent, the Buddhists of their number, to the great problems of their religion. Spiritual work among these youths is carried on by means of Scripture lessons (which, excepting in the case of the highest classes, are now given in the vernacular), and, on Sundays, lectures for non-Christians in the mornings, Sunday-school (in which some of the senior boys act as teachers, after first attending a model lesson on the subject which they are to take), Y.M.C.A. meetings, which have an average attendance of more than eighty and are managed by the students themselves, and evening service for all the boarders. There are also a Communicants' Union, conducted somewhat after the model of the C.E.M.S.; a Confirmation Class and Classes for Inquirers; and two nightly prayer-meetings, one for resident masters and the other composed of senior boys; while each term is opened with a retreat, lasting two or three days, for any masters who may care to be present. Seven of the boys were baptized during the year, after some resistance on the part of certain of the parents.* Mr. Fraser writes:— Baptisms.

Some of the boys are not old enough to be baptized of their own choice, and others are afraid. Of course we do not baptize any one without telling his parent or guardian, and giving them the power to refuse or to take the boy away. It does not seem to me to be honest if a parent or guardian pays for a boy at school or college to baptize him against his firm opposition. We have one Hindu boy, a grand specimen, desiring baptism just now. His people have told him he can be baptized if he so desire, but they will cut him off without a penny and no longer educate him. He hopes to be a doctor. The struggle is hard, and he is very unhappy. But he is a fine, pure, strong fellow, true and outspoken. Will he win through? Pray for him.†

At St. John's College, Jaffna, the number of names on the roll increased, the Government grant was larger than ever before, and one boy was baptized, while four former pupils were admitted to deacons' orders. A real work is being accomplished even in those who show no disposition to change their faith, for heathen ideals are gradually giving place in their minds to those derived from Christianity. Two lads belonging to the English branch school at Copay were also baptized. The English School at Cotta grew rapidly and earned the largest grant it has ever received, and the Boarding-school at Borella was full, and for the first time had a Mohammedan among its pupils. Some non-Christians choose mission-schools in preference to those in which their own religion is taught, and the Rev. J. Ilsley quotes a man who, asking particulars about the Borella school, ended his letter with the words, 'Although my brother is a Hindu, I prefer that he should be taught in a mission-school.' St. John's College. English School.

Work at the Ladies' College, Colombo, was carried on with some difficulty owing to the lack of space and suitable buildings, and even more owing to the distracting noise from adjacent ironworks. Twelve of the girls passed the Cambridge Local Examination, and the school carried off the Government junior Ladies' College.

* During the last thirty years about fifty boys have been baptized at the college.

† Further details about Trinity College will be found in the C.M. Gleaner, Jan., 1910, p. 4; C.M. Gazette, Nov., 1909, p. 342; Jan., 1910, p. 51.

scholarship for the sixth time. At the High School at Jaffna, the number of boarders is limited only by the accommodation, and non-Christians are beginning to seek admission; a Sivite gentleman sent his four children during the year, and applications were afterwards received from some of his friends who were anxious that their children also should be received. The English School for girls at Cotta, like that for boys, had a successful year, and the grant earned exceeded by twelve per cent. that of the previous year. There are five Boarding-schools for girls in the Mission. All but two of the pupils at Borella are Christians, and those two asked for baptism, but their parents refused their consent. At Baddegama also, where many of the children are Buddhists and some of them belong to well-to-do families, three of them wished to be baptized. The Rev. S. M. Simmons wrote of one of them in December :—

Boarding-schools.

Parents forbid their children to be baptized.

> She met with great opposition from all her relatives; at the end of last term she was taken away from us and she has not been allowed to return. She was not even permitted to attend our prize-giving to receive the three prizes she had won. Please pray for her that somehow or other God may make a way of escape for her and that she may be kept faithful and firm. Two years ago her elder sister, also a former pupil of the girls' boarding-school, who had been baptized and confirmed, was taken away from us and married to a Buddhist. Whenever I have tried to see her she has been 'at her village' or 'visiting a neighbour.' She is not allowed any Christian privileges and is closely watched by a rich sister-in-law, who is a bigoted Buddhist. My last interview with her husband made me realize how awful must be the lot of a Christian girl associated with such a man.

Two of the pupils at Cotta were received into the visible Church, as was one at Nellore, where several others were under preparation for baptism; while a former pupil at Cotta was baptized after twenty years' waiting for the way to open.* The usefulness of these schools is shown also by the testimony borne to some of the pupils in after-life. 'The best Christian Singhalese woman I know,' was said of one; and of another, 'Wherever she goes she does good.' Three former pupils in the school at Kegalle are now numbered among the teachers there.

Baptized after twenty years' waiting.

Industrial School.

All the forty-eight boys belonging to the Industrial School at Dodanduwa who were presented for examination were successful, and the school carried off the first prize for carving and joinery at the annual Agri-horticultural Exhibition. Seven inmates of the attached hostel attended an inquirers' class, but most of them were small boys.

Elementary Schools.

Since the Government has begun to put in force its regulations as to compulsory education the attendance at many of the vernacular schools has shown an increase; but this has not invariably been the case, for in certain instances in the Tamil Coolie Mission the owners of estates have built their own schools, and these have drawn away some children who had previously attended the mission-schools. Several baptisms of former pupils took place. In the Cotta district a young woman was received into the visible Church who was won in a village school, and had suffered much persecution in her home; while at Nellore another woman, first impressed as a child, was baptized after steadfastly enduring the ridicule of her heathen relatives and friends. Were the missionary staff adequate to follow up the work done in the schools, much more fruit might be reaped. Miss A. L. Earp remarks :—

Former pupils baptized.

> A common experience was to find that the girls who desired to be Christians when they were at school have been either married or given away at a very early age; and many of them plaintively say, 'If I could do my own will, I would be a Christian, but now I am in bondage I cannot do my own way.' In a village twenty miles from here one young woman came sobbing to find me out, and she said, 'Too late, too late! I have been holding out against a Buddhist marriage for five years. I was married last month, and now I cannot come to your Home to be further taught. Why didn't you come before?'

Some opposition was met with in the mission Sunday-schools. Many of the non-Christian parents prevented their children from attending a Singhalese Sunday-school in Colombo, and at Nellore the Heathen opened rival schools. Several of the pupils appeared to profit by the teaching which they received, as, for example, a little Buddhist girl, who, when asked whether the Lord Jesus could talk to us, answered in the affirmative, and to the further question, 'How?' replied, 'He comes into our hearts and speaks to us through our thoughts.'

Opposition to Sunday-schools.

Evangelistic work is diligently prosecuted among both Tamils and Singhalese. The former are found at Colombo and Galle, at Kandy, in the Tamil Coolie Mission, and in the Northern Province. Little difficulty was experienced as a rule in the efforts to reach the men. At the four places where open-air meetings are regularly held in Colombo there were usually good audiences, containing representatives of four or five nationalities, who listened quietly and attentively, readily accepted tracts, and sometimes bought Gospels at the close of the address; while in the Tamil Coolie Mission muster-preaching on the estates was carried on without material opposition. The work among the women was harder. Many of them are Malays and Mohammedans, and the ladies who attempted to reach them now and again found that the moulvis were exerting themselves to prevent the people from receiving Christian workers into their homes. Such efforts, however, were not always crowned with success. In a certain village the moulvis called a meeting of the men in the mosque, and told them that if they continued to allow the missionary to teach their wives and daughters, marriage ceremonies would not be performed for the latter, nor would the dead be buried. Although this effectually closed most of the doors against the Christian workers, three remained open, one being that of a man who declared that no moulvi should tell him what he should or should not allow his daughters to do. With a few exceptions, the women were glad enough to see the missionaries, and even to listen to the good news of salvation through faith in Christ, and one worker, speaking of the efforts among Mohammedans, says: 'There is no doubt that there has been a great forward movement, partly the result of years of patient work, in spite of opposition and discouragement, and partly due to the change that everywhere seems to be sweeping over the Moslem world. Not a few have come to us under cover of the darkness, and besides this, they have given us wonderful and unexpected proofs of their trust. Old prejudices are breaking down.' Some Mohammedan women went farther than mere willingness to listen, and appeared to accept Christ as their Saviour; but it was practically impossible for them openly to confess Him, because of the attitude of their male relatives, among whom little definite work is being done. With Hindu women the difficulties in the way of baptism are perhaps not quite so great, and the reports tell of two at Colombo being under preparation for that rite. Some women, too, are doubtless included among the thirty-five inquirers who were under instruction in the Southern Division of the Tamil Coolie Mission and the twenty in the Morawak-korale district of the Central Division. The work in that district is a striking example of the power of prayer. The Rev. T. S. Johnson narrated the circumstances as follows in December :—

A moulvi defied.

Old prejudices breaking down.

The power of prayer.

> The work in the Morawak-korale is supported by a small band of gentlemen in England who meet regularly in the City to pray for the work, and in consequence the name of that district has become a household word among our missionary circle. At the beginning of this year I asked this committee if they could undertake the support of two more catechists and schools, and they consented. One of these districts is ten miles away from the Morawak-korale and had been most disappointing in results. I was led to make a change in the evangelist, and when I went there a few months later, instead of, as before, seeing a small handful of people in the church, the building was crowded to the doors and six adults were waiting for baptism. The Christians in the district have, with the assistance of the estate superintendent, erected a small church school in a remote part of the district, where service is regularly conducted by the schoolmaster in the absence of the catechist. I have lately had a letter from the catechist, asking me to come and visit them soon, as there are twenty adults under instruction and desirous of being baptized.

Converts.

Nearly ninety adult converts, besides those mentioned in the above extract, were baptized in the Central and Northern Divisions of the Tamil Coolie Mission during the year under review, and twenty—a small number, the Rev. W. E. Rowlands thinks, considering the extent of the work—in the Southern Division; twelve adult Tamils, including three who were the fruit of the Mission to Servants, were received into the visible Church at Colombo, as well as a number in the Northern Province. The cases of several of the converts were of interest. Among them were a domestic servant in a clerk's family, who was won by the influence of his master and mistress; a man of the Vellala caste, belonging to a respectable family in South India, and his wife, who were first impressed by some preaching at a muster and were afterwards taught by the kangany (overseer of a body of coolies) under whom he worked; a fourth was a Brahman, who had for some time been interested in Christianity and was eventually led to a decision by the consistent conduct of the Christians where he lived; * a fifth as a boy had a Bible given to him by a Christian planter, which he had read but then lost during a visit to India, but what he had learned from it had made an impression on his mind, and when years afterwards he heard a catechist preaching at a muster, he expressed his desire to become a Christian. Of some other converts the Rev. W. E. Rowlands writes:—

A whole family baptized.

On June 6 I baptized, on an estate in the Madulsima district, six adults and nine children; two of the former being a head kangany, named Marie, and his wife (with their four children, who made up the whole family). This man had but a little while before been the mainstay of the Hindu temple on the same estate, but from the time his eyes were opened to the truth he used all his influence on behalf of the little Christian Church, and there were evident marks of his liberality in the improvements which had been wrought upon the schoolroom where our services are held. It was very encouraging to see, from the answers he gave to my questions, how clearly he had grasped the foundation truths of Christianity, and how desirous he was to make a public profession of his faith in Christ. From what I have heard since from the catechist of the district, it seems evident that this family are a real strength to the congregation there, and that some among the Heathen are preparing to follow their example.

(2) Work among Singhalese.

Evangelistic work among the Singhalese suffered greatly from the death of Mr. Ryde, and also from the lack of native agents. For want of funds the number of catechists and Bible-women employed at Colombo had to be reduced; while in the Cotta district, where there are but 1,467 Christians among the 250,000 Singhalese, only one of the six catechists engaged is a trained man, and he is really a pastoral agent in charge of four churches, and of the others, one, who has been at work—in the tropics, be it remembered—for fifty years, is supposed to visit twenty villages without any conveyance to help him. Estimates as to the attitude of the people vary. In the Central Division of the Kandian Singhalese Itinerancy the people showed great willingness to listen at the open-air meetings, and at their close there was often a regular scramble for tracts; but of the Northern Division it is said that Anuradhapura, the sacred city of Buddhism, is becoming more and more a centre of that religion as the railway gives facilities for reaching it from all parts of the country, and that pilgrims as a rule

* See C.M.S. Gazette, April, 1910, p. 116.

do not readily pay heed to street preaching or accept a tract. Of the villagers in that division the Rev. A. E. Dibben writes :—

A feeble folk.

The Singhalese villagers in this Itinerancy are very poor and physically feeble, on account of the presence of malarial fever and other diseases. They have consequently very little desire to avail themselves of even the scanty means they have at command for bettering their condition. This is evidenced by the fact that Government has been obliged to pass laws to compel them, among other things, to cultivate their fields, to keep properly clean the water-channels by which their fields are irrigated from the village tanks, and to build a watcher-hut from which to guard their growing crops from the depredations of wild animals—acts which would be performed readily and without compulsion by any cultivator who had the temporal welfare of himself and his family at heart. I mention this to show the kind of people among whom we are working. It is scarcely to be expected that people with so little enthusiasm or even interest concerning their temporal wellbeing will be naturally disposed to receive the Gospel with alacrity.

Mr. Dibben, however, adds that the catechists are hopeful—in happy contrast to those in Colombo, who at the end of 1909 were able to report neither catechumen nor inquirer. In the towns the Singhalese women were not easy to work among. Opposition was more pronounced than ever at Colombo ; at Baddegama the women seemed ' perfectly content to go on living in darkness ' ; at Dodanduwa they met the message of the Gospel with ' hard, foolish questions ' ; and in Kandy itself the work was, as it has always been, ' most difficult and unfruitful.' In some of the villages of the Itinerancy, however, the women were distinctly accessible.

Pronounced opposition.

It is hard for the Buddhist women, as for their Mohammedan sisters in Ceylon, to confess Christ openly. Miss Earp gives one or two cases in point. Writing in 1909 of some of the inmates of the Home for Singhalese converts at Kandy, she said :—

Two girls admitted this year are the fruit of the work of one of our old girls in a village twelve miles from Kandy. They are in a high social position, and it was with great difficulty that they got their parents' consent to come here. In the day-school they let every one know that they wanted to be Christians, and so they were removed and sent to live with very hard Buddhist relatives. But they fretted all day long and did not eat their food, so at last in alarm the relatives sent them back to their parents. The girls then said the only thing that would really make them happy was to come to us. The parents gave a feeble consent, and the girls acted at once upon it, and are now with us preparing for baptism. They have had some pretty tough lessons to learn, as they did not know before they came that there are no class distinctions in this Home, and at first (when it was their turn for cooking or doing housework for those they considered beneath them) they had a very bad time. On one occasion one of them broke her cup, and after some hours' battle a decisive victory was gained when she decided to use one of the school cups.

Difficult lessons.

Another girl was in great danger and temptation, but stood the test splendidly ; she is not very bright, but devoted and true. In her case a Buddhist marriage that had been arranged some time was put on one side, and in consequence her father cursed her, and as he could not reach the daughter to hurt her, he beat and treated her mother most cruelly. The mother came here to show the girl what she had suffered on her account and begged her to go back; but the girl most lovingly pleaded with her mother to be a Christian, and then she would have comfort in her sorrows.

Among other inquirers were two women in the Baddegama district, the niece and servant of a Government dispenser, and also a man who has suffered a good deal for Christ's sake but hesitates to avow himself openly as His disciple; a young man at Dodanduwa, who was first influenced by what he heard at an open-air meeting; and a woman at Kandy, who some time ago desired to become a Christian, and had the longing revived by an answer to prayer offered in behalf of her child. Twenty-three adults were baptized in the Cotta district, nineteen in the Central Division of the Itinerancy, and so on. Inquirers and converts.

Six of those baptized were inmates of the Home for Singhalese Converts at 'Mowbray,' Kandy, which has already been mentioned. The average number of inmates in 1909 was thirty, and since the Home was opened in 1900 the number admitted has been 101, drawn from thirty-two different towns and villages. Twenty had been baptized before admission; twice that number received baptism after admission; and twenty-eight withdrew without being baptized. Forty-four of the inmates have been confirmed, and fourteen are now engaged in work as Bible-women or mission-school teachers. There is a Home for Tamil Converts at 'The Lodge,' Colombo, which has four Mohammedans among its eighteen inmates, while twelve little Tamil girls are received in a somewhat similar institution at Kandy. Homes for Converts.

The reports furnished by the missionaries make frequent mention of the liberality of the Native Christians. This grace was notably shown in the Tamil Coolie Mission. In one newly formed pastorate, comprising three congregations which muster 357 souls, no less than Rs. 1,737 was raised during the year; while another congregation, consisting of about one hundred persons, contributed more than one rupee per head on the occasion of the Harvest Thanksgiving. From some stations come reports of a marked spiritual growth among the people, of backsliders reclaimed, of the steadfastness of isolated Christians, and of efforts on the part of the converts to win others for Christ. Only one instance of zeal can be given. Miss Earp, writing of Helen, the first inmate of 'Mowbray,' tells how in alternate weeks she turns out of her home in a village called Hurikaduwa for a week at a time, in order that Miss Earp may stay there with a Bible-woman and the people of the village thus be enabled to hear about Christ, and adds:— Pastoral Work. A zealous convert.

Helen is acknowledged by all the village as 'the mother who has taken all the vows according to Buddhism,' and they are much struck when she emphatically says, 'All my works of merit are of no avail. I was a miserable sinner, but Christ has saved me.' She has led several very old women to us to be taught, saying, 'In my young days I taught them Buddhism and they followed me farther into the darkness. Now I teach them of Jesus, Who is the only true Light.'

On one occasion when I was resting in the evening, she was looking up lovingly into my face when she suddenly said, 'I think it is very wonderful that you should come and live in my poor little house for the sake of teaching us and these ignorant people. It helps me to understand how God loves me, and how it is that the Great God deigns to come and live in my poor unworthy heart.'*

A few cases occurred calling for the exercise of discipline, and in certain congregations, while there was not much open sin, there was considerable slackness and a lack of evangelistic zeal.

MAURITIUS MISSION.

THE PAST HISTORY.

Though geographically more nearly connected with Africa, the little island of Mauritius, on which the Society began work in 1856, is, in a missionary sense, a dependency of India. Two-thirds of the population are immigrants from India, brought hither to work on the sugar plantations; and among these are labouring Hindi and Tamil speaking missionaries. Over 7,000 persons have been baptized, the majority of whom have died or returned to their own country. The Diocese of Mauritius was founded in 1854, when Bishop Ryan was appointed; his successors have been Bishops Hatchard (1869), Huxtable (1870), Royston (1872), Walsh (1891), Pym (1898), Gregory (1904).

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK.

The 1,600 converts connected with the Mission are grouped in six pastorates, and are ministered to by four native pastors. The native lay agents number sixty-three.

Most of the schools are connected with the pastorates, but the Society has an Orphanage for boys at Plaisance, and one for girls at Rose Belle.

The C.M.S. Missionaries (one clergyman and five single women) assist in the pastoral work, carry on the institutions mentioned, and maintain evangelistic work by means of classes, dispensaries and itinerations.

Approaching withdrawal of the C.M.S.

THEORETICALLY the approaching withdrawal of the C.M.S. from Mauritius has considerably modified the position of its missionaries in that island, for the Bishop has arranged that, to a certain extent at all events, the chaplains of the districts into which the island is divided shall be responsible for every department of Church work in those districts, including the management of the mission-schools and the superintendence of the native clergy and catechists, and that where there is no Government chaplain the native clergy are to be responsible. Consequently Archdeacon H. D. Buswell, who is in his forty-eighth year of service in the mission-field, all but four of which have been spent in Mauritius, and who has worked under each of the seven Bishops of the diocese, is no longer Chairman of the Native Church Council. But since none of the chaplains are acquainted with the Indian vernaculars, and only two of them can use the Creole patois, the change practically has not amounted to very much. The missionaries still conducted regular meetings for the Christian women in the villages, and cared for their welfare by such means as instructing them in making pillow-lace as at Rose Belle; and Archdeacon Buswell still visited the Indian congregations. There was an improvement in the general tone of the Christians, and the exercise of increasing care in the matter of sponsors is said to have had a salutary effect.

Pastoral Work.

Evangelistic Work.

The missionaries also continued to take part in evangelistic work, conversing with the people about Christianity as opportunity offered, and, in the case of the Rev. C. A. Blackburn, holding quiet conferences and more polemical discussions with Mohammedans. Their audiences usually listened with patience and apparent interest, and readily accepted tracts and Scripture portions. While many went no farther, there were some who received the truth and were baptized during the year. Among them were a man and his wife in the North Central Pastorate, led by sickness to seek the Saviour; another married couple, who had been carefully taught by a devout Christian woman, an immigrant from the Telugu Country; and a former patient at the dispensary at Rose Belle. There were also a number of inquirers—one or two women at Rose Belle, reached by visits to their homes; two girls, members of a class for the Heathen at Vacoas; and a Chinese lad. Another man, hardly to be regarded as a definite inquirer, told Archdeacon Buswell that he had not forgotten what had been taught him in a mission-school forty years before, and added that he would like to become a Christian, since he could find no satisfaction in Hinduism. Others expressed themselves as convinced of the truth of Christianity, but were held back from baptism by fear of their relatives and of the ostracism which generally follows profession of faith in Christ.

Baptisms.

Orphanages.

Three Hindus were baptized at the Boys' Orphanage at Plaisance, and another Hindu and a Mohammedan were under preparation for baptism. Five of the fifty-eight inmates of the Girls' Orphanage at Rose Belle were confirmed in 1909, and one of the younger children showed by her changed life that she had become a true follower of the Lord Jesus.

Miss E. E. Smyth has been transferred to the Central Provinces (India) Mission, and the Rev. S. S. Susunkur to the United Provinces Mission. The Rev. C. A. Blackburn has been placed on the Disabled Fund after twenty-seven years' service, and the Rev. H. H. Buswell has accepted a Government chaplaincy.

CHINA.

THE kaleidoscopic changes which have taken and are taking place in China and the Chinese make the study of the conditions under which missionary work is carried on in that Empire one of fascinating interest. In the political world one of the chief events of 1909 was the inauguration on October 14 of the new Provincial Assemblies elected by popular vote. This is avowedly a first step towards a national parliament, and on that account it deserves to be noted here that the qualifications for the franchise were the following: (1) a minimum age of twenty-five years; and (2) either three years' service in educational or other work for the public good, or having graduated in schools of a certain standing either in China or abroad, or having certain degrees, or being a civil official of not lower than the seventh rank, or having property of not less than $5,000 in value. Opium-smokers and 'turbulent or law-breaking persons,' illiterates and certain others have no vote, but Native Christians are not disfranchised, and no trace of anti-Christian prejudice marked any of the elections. Indeed, in some provinces not only were Christians returned as members, but they occupied important positions in the Assemblies, as in Fuh-Kien, where the Secretary, the Vice-President and the Chairman of the Executive Committee were all Christians. Among the subjects discussed in Si-Chuan—where a large percentage of the 105 members, including the President, were students who had returned from Japan—were the eradication of superstition, the abandonment of foot-binding, the prevention of disputes between Christian converts and non-Christians, the establishment of trade-marks, and the need of universal education.*

Provincial Assemblies.

Christians elected as members.

The realization of the value of a modern education which has been conspicuous of late years, and which, it is clear, is not diminishing, since it was one of the subjects considered by the Si-Chuan Provincial Assembly, offers a magnificent opportunity to Christian nations to place within reach of the Chinese not Western learning and literature alone, but with them the teaching of true religion. Schemes have been formulated for the establishment of a University for China and of one also at Hong Kong, in the former of which some leading members of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge, and in the latter Sir Frederick Lugard, the Governor of Hong Kong, have shown much interest. A beginning has been made in erecting the buildings of the Hong Kong University on an excellent site, and several scholarships were founded by King Edward VII. The Governor has expressed an earnest wish that the C.M.S. should establish a hostel in connexion with the University.* While the greatest attention is being given to the education of young men and boys, that of girls is not being altogether overlooked; indeed, the Ministry of Education has shown its sense of the importance of the subject by passing regulations regarding it, among which are two to the effect that no girl shall be admitted to school who dresses in foreign clothes or has unnatural feet. The advance of education among both sexes, rendering the men more broad-minded and the women more intellectual, will doubtless speedily remove some of the disabilities under which the latter at present suffer. Already there are signs that such will be the case. During the visit of Bishop and Mrs. Ingham to Hong Kong they were entertained by the Chinese at a banquet, at which, so the Bishop was informed, for the first time in the history of the Empire, mothers, wives and sisters sat in public at a meal side by side with sons and husbands and brothers.†

The suppression of opium-smoking.

At many of the Provincial Assemblies opium prohibition was prominent upon the list of subjects for discussion. The death of the Empress-Dowager, who initiated the anti-opium campaign, has not led to any change of policy, and although inquiries have revealed an absence of uniformity of practice, yet it appears indisputable that in many parts of the Empire real and strenuous efforts have been made to suppress the smoking of the drug. In six provinces, Shan-Si, Yun-Nan, Fuh-Kien, Hu-Nan, Kwang-Tung and Hei-lung-Kiang, the two first-named having been among the chief opium-producing provinces in China, the growth was totally prohibited last season, and the central authorities, having abandoned the idea of a proportionate annual reduction as unworkable, have issued orders that a similar step should be taken in the remaining provinces. Even in these much has already been done. In the great majority of them the opium-dens have been closed. In Si-Chuan, for example, a missionary after travelling through a district where the poppy was formerly extensively cultivated, writes that 'with the exception of what may have been a stray weed not a patch of poppy was seen anywhere'; another says that the 'opium fumes which formerly saturated the atmosphere of the city streets are now happily non-existent'; while the Rev. Dr. S. Synge of Fuh-ning, in the Fuh-Kien Province, reports that he had no cases of opium-suicide to attend to in 1909—an experience which, however, was not shared in by Dr. H. M. Churchill at Kien-ning, where such cases were more numerous than before, and opium-smoking seemed as common as ever.‡

The political and social changes which have been referred to and the material changes, such as the construction of railways, the opening of mines, and the establishment of various industries, are accompanied by the upgrowth of a national sentiment which views the whole nation as one, and consequently tends to weld it together; and the Rev. G. A. Bunbury believes that it is this national sentiment which has roused China to limit the growth of opium—not so much because smoking it is a moral evil, as because the habit is a hindrance to national prosperity. He says that there is at present no indication that the national spirit is anti-Christian, but neither is it Christian; on the whole it appears to be sceptical. 'All religions are viewed by it "on their merits."' Signs of this were seen during the year in such incidents as the prohibition by the police of a procession of the Dragon King idol, which is supposed to supply water out of its mouth, on the ground that the sect which organized it was 'depraved'; * in the deprivation of a Buddhist temple of its lands because it had not fulfilled the work of education expected from it; and in the following incident narrated by the Rev. C. N. R. Mackenzie of Shiu-hing. He writes:—

Religions viewed 'on their merits.'

> Two doors from the preaching-hall stood a small temple with a huge clay idol, in charge of one priest. Being on the main street, the place was valuable, and as the site was wanted for (presumably) more important purposes, the temple had to go. But due order was observed. A Buddhist priest was called in to perform incantations, and shortly reported that the idol had returned to the Heavenly Halls. The visible and clayey part still remained and this was broken up and the dust cast into the river. Later on, when the new building was completed, more incantations brought back the huge clay idol in the form of three small wooden ones, which, however, were relegated to a shelf at the back of the building. These performances were carried on by the leading business men of the place, and the building used for a modern innovation—a miniature chamber of commerce.

On the other hand attempts were made in South China to 'galvanize Confucianism into life and to change the respect for a great teacher into worship of a demi-god.' Archdeacon J. R. Wolfe of Fuh-chow writes:—

Attempts to revive Confucianism.

> The efforts of the Chinese Government in building splendid schools and colleges of learning have revived the worship of the sage Confucius among all classes of the people, especially among the students; the masses of the people follow their example, and the government in every way openly encourage this reverence and worship of the national god.† Fresh honours have been conferred recently on Confucius or on his memory, and all this seems to have satisfied the people, and accounts, I think, for their unwillingness to join the Christian Church.

Superstitious observances.

Whatever may be the opinions of those Chinese who are to some extent abreast of modern thought, the great masses of people are still immersed in their old superstitions, and are not infrequently guilty of terrible cruelty. Little toy bamboo boats, containing a straw figure to represent the plague demon, are made and provided with paper money, food and rice, to intimate to the demon that he is not wanted. A woman is told by an idol that plague is in the wells, and that they ought to be shut, and arrangements are forthwith made to close them for four or five days. Pilgrims flock to the temples, carrying on their backs baskets containing their votive offerings—paper money, small red candles, incense and printed prayers—and if the building is dilapidated and the water leaks through the roof on to the idol a large bamboo hat is placed on the head of the image to protect it.* At a man's funeral the wail of his widow is heard, 'Why did you go? My child has no father. Come back!'† while now and again such an incident as the following, described by Dr. Synge, occurs. He writes:—

In the small hours of the morning I heard a man calling out loudly; the voice gradually got fainter as the crier moved further off. It seemed to be some one's name that he was calling, and I wondered what it could be. It was the sixteenth day of the Chinese month, so there was moonlight. To-day I said to the watchman, 'Watchman, what was that voice that I heard calling out at a quarter to three this morning?' He answered, 'It was a man going round the streets, looking out for his child's soul.' The child, it seems, was at home, crying and frightened, and the father thought that its soul had slipped out, so he was going about carrying a lighted fragrant taper to induce the idols to help him. At the same time he was calling out the boy's name, to try and get the soul back again into his child.

Suicide under certain circumstances is belauded far and wide;‡ a dutiful wife will cut off a piece of her tongue to form medicine for her sick husband;§ and the spirit which leads to the voluntary endurance of such suffering has as its concomitant an indifference to inflicting pain on others which is sadly exemplified in the treatment of children. Miss S. E. Bryers (now Mrs. R. A. Whiteside), of the Western China Mission, writes:—

Cruelty to slave girls.

One of the great curses of China is the receiving of girls as future wives for the sons of a house while they are as yet mere children. These little girls are rarely treated well, and very often are used most cruelly. They are generally slaves to the whole household. Here is a case in point. Because a child had not gathered enough wood to please her mother-in-law, the latter first hacked the child's legs with a hatchet, and then burnt the injured places with a pair of tongs; after which the child was put out on the street to die.

When I was called to see her both feet were dead, and the legs were slowly decaying. Even if I had been skilled enough I dared not do anything for fear of wild tales. I could only advise that the legs be taken off and pray that God would soon release her from her misery. But she did not die. I do not know whether they took my advice or not, but now, minus her legs, she is being employed as a beggar.

Again, Miss E. S. Houlder, of the South China Mission, says that one child who had been hung up by her arms and hair as a punishment came to the Victoria Home, Kowloon, with over 200 wounds on her body, one arm paralysed, and a bare patch on her head; while another girl had been burnt with a hot iron on her leg. In yet another case the owners of a slave-girl for some fault, real or imaginary, poured paraffin oil over her, and then set fire to it, with the result that after three weeks' intense suffering she died. No punishment was inflicted save that the owners were obliged to dress the marred body in good clothes and buy an expensive coffin.*

The spread of Christianity.

It can only be by leading the people of China to the knowledge of the One True God that the abolition of such lamentable superstition and cruelty can be brought about. This is the task before the Church of Christ. In it there can be no doubt that progress, both real and substantial, is being made, while every missionary worker has the comfort of the conviction expressed by Sir Robert Hart, that 'while at some places success follows quickly and conspicuously, the "Word of Life" is nowhere sown on barren soil,' and that though 'the end may be far off, Christ will reign.'† Meanwhile the organization of the Anglican Church in China proceeds apace. From March 27 to April 6, 1909, a Conference was assembled at Shanghai, attended by six English and two American bishops, together with twenty-six clergy (fourteen foreign and twelve Chinese) and sixteen Chinese laymen, to deliberate concerning the formation of a Chung Hua Sheng Kung Hui (Church of China). A tentative Constitution and Canons were adopted, and referred to the Home Churches for provisional sanction, and, in a Chinese translation, to the Diocesan Synods and Conferences for their consideration. Another meeting of the General Conference has been fixed for the spring of 1912, at which the Chinese text of the Constitution is to be the basis of discussion with a view to its adoption, with such modifications as may be called for, as the authoritative Constitution of the Chinese Church.‡

SOUTH CHINA MISSION.

THE PAST HISTORY.

The great Empire of China was opened to missionary effort in 1844, when the Treaty of Nanking, which closed the first Chinese War, gave England the possession of Hong Kong and the right of residence at five leading ports; and more fully in 1858–60, by the Treaty of Tien-tsin and Convention of Peking. Hong Kong was occupied by the Society's missionaries in 1862; Pakhoi in 1886; Canton in 1898; Shiu-hing in 1899; and Liem-chow in 1902.

China, south of lat. 28°, with the exception of the provinces of Fuh-Kien, Kwang-Si and Hu-Nan, is under the episcopal jurisdiction of the Bishop of Victoria, Hong Kong. The first Bishop, Dr. G. Smith, the third, Dr. Burdon, and the fourth, Dr. Hoare, were C.M.S. missionaries; the second, Dr. Alford, and the present Bishop, Dr. Lander, were active friends of the Society at home.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK.

Five stations are occupied in the Province of Kwang-Tung—viz., Hong Kong, Canton, Shiu-hing (about fifty miles west of Canton), and Pakhoi and Liem-chow (between 200 and 300 miles south-west of Canton).

The preparation of Chinese agents is carried on at the Training College, Hong Kong, and the Bible-women's Schools at Hong Kong (St. Stephen's House) and Shiu-hing. To the Training College there is attached a school for Christian boys, for whom there are also Boarding-schools at Kowloon, Canton, Shiu-hing and Pakhoi, while for Christian girls there are similar schools at the two last-named stations and also at Hong Kong. St. Stephen's College, Hong Kong, exists to provide a Christian education on modern lines for the sons of Chinese gentlemen, while St. Stephen's Girls' College does the same for their daughters. At Kowloon there is a Rescue Home and Orphanage.

A Hospital and Leper Asylum are maintained at Pakhoi, and a dispensary at Liem-chow. Evangelistic work is prosecuted in the numerous towns and villages of the large districts by both men and women missionaries.

The staff of the Mission consists of nine European and three Chinese clergy, two doctors, two other laymen, six missionaries' wives, and twenty-three other women missionaries, two of whom are trained nurses. Eighty-eight Chinese Christian lay agents are employed.

Death of Miss M. E. Johnstone.

MISS M. E. JOHNSTONE, who went to China under the Female Education Society in 1874, and with a number of other missionaries of that Society came on the C.M.S. staff in 1899, died at Salisbury after a long illness on September 29, 1909. For many years she had been engaged at the Girls' Boarding-school, Hong Kong.*

Reinforcements.

The Mission has been reinforced by the Rev. William Walton Rogers, of Islington College, L.Th., Durham, a brother of Miss L. E. Rogers, of Pakhoi; Mr. Hubert Gordon Thompson, M.D., F.R.C.S., Victoria University, Liverpool, who went to Pakhoi independently of the Society in 1906, and is a nephew of the Rev. J. Thompson, of the Ceylon Mission; Miss Gertrude Leonard Bendelack, of the Victoria Association; and Miss Amy Constance Bradley, trained at The Olives, a sister of Dr. N. Bradley, also of Pakhoi. Miss May Bruce Moore has been transferred from the Fuh-Kien to the South China Mission for the remainder of her term of service. The Rev. E. J. Barnett, warden of St. Stephen's College, Hong Kong, * Appreciations of Miss Johnstone by Bishop Fyson and Miss M. J. Oxlad appeared in the Church Missionary Review, Nov., 1909, p. 681.

has been appointed Archdeacon of Hong Kong and Secretary of the Mission.

Educational Work.

As a result of the work of the past ten years at St. Paul's College, Hong Kong, eighteen men have been accepted after training for employment in the Mission; four of these have resigned, two have died, and the remainder are still at work. During their course the students are called upon to do a good deal of practical work, and they usually conduct evangelistic meetings at a large feast in honour of the goddess of the sea which is held each spring just outside the borders of the Colony.* Attached to the college is a school for the sons of Christians which was opened in 1900 because experience showed that the young men who entered the training class were often deficient in general education; two of the three members of the present first advanced class at the college are old boys of the school. It is worthy of note as showing that the good work of the school is recognized outside distinctively mission circles that a large contractor in Hong Kong, not a baptized Christian, cemented one of the largest class-rooms with best Portland cement and refused to accept payment for the expensive job on the ground that the missionaries were 'doing a good work among the boys.' At the head of the educational institutions for non-Christians stands St. Stephen's College, a new wing of which was opened by Sir Frederick Lugard, the Governor of Hong Kong, in December, 1909, the money for it—£3,000—having been found by the parents and guardians of the students. In his speech on the occasion he mentioned that it was the desire of St. Stephen's College to be affiliated with a university in order to get English degrees for the students which first suggested to his mind the idea of a Hong Kong University, which is rapidly taking practical shape.† In the educational side of the work at the college there was remarkable success. Nineteen candidates were presented at the Oxford Local Examinations and all of them passed; nine of them were in the senior division, and of these eight obtained the degree of Associate of Arts, and four secured distinction in Classical Chinese. In the junior section one boy obtained distinction in Chinese with honours. Three of the senior students were baptized on Whit Sunday, 1909, and the same number of former students were received into the visible Church, one in Hong Kong, another in England, and the third in Japan. Others are ready for baptism, but are waiting for suitable opportunities for making an open confession of their faith in Christ.‡ An Anglo-Chinese Day-school for the sons of Christians was opened at Hong Kong during the year under review, and attracted a good class of pupils.

The preparation of female agents for evangelistic work is carried on at the Biblewomen's Training Home at Hong Kong and at a Women's School at Shiu-hing where there were also several women under preparation for baptism. One of the pupils at St. Stephen's Girls' College and Preparatory School, Hong Kong, passed the Oxford Senior Local Examination—the first Chinese girl to do so—and passed with distinction, while the Christian Girls' Boarding-school increased its number of pupils by nearly forty per cent. Some of the new girls came from heathen homes, and two of them, with their mothers, were baptized at the end of the year. The Victoria Home and Orphanage at Kowloon is, as its name implies, of quite a different character from the institutions already named. It was originally established for the benefit of little Chinese slave girls, and many of those who are received bear marks of the ill-treatment to which they have been subjected.

Medical Work.

Men and women of all classes of society, from the highest official in the district to the poorest coolie in the street, visited the Pakhoi Hospital, and most of them were evidently anxious to learn all they could about Christianity. Several, too, decided for Christ, and a number of former patients, seven men among them, were under definite instruction with a view to baptism. Steps were taken to open dispensaries in three market towns hitherto unoccupied by the Mission, and some young men received training at the hospital to fit them to act as dispensary evangelists, i.e. to carry out the instructions given them by the doctors and above all to preach the Gospel to the patients. Visits were paid to the leper compounds, containing ninety-six men and sixty women; twelve of the men received baptism, and five of the women were to be baptized at the end of the year.*

Evangelistic Work.

Archdeacon Barnett, writing of the Mission in general, says that 'an unmistakable forward move is very evident.' Nowhere was it more conspicuous than in the Canton district, where 102 adults were baptized in 1909 and the names of 680 inquirers—catechumens and their children—were on the roll at the close of the year. Bishop Ingham, who visited the district in December, wrote as follows of the movement :—

Great advance in the Canton district.

> A man in the village of Sheung-ling had some time ago been baptized by the Roman Catholics. He approached Pastor Mok with a request that he would come to his village and teach some people he had influenced. As a result some forty or so were baptized and twenty became catechumens. This was heard of in other villages and caught on. Many of the inquirers have crude ideas, but no political motives are thought to animate them, and the movement is most hopefully regarded by our good pastor Mok. One outcome of it is the offer of ancestral halls in three of these villages for divine worship.

At Sheung-ling itself, the church, erected under circumstances which were detailed in last year's Report,* was dedicated in May, 1909. The new converts soon had to endure trial, for a few months later they were attacked and several of them wounded, the front of the church building, especially the name, was besmeared with filth, a good deal of damage was done to the structure and furniture, and all emblems of the Christian faith were destroyed. At other places there were remarkable openings. Some are described by Miss A. M. Jones, who spends her time itinerating in the district, in the following terms :—

Whole villages turn to Christianity.

P'ik-t'aam is situated in a rather high valley in the hills. The whole village has asked to be received into the Faith—men, women, and children, in all over 200. As far as we can judge they are real and earnest in their desire to worship the One True God. They have given us the ancestral hall for a chapel, and have contributed fifty dollars to do it up ; and Pastor Mok told me this was really all they could do, they are so very poor.

At Kong-p'i-t'au, a small village on the Lo-a-shaan side of the river, the whole village has asked for baptism, and the people have given us the ancestral hall for a chapel. As I sat teaching the women and children the Commandments, 'Thou shalt have none other gods but Me,' 'Thou shalt not make to thyself any graven image,' the women eagerly broke in and told me 'they had no idols ; they had destroyed them all and the incense-burners.' The wood and paper idols were made into a bonfire and burnt, and the stone ones drowned—cast into the water.

Inquirers and converts.

Miss Jones tells of other villages besides those already mentioned where there are numbers of hopeful inquirers—of Naam-pok, where more than 100 persons are asking for baptism ; of Shek-U, a small market-town, where she found many eager listeners and some of the men exclaimed, 'I do want to believe,' while intense desire was written on their faces ; of Ngoi-hoi, where a widow was led to Christ through the answer of her prayer for her son's restoration to health, and afterwards accompanied Miss Jones as she visited the people, and urged them to believe in God ; and of another market-town where the people beg that a preaching-hall may be opened.† At Hong Kong the opportunities for reaching and teaching women in their homes are 'unlimited,' and the missionaries are also allowed every Sunday afternoon to read the Bible and preach the Gospel to the Chinese women in the gaol.‡ In the Shiu-hing district four women were baptized and fresh villages are constantly being opened by women who are witnessing for the Saviour, though at Shiu-hing itself the people are as apathetic as ever. From Pakhoi a similar report is received—in the city there is indifference to Christianity, but in the villages eagerness to learn about it. The women's station class for inquirers there had twenty-three members —more than ever before—and a station class for men was also set on foot, in which fifteen gathered for the study of the Gospel. A new out-station was opened at Cheung-lok, an important market-town of which the first converts at Pakhoi, baptized in 1888, were natives. At another and older out-station a woman, the wife of the catechist, until recently a bitter opponent of Christianity, was baptized.*

Pastoral Work.

The Chinese clergy and lay agents in the Mission are highly spoken of. Of the Rev. Fong Yat-Sau, Bishop Ingham says that he 'is one of the most trusted men in China . . . he does untold good,' and he adds: 'Let us only produce young evangelists of this type and the problem of the evangelization of China will be solved.' † Archdeacon Barnett writes of the Rev. Mok Shau-Tsang, the pastor at Canton: 'His energy knows no bounds. His spiritual leadership has inspired the Native Church to greater efforts than they have ever before attempted. His earnestness in preaching the Gospel has won over whole villages.' And, lastly, the Rev. W. E. H. Hipwell refers to the catechist at Pakhoi, who before his conversion was a fortune-teller, as 'fearless in his testimony for Christ and a man of blameless character.' With such agents to commend the Gospel to their fellow-countrymen by their lives as well as with their lips, the outlook is bright indeed.

SOUTH-CENTRAL CHINA MISSION.

Work in the Province of Kwang-Si was begun by the C.M.S. in 1899, when Kuei-lin was occupied. Four years later a forward step was taken by opening a station at Yung-chow, 150 miles distant, in the Province of Hu-Nan. The difficult nature of the journey up-country has militated against rapid advance, and the staff of missionaries has been but small.

The Province of Kwang-Si and that portion of the Province of Hu-Nan which lies south of latitude 28° were included in the Diocese of Victoria, Hong Kong, until 1909, when they were formed into the Diocese of Kwangsi-Hunan, to which Dr. W. Banister, a C.M.S. missionary, was appointed. He was consecrated in the year named.

The staff of the Mission consists, besides Bishop Banister, of six European clergy, one layman, five missionaries' wives, and three other women missionaries. The Chinese Christian lay agents number three.

Consecration of Bishop Banister.

THE consecration of Archdeacon W. Banister (on whom the degree of Doctor of Divinity has been conferred by the Archbishop of Canterbury) to be Bishop in Kwangsi-Hunan took place at Westminster Abbey on November 30, 1909.

Disturbances in Hu-Nan.

Serious riots, which appear to have owed their origin to a scarcity of rice, broke out at Chang-sha, the capital city of the Province of Hu-Nan, at midnight of April 13, 1910, and on the following day all buildings occupied by foreigners, including those of the Wesleyan Missionary Society, the China Inland Mission and the London Missionary Society, were set on fire. Three British gunboats were promptly sent up the river from Han-kow. A little later, at the request of the British Consul, the C.M.S. missionaries at Yung-chow, 180 miles south of Chang-sha, were recalled to Han-kow.

Reinforcements.

The Mission has been reinforced by two of the year's recruits, viz., the Rev. John Lionel Bacon, of Islington College, L.Th., Durham University, and Miss Elsie Maude Roxby, trained at The Willows.

Mission schoolboys ask for baptism.

The work in the Mission is still in its initial stages and almost entirely evangelistic, though considerable care is taken in the instruction of the little bands of Christians. There is a boys' school at each station, and these play their part as evangelistic agencies, for at Yung-chow ten of the lads asked for admission to the catechumenate, and at Kuei-lin it was evident that several pupils were beginning to be interested in the Gospel. In the former city a notable event was the arrival in March, 1909, of the first single women missionaries. It created a good deal of excitement, and numbers of women flocked to the guest-hall of the ladies' temporary quarters, and after looking all round, and finding none of the children's bones which they expected to see lying about, settled down to listen to the Gospel.* Before long one or two of them began to attend classes more or less regularly, and by November six were under definite instruction, and seemed likely soon to be ready for admission as catechumens. Efforts to reach the men were made, not only by means of evangelistic meetings at which sometimes as many as 200 were present, but also by preaching in Buddhist temples, where large audiences gathered to listen to the lantern addresses, and visiting the prisons. Seven adults were baptized at Yung-chow,* but at Kuei-lin the outlook was less hopeful, though an out-station has been opened in that district at Hing-an, a hsien city two days' journey to the north-east, where Mr. Song, the first Kuei-lin convert, has been placed as catechist.

FUH-KIEN MISSION.

THE PAST HISTORY.

The Fuh-Kien Mission has a truly remarkable history. Fuh-chow was occupied in 1850, and the first eleven years passed without a single convert appearing. Two out of five missionaries died during this interval, and two retired. The fifth died soon after gathering the first-fruits of his labours, leaving a new-comer, the Rev. J. R. (now Archdeacon) Wolfe, in charge. Up to 1864 the work was confined to Fuh-chow City. In that year and the following other large cities were occupied by Chinese evangelists. In 1866 the first two or three converts were baptized. Fuh-ning was occupied by European missionaries in 1882; Ku-cheng, 1886; Lo-ngwong, 1889; Kien-yang, 1891; Hing-hwa, 1893; Kien-ning, 1894; Ning-taik, Hok-chiang, Keng-tau and Ko-sang-che, 1896; Lieng-kong and Deng-doi, 1897; Sieng-iu, 1901; Tang-tau, 1902; Huok-leng, 1903; Du-sung, 1904; Sung-ki, 1906. In 1906 Archdeacon H. McC. E. Price, a C.M.S. missionary in Japan, was consecrated first Bishop of Fuh-Kien. The Province had previously been a part of the diocese of Victoria, Hong Kong.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK.

The work of the Mission is carried on at Fuh-chow, the capital, and at many cities and villages scattered over the northern half of the Province of Fuh-Kien. Three of these, besides Fuh-chow, are 'fuh' (i.e. prefectural) cities, viz., Fuh-ning and Kien-ning, north of the Min, the river on which Fuh-chow stands, and Hing-hwa, south of it. The other chief stations are Lieng-kong, Lo-ngwong, Ning-taik and Ku-cheng, north of the Min; and Hok-chiang and Sieng-iu, south of that river. The work at Fuh-ning is largely supported by the Dublin University Fuh-Kien Mission.

Besides the Bishop, who resides at Fuh-chow, the mission staff comprises twenty-one European clergymen, ten laymen, twenty-six missionaries' wives, and forty-nine single women. Of these thirteen are qualified doctors and eleven are nurses. There are sixteen Chinese clergymen, and 462 male and female Chinese Christian evangelists and teachers.

The chief central institutions are at Fuh-chow, some of them in the city and some of them on the island of Nantai, in the river Min, where is the European Settlement. They include a Divinity College and Normal School, the Stewart Memorial School for Bible-women, St. Mark's College, a High School and a Boarding-school for boys, a Boarding-school for girls, a Hospital and Class for students, and a School for blind boys.

There are also Theological Classes at Hing-hwa and Kien-ning; Women's Schools at Fuh-ning, Ning-taik, Huok-leng, Hai-tan, Hing-hwa and Kien-ning; High Schools for boys at Fuh-ning and Kien-ning, and Boarding-schools at Ku-cheng, Lo-ngwong, Hok-chiang, Hing-hwa and Sieng-iu; Girls' Boarding-schools at Keng-tau, Ning-taik, Fuh-ning and Hing-hwa; and elementary schools at a great number of villages.

Medical work is represented by Hospitals, with in some cases Classes for students, at Hok-chiang, Ning-taik, Fuh-ning, Hing-hwa, Sieng-iu and Kien-ning, besides dispensaries at several stations. Work among lepers is carried on at Fuh-chow, Hok-chiang, Lo-ngwong, Ku-cheng and Kien-ning.

A number of missionaries devote themselves entirely to evangelistic work, in which also those engaged at the institutions named above take part from time to time. Ladies of the C.E.Z.M.S. co-operate with the Society's missionaries in work among the women.

Death of Rev. M. Fearnley.

THE Rev. M. Fearnley, who laboured in the Fuh-Kien Mission for five years from 1855, died at Worthing on May 22, 1909.

Reinforcements.

The Mission has been reinforced by Miss Eda Stanley Bryan-Brown, M.B., B.S., London University, trained at The Olives; Miss Alice Kendall, of the New South Wales Association; and Miss Lilian Carruthers Smither, trained at The Willows. Miss M.

Bruce Moore has been transferred to the South China Mission. The Committee have accepted the resignations of the Rev. J. Hind and Dr. A. W. Goldsmith, and the Rev. Ting Chung-Seng has retired.

Mission-buildings damaged by a typhoon.

The coast of the province of Fuh-Kien was visited in September, 1909, by a destructive typhoon, which seriously damaged nearly all the mission-buildings in Fuh-chow, as well as many of those in the Hok-chiang and other districts.*

Evangelistic Work.

Although sixty years have elapsed since the Fuh-Kien Mission was begun there is still much land to be possessed. Archdeacon J. R. Wolfe says that there are 'numbers of towns and villages where the voice of a missionary of Christ has never been heard,' and maintains that this is no mere rhetorical figure of speech, but the sober statement of a sad fact.† Even for existing work the staff is not adequate. In the Lieng-kong and Lo-ngwong districts the work is going back for want of native agents and foreign supervision; in the Ko-sang-che district some itinerations which were made by Miss A. McClelland were 'not encouraging,' but she adds, 'no foreigner has been visiting the people regularly since the summer of 1907, and the Bible-women are few'; Hai-tan, for part of the year, had to be left without a missionary; and at some places in the Ning-taik district, where the outlook was once promising, a sad change has taken place. Over against this falling off must be placed extension in the re-occupation of Su-dong-gai and Ching-ho, both in the Kien-ning district, as out-stations. From most parts of the Mission reports tell of a distinct and even remarkable willingness on the part of the people to listen to the Gospel, particularly in the north. Thus, the Rev. H. S. Phillips, of the district just mentioned, is emphatic that among both men and women there is a 'wide-open door'; and Miss F. L. Coleman, after a three weeks' itineration from Kien-yang, speaks of having been much cheered by the 'readiness and even eagerness of some to hear the Gospel story.' The Bible-women visiting in and around Ning-taik found many good openings for work; while in Fuh-chow the Manchu ladies were much more friendly than in former years, there are 'open doors on all sides and among all classes,' and a 'phenomenal' willingness to listen to the message of God's love in Christ. On the other hand it is said that there is no opportunity among the women of Du-sung, and in some parts of the Hing-hwa district also the outlook can hardly be termed bright. The Rev. C. Shaw writes:—

An inadequate staff.

Remarkable willingness to listen to the Gospel.

> There is a decided want of interest in spiritual things. Here 'the things seen and temporal' have a tremendous hold on the people; they crave for earthly glory, and many of them identify themselves with the Christian Church for worldly advantage. By this I mean that they hope by changing their deity (or object of worship) to make advance in temporal matters—sickness will leave them, sorrow will be unknown, they will prosper in their business, rain and sunshine will come just when they want it, etc., etc.

* See C.M. Gleaner, Jan., 1910, p. 14.

† Church Missionary Review, June, 1909, p. 353.

When they find such is not always the case, and that often it is still true that 'all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution,' then they grow cold and cease to walk with us. We have had in the past many wayside, stony and thorny-ground hearers, but now in many places we do not get even these; they are all taken up with the Government colleges and other things which are given here as baits to prevent people from connecting themselves with the Christian Church.

Unhappily it was often the case that the people were not willing to go any farther than listen to the message delivered by the missionaries and Chinese agents. Archdeacon Wolfe says that there has never been a time within his memory when so few were ready to enter the Church by baptism, and he attributes the fact to the revival of the worship of Confucius * and to the hostility towards Christianity shown by the Government and the officials. Miss M. E. Wolfe's experience among the women in the villages of Ko-sang-che was of a similar nature, while from another part of the Mission the report is, 'Many have heard the Gospel, but very few make any open profession.' Yet the evangelistic work was not left without some fruit. Here an old vegetarian woman, though probably animated by a desire to see the foreign missionary in inviting her to her house, yet pays such attention that the latter on leaving the place feels that there has been a 'prepared opportunity'; here, again, is a village woman, who overcoming her fears of her fellow-villagers' threats that if she went near the foreigner they would cut off her feet, joins a station class with a view to instruction for baptism. In one village from fifteen to twenty women are anxious to be taught, and a Christian offers his large house to be used as a church and school; in another seven women are admitted to the catechumenate; in a third, partly owing to the visits of an old Christian, and partly through being in touch with the hospital, several families have put away their idols.† At Keng-tau twenty women were under preparation for baptism at the end of the year, while at Fuh-chow a certain number of men were definitely inquiring. A good many adults also were baptized—some twenty at Fuh-chow; a young man on his death-bed at Du-sung; a couple of women at Ning-taik, and six at Deng-doi; sixty-four adults in the Hok-chiang district, including an old woman with her son and his wife on the island of Hai-tan, and another old woman, who was baptized with her two motherless grandsons; and forty-five in the Kien-ning district.

Few ready to enter the Church.

Inquirers.

Converts.

Besides these, most of whom were the fruit of the general evangelistic work, there were a certain number of converts and inquirers won through the work at the mission-hospitals or dispensaries. Four adults were baptized at Fuh-chow on Whit Sunday, 1909, who were in some way or other connected with the medical work, three of them, young men, all having been Heathen when they were admitted to the hospital,* while at least seven other patients gave in their names as inquirers. At Deng-doi, where a branch dispensary is carried on, four former patients were admitted to the catechumenate on one day. At one time it seemed likely that a good many would put themselves under regular instruction at Du-sung, where there is a second branch dispensary, and at another village, to each of which Dr. G. Wilkinson went for a fortnight, at the request of the people, to assist them in breaking off the opium habit. About 175 persons underwent treatment, and to all the Gospel was faithfully and regularly preached. Some of them afterwards attended the Church services for a few Sundays, but the majority again had recourse to their old habit, and in one village all without exception, and in the other nearly all, ceased to show any signs of having been impressed by the truth.† The number of patients at the men's hospital at Hok-chiang was larger than in 1908, although several of the wards were so damaged by the typhoon in the autumn as to be unusable for some time afterwards. The women's hospital was adversely affected by hostile reports, and the death of a patient under operation for cancer did not improve matters, but towards the end of the year a more friendly feeling prevailed. At Hing-hwa the popularity of the hospital was shown both by the increased number of people who had recourse to it, and also by gifts from the Chinese, one of whom undertook the expense of repairing a portion of the buildings, while another promised $80 towards the erection of a much-needed reception room for Chinese guests. More patients were received at Kien-ning than in 1908. At several of the hospitals some Chinese students received medical training, while some young women are qualifying as nurses at Hok-chiang. In the future the training of students is to be more systematically carried on at Fuh-chow, where a building has been erected to serve as a medical school.‡

Pastoral Work.

Among the converts and inquirers of past years there was much to call for humiliation. A Chinese pastor in one district and a woman worker in another fell into grievous sin and had to be suspended; of a third district it is said that many of the Christians have become 'cold and careless, and some have gone back altogether'; of two others that 'they are in a most depressed state as regards Church work'; of a sixth that while some of the converts

Among the patients at Fuh-chow was a man with a large ulcer under his arm, caused by his giving some of his flesh to benefit his father who was ill. Dr. Wilkinson says that this 'voluntary cannibalism' does not seem to be very uncommon.

were strengthened to withstand the subtle temptations to which they are exposed, many 'are not rooted and grounded enough' to do so. At Sieng-iu 'pandemonium raged for three hours at the first meeting of the Church Council, at which appointments are made for the year,' and though, later on, the Church there and at Hing-hwa was visited by a revival, its effects on a great number were only temporary.* Visiting the women at one of the out-stations in the last-named district revealed the fact that 'while some were earnest and bright, others had gone back and seemed no better than the Heathen around them,' and a few confessed that though they no longer worshipped idols, they never even prayed or thought of God at all. From the Ning-taik district comes a sad story. Miss J. C. Clarke writes of one village which she visited as follows :—

'No better than the Heathen.'

The Christian man in whose house I stayed seemed some years ago to be very much in earnest. He fitted up a large room in his house for use as a church, and took the lead among the few Christians in the place. It was, therefore, very disappointing to find him and all the household grown careless and even indifferent, resting in the name of Christian, but having little regard to its obligations. The shop was kept open on Sunday, and carpentering, etc., carried on, and no reasoning availed to convince them they were wrong. The congregation has decreased by about half, some having died and some fallen away, and the promise of a few years ago has sadly failed of fulfilment.

At Hok-chiang an even sadder incident occurred. A Christian woman suffered from typhoid fever. When the necessity for complete rest was explained to her husband, also a professing Christian, he calmly said : 'Chinese women cannot be nursed like foreigners, and she will have to get up at times.' He refused to make arrangements for the woman to have a constant attendant, with the result that one day she fell down ; collapse followed, then hemorrhage, delirium and death. The man being left with four little motherless boys, made arrangements to sell the baby to a Heathen for £10. An earnest Christian woman, to whom the mother when she was dying gave the child, was willing to adopt the infant, but could not afford to pay so much money for him, and the father refused to take a penny less. One of the faults of the converts is neglect of the Lord's Day, partly due to the fact that often one catechist is in charge of two or three different congregations some distance apart, and at the outside can only give one service a Sunday to each. Among other reasons for failure to keep Sunday as a day of rest and worship and to abstain entirely from ordinary work, the Rev. H. B. Ridler enumerates the following :—

Difficulties in the way of Sunday observance.

1. The lack of a true conception of and reverence for the day.
2. The loss sustained by the Christians should they close their shops, or refrain from attending to their fields or gardens on Sunday.
3. The difficulty arising from the Chinese being joined together into clans and families, each having its own title or surname, and often each living in a separate village, and having property belonging to them; this consists chiefly of fields and gardens, which are often worked jointly, and the harvest shared, excepting such fields and gardens which are worked by each family independently. Furthermore, the harvest must be commenced, and the potatoes dug on a certain day, which is always fixed by the elders of the village, and woe betide any one who acts contrary to this.

It is because of the above that many of our Christians are compelled, whether they wish it or not, to assist on Sundays in cutting the harvest, digging up their potatoes, and cutting grass.

Self-support.

Sufficient has been said to indicate the urgency of the call to prayer in behalf of the Christians in the Fuh-Kien Province, but there is also a call to thanksgiving for the grace given to some of them which should not be disregarded. Two of the congregations in Fuh-chow city are self-supporting; the members of one of them opened a couple of preaching-places where they carried on evangelistic work; and the spiritual state of a third congregation in the city is said to be on the whole good. In the Hing-hwa district, 'solid progress has been made in developing the stability of the Christians,' and in the pastorates to the south and east of the city the people are in some degree 'hot-hearted.' In the Sieng-iu district some old-time feuds of long standing were healed, while at Hok-chiang several backsliders were restored, including a woman who for eight years had been kept by her husband from all Christian influences. The death of his only son, after hundreds of dollars had been spent on idol ceremonies for his recovery, was the turning point in the man's life; he is now a catechumen, and with his wife attends services regularly. Again, an elderly woman, one of the few fruits of the work among the boat-people at Fuh-chow, refused on her death-bed to allow any heathen ceremonies to be performed in her behalf, saying: 'I will have nothing to do with idols.' There were also one or two cases in which converts voluntarily exerted themselves to win others, such as a woman who of her own initiative opened a little school, where she taught the children a great deal about the Saviour in a short time; and another who, with her husband, set on foot a Sunday evening Gospel service, which was the means of bringing several to Christ.

'Hot-hearted Christians.'

Educational Work.

Training Institutions.

The Divinity School at Fuh-chow had fifteen students, only half the number of a few years ago; six of the men offered to go to the province of Ho-Nan for missionary work under Bishop White, who was for a time a lecturer in the school. Six students, all old High School boys, were under training at the Normal School. Theological Classes were held also at Kien-ning and Hing-hwa. At the beginning of 1909 there were fifteen men in the latter class, but the advantages offered by Government service in comparison with that of the Church, caused a spirit of unrest, and six of the students withdrew.* The training of Bible-women is carried on at the Stewart Memorial School at Fuh-chow, and at several Women's Schools in the Mission; at the latter not only prospective Bible-women are received, but also other Christian women who are desirous of further instruction in Christianity, although there is no likelihood of their ever becoming agents of the Mission. In the Stewart Memorial School * there were eight women preparing for evangelistic work, and thirteen others; at Hing-hwa six were in training as Bible-women; and so on. In this connexion may be mentioned the station classes, in which women are received who have heard something of the Gospel and desire more teaching. Several members of these entered the catechumenate. One of them was a young widow, whose father-in-law, though a Heathen, encouraged her to join the class. On his death, which happened shortly afterwards, she was required, since her husband had been the eldest son, to perform certain heathen rites, but she refused to do so. This led to persecution by the relatives, who later on endeavoured to sell her and marry her to a Heathen, but she steadfastly resisted them, and at the end of 1909 was hoping shortly to be baptized.

No baptisms took place among the students, ranging in age from thirteen to thirty, most of them non-Christians, at St. Mark's College, Fuh-chow, but one of the teachers was received into the visible Church, and two boys were admitted to the catechumenate. The number of boys on the rolls of the High School in that city has fallen greatly of late years, and now does not exceed twenty; a good percentage of the lads become catechists, schoolmasters or doctors in the employ of the Mission. Much the same may be said of the Boarding-schools throughout the Mission. That at Kien-ning grew in 1909, some of the better-class people beginning to send their sons, and at its close it had nine lads in the high-school department, while a day-school which was added during the year gained a good attendance. Several of the pupils belonging to the Girls' Boarding-school at Fuh-chow were baptized in 1909, and four of those at Ning-taik.

The Rev. Ll. Lloyd, besides discharging his duties as Secretary of the Mission, Corresponding Secretary of the C.E.Z.M.S., and Chaplain to the Foreign Community, devoted a good deal of time to translational work, the most important being the revision of the Higher Wenli Bible.

Literary Work.

DUBLIN UNIVERSITY FUH-KIEN MISSION.

THE work at Fuh-ning is on the same lines as at other stations in the province of Fuh-Kien. One of the members of the Women's School completed her training and afforded satisfaction as a worker, and three others entered their last year of preparation. English and Mandarin and other new branches of study were introduced at the Girls' Boarding-school. At the Hospital the number of in-patients increased; scripture portions and tracts were sold to the inmates, and a Buddhist priest and some others showed great interest in the Gospel. Several former patients, too, when returning for a fresh supply of medicine, declared, 'We still pray to God morning and evening, as we did in the hospital.' Both in the city and villages opportunities for evangelistic work were greater than before, and two new out-stations were occupied. It was no longer considered a reproach to be associated with the Christians, and on one occasion even some mandarin ladies appeared at the service in the chapel of the girls' school. Twenty women read for baptism in the station class. On the other hand, the Rev. T. de C. Studdert has to lament the dismissal of two catechists, owing to the lack of funds for their support, and a certain decrease in the congregations, the latter due, he believes, to the strong stand made against interference on the part of the workers in cases of litigation.

MID CHINA MISSION.

THE PAST HISTORY.

China, north of lat. 28°, became the sphere of a separate episcopal jurisdiction 'North China,' in 1872, Dr. Russell, of the C.M.S., being the first Bishop. In 1880, after his death, it was divided into two, North and Mid China, and Dr. G. E. Moule, of the C.M.S., became Bishop of the latter See; he retired in 1907, and was succeeded in the following year by Dr. H. J. Molony. The Protestant Episcopal Church of America appointed a missionary Bishop to China in 1844; who reached Shanghai with a band of missionaries in the following year. In 1901 the same Church appointed a Bishop of Han-kow. In 1908, by an agreement with the American Bishops, the province of Cheh-Kiang was recognized as Dr. Molony's sphere of episcopal jurisdiction, and his title was changed to 'Bishop in Cheh-Kiang.' The first C.M.S. missionaries reached China in 1844, and Shanghai was occupied in 1845; Ningpo, 1848; Hang-chow, 1865; Shaou-hing, 1870; T'ai-chow and Chu-ki, 1892. In the earlier years of the Mission much success was, by the Divine blessing, achieved in the numerous towns and villages around Ningpo. Later, in 1877, the Gospel was introduced under striking circumstances into the Chu-ki district from Hang-chow, and again in 1886 into the district of T'ai-chow from Ningpo. Many of the Christians in these districts have manifested exemplary Christian stedfastness and zeal.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK.

Excepting at Shanghai in the province of Kiang-Su, the commercial metropolis of China, where the Society has an Anglo-Chinese School for non-Christian boys and several day-schools, and also maintains general evangelistic work and work among women and for the blind, the operations of the Mission are carried on in the province of Cheh-Kiang. Ningpo, one of the first five ports in China to be thrown open to foreign trade, and Hang-chow, another treaty port, are the chief stations, the others being T'ai-chow, to the south, and Shaou-hing and Chu-ki, east and south-east respectively of Hang-chow.

The more important educational institutions are Trinity College, Ningpo, with its Theological and Preparandi Classes and Normal School, a Bible-women's Class at T'ai-chow, an Anglo-Chinese School at Shaou-hing, the Mary Vaughan High School for girls at Hang-chow, and Boarding-schools for boys and for girls at Ningpo, T'ai-chow, Hang-chow and Chu-ki. The great majority of the pupils in these institutions are the children of Christians.

Medical work is represented by Hospitals at Hang-chow, T'ai-chow and Ningpo, the two first-named having classes for students. In connexion with the Hang-chow Hospital there are a Lepers' Home, Maternity Home, etc. The pastoral care of the Native Christians is mainly in the hands of twenty-three Chinese clergy, who, in co-operation with the foreign missionaries (Bishops Molony and Moule, eighteen other clergymen, seven doctors, six other laymen, twenty-two missionaries' wives, and twenty-seven other women missionaries, including three nurses) and 138 Chinese Christian lay agents, also engage in evangelistic work. The Chinese Church Missionary Society has an ordained missionary and two lay evangelists in the Hang-chow district.

Death of Mrs. W. Robbins.

THE death of Mrs. Robbins, who was married to the Rev. W. Robbins in 1906, occurred at Hang-chow on May 12, 1910.

Reinforcements.

Three of the year's recruits, viz., the Rev. Clement Dru Drury, M.A., Trinity College, Cambridge, and Ridley Hall, Curate of St. Mary's, Whitechapel; Mr. Bernard Score Brown, M.B., Ch.B., Edinburgh University; and Miss Jane Weightman, M.A., Liverpool University, trained at The Olives, have been assigned to the Mid China Mission; and Mr. George Jewel Evans, M.R.C.S., L.R.C.P. Lond., who went to Mid China independently in 1909, has been accepted as a missionary in local connexion. To the names of native clergy connected with the Society have been added those of the Rev. Nyi Liang-P'ing, who was on the list from 1889 to 1907 and now has rejoined; the Rev. Fông Ling-Sing, who was ordained in 1906; and the Revs. 'En Veng-Hyin, 'O Cü-Uong, Sing Tsiao-Eng and Wông Kwong-Tsiao, who were admitted to deacons' orders in 1909 by Bishop Molony.* The Committee have accepted the resignation of Miss G. Lewin.

The Chinese C.M.S.

The Chinese C.M.S., which was founded by a few Chinese laymen in 1899, has become very popular among the Christians, and now employs a clergyman and two catechists, who work in a part of the province of Cheh-Kiang, where there is no foreign missionary. Ten candidates were presented for confirmation in the spring of 1909, and Bishop Molony found them well prepared.

Pastoral Work.

Several defections occurred during the year among the Chinese agents employed in the Mission, and in some respects the situation is one of anxiety as concerns the Native Church. Archdeacon A. E. Moule sums up the position as follows:—

An anxious situation.

> With the abandonment of faith in the old and exposed superstitions and follies of idolatry, and the loosing of the bands of ancient customs and manners bound up so much with the more than half discredited ancient literature and educational systems of China, old respect for principle and propriety and integrity is gone; personal gain and advancement override conscience; and with the vanishing of the false and ignorant, the vision of the Divine Truth, with its perfect principles and motives and sanctions, has not taken hold of the nation. The shock of change and the effect on character are not unfelt even in the Church; while the Church, while growing in numbers, in self-support, and especially in self-government, is not outpacing change—if the figure is not incorrect—by the solidity and certainty of 'growing in grace' (faster than in 'knowingness') and in the full knowledge of the Saviour.

Such detailed accounts as have been received from the various stations indicate some of the shortcomings of the converts. From one place it is reported, 'The Christians disappoint us much, and the work does not grow as we should like'; from another, 'Among the most prominent absentees from public worship are the "scholar" Christians, and they keep away from fear of ridicule'; at two others, it is intimated, there is a tendency to fail in the observance of Sunday as a day of rest, the cause in some cases being the extreme poverty of the Christians, which is known also to lead a few to sell their children into heathen families; while at a fifth the women converts are said to be cold and lifeless. In many cases, too, there is apparently complete indifference concerning the spiritual welfare of others, even of near relatives. But before a stone is cast at the Chinese converts not only should the grievous shortcomings of Christians at home be borne in mind, but also the disabilities under which the Christians in China labour. Many of them are densely ignorant and unable to read; they are surrounded by a dense mass of Heathenism; the means of grace within their reach are often scanty; and they sometimes have to face real persecution. Miss E. M. Read of Chu-ki writes of a case in point:—

The husband of a woman who came to me for daily teaching was done out of his share of the family property on account of his becoming an inquirer; and because he went round and tried to partake of a certain meal, in order to prove that he was still a member of that family, he was set upon by his relatives and beaten about the head with an iron hook. I was called out to see the man. He looked ghastly—his face covered with blood and a fair-sized hole in the top of his head. After a day or two of very animated discussion the matter was settled by a payment of money, followed by a feast and letting-off of fireworks by the offending party.

Hopeful signs.

There were, moreover, many hopeful signs, due, it may be believed, to special prayers for an outpouring of the Holy Spirit which were offered at Whitsuntide.* In some parts of the Ningpo district a revival of spiritual life was seen, which spread from village to village, and the contributions of the converts in that region nearly doubled during the year under review; while in the T'ai-chow district, where three new pastorates were formed in 1909, the gifts amounted to almost twice the sum contributed in 1907. There were also striking individual cases of faithfulness. The Rev. Tsong Sieh-En has left his work in a comfortable sphere at Shaou-hing to work at Chu-ki, one of the roughest places in the Mission, so great is his eagerness for souls;† and Miss M. E. Turnbull is able to tell of a woman, more than seventy years of age, who for four days in succession, in cold, windy weather, sat in a wayside shelter so as to preach to the crowds of people who came to worship a new bridge in the neighbourhood.‡

Educational Work.

Trinity College.

High Schools.

All the departments—theological, preparandi and normal—of Trinity College, Ningpo, were quite full during 1909, the total number of students being seventy-one. The four men whose ordination is recorded above were all trained at the College. A chapel, built in memory of Bishop Hoare, was opened during the year. The Anglo-Chinese School at Shanghai, also, was popular, and had upwards of 100 names on its rolls at the close of the year; while at Shaou-hing there were forty-one boys (six of them non-Christians), the largest number in the history of the school. A former pupil instead of seeking a post in a Government school with a salary of from $40 to $50 a month, accepted one in a mission-school, where he receives only $10 a month, because he felt that in the former his hands would be tied in regard to Bible teaching. Of another student who offered himself for training as an evangelist Mr. P. J. King writes as follows:—

Self-sacrifice for the sake of teaching the Bible.

He seems to have been helped by the United Bible School recently held in the city, and also by the conviction in his own heart of the appalling needs of those around. He was out for a walk with a friend one day, and remarked to him, 'Out of 1,000 of the people now passing us, how many do you suppose are Christians?' The friend replied, 'Perhaps not one.' The student then asked, 'How many have even heard the Gospel?' and upon reflection they were forced to the conclusion that probably only two or three had done so. The student's father is engaged in evangelistic work at one of our out-stations, and his mother is one of our most earnest Bible-women at Hang-chow.

Girls' school.

The first Upper Secondary School for girls in the Mission, the Mary Vaughan High School, was opened at Hang-chow in 1909 with twenty pupils. About half of these are the daughters of Christians, and most of the remainder belong to the families of officials, three being relatives of the Marquis Tsen, and one a granddaughter of the Prime Minister. Of the Girls' Boarding-schools, that at Ningpo was full with fifty pupils, the daughters of Chinese pastors or mission workers, and at the end of the year there were thirty applications for ten vacancies. At Chu-ki, also, the number of pupils materially advanced. Women's Schools for Christians and inquirers were held at Ningpo and Kwun-hae-we; four of the students in the latter were baptized and others asked for baptism.*

Literary Work.

Mr. A. J. H. Moule, who has been appointed to undertake translation work in England, after completing for press the translation of the last two volumes of the Religious Tract Society's Commentary on the Bible, turned his attention to small books and pamphlets, and rendered into Chinese the Bishop of Durham's Thoughts on Christian Sanctity, Prebendary Fox's Our Lord and His Bible, etc.† Miss D. C. Joynt translated a manual on Confirmation by her brother, the Rev. R. C. Joynt.

Medical Work.

The work at the Medical Mission at T'ai-chow was on a larger scale than in 1908, and both there and at the Hang-chow and Ningpo hospitals the religious teaching was fruitful in results. One of the wardmen and also a patient and his wife were baptized at Hang-chow, and at Ningpo a woman, an in-patient for the second time, who after her first visit had renounced idolatry. Among the numerous inquirers at the latter station were a literary man who attended as an out-patient with a complaint so trifling that he forgot to mention it to Dr. A. F. Cole in his eagerness to hear about Christianity,‡ and also a girl, thirteen years of age, an apparently hopeless case, who, however, was discharged cured. Many of the patients at T'ai-chow showed an interest in the Gospel; one of those baptized there during the year was a former patient, two men died in the hospital with the confession of faith in Christ on their lips, a third on his return home braved all opposition and avowed himself a Christian, and in several cases missionaries working in the district found their connexion with the Medical Mission helped them to gain the attention of heathen audiences. Dispensary work at Z-ky'i, a town in the Ningpo district, and Chu-ki, also led some to inquire into Christianity.*

Evangelistic Work.

In the evangelistic work a number of openings presented themselves in parts of the Ningpo district, while in the city, where many difficulties have been encountered in the past, there was great readiness and even anxiety to be taught. Although visible results were few at Shaou-hing, where some £700,000 worth of silvered paper money, made for superstitious purposes, is said to be disposed of in a year, the missionaries received many invitations to visit heathen homes, and non-Christians listened freely to the Gospel, while in the district there were good opportunities for work. The T'ai-chow district was marked by what is called a 'spirit of reactionary coldness,' due partly to the opening of men's eyes to the fact that the Churches are not political agencies, and partly to the 'secular and agnostic spirit, with which young scholars of the new method of learning are imbued at the colleges'; and though little hostility was shown in the Hang-chow River district, the Rev. H. Castle is not able to speak very hopefully concerning the prospects there. He wrote in October, 1909, as follows :—

'Reactionary coldness.'

> The people are ready to listen, but that seems all; there is no real consciousness of their sinfulness, and consequently of their need of a Saviour. Many in these villages, we find, have heard the Gospel. They mention the names of those who have laboured in the district. In some cases the people have a clear grasp of the plan of salvation, but lack conviction of sin. Some worship their idols on the one hand and God on the other, and even the Lord Jesus. Perhaps it is because our Lord is no more to them than another idol, and they want to be on the safe side by worshipping all. A few days ago with Suem Sien-Sen we went out in a village and sat down in a rest-house where was an old woman selling light refreshments. After we had preached to her and others who came to rest for a while, she got up, lit a stick of incense, and then went first to one and then to the other entrance to the place, and worshipped by bowing and praying. We asked her whom she had been worshipping, and she said the idols God and Jesus.

Visiting the upper classes.

Among the special forms of work was visiting the upper classes in their homes at Shaou-hing and Hang-chow. In the latter city there were proofs that God was working among the ladies of the family of a high official, in that smoking and gambling gave place to useful occupations, such as painting and needlework; while the lady spoken of in last year's Report † as having asked for baptism developed in spiritual life, though the stumbling-block to her reception into the visible Church remained in the opposition to Christianity of the man to whom she is engaged to be married.

Inquirers and converts.

The General Review of the Mission states that the numbers of inquirers, catechumens and baptized Christians are steadily and in some places rapidly on the increase, but since fewer than half of the missionaries have furnished the Committee with a report of their work it is impossible to give many details. In the city of Ningpo the number of women applying for instruction and baptism was almost unprecedented, and in the district several persons were baptized. Among them were an old Buddhist devotee; the wife of a convert, who for many years did all she could to prevent her husband from becoming a Christian; * and at Z-ky'i a tailor and his wife and three other women. The baptism of forty-two adults, a number not commensurate, the Rev. E. Thompson says, with the increase in the staff of workers or equal to those of previous years, is reported from T'ai-chow. The first-fruits of work at Nyo-wu, an out-station in the Chu-ki district, were gathered in by the baptism of six persons; besides these there were a good many inquirers, including an old man, his wife, his three sons and their wives, and a grandson. The old man has given up attending theatrical performances, and spends his leisure time in the study of the Bible.

WESTERN CHINA MISSION.

THE PAST HISTORY.

The Province of Si-Chuan was occupied by a party under the Rev. J. H. Horsburgh in 1892, but for more than a year it was impossible to rent houses in any place not already occupied by other Societies. The cities of Chong-pa, Sin-tu, Mien-chuh, Mien-cheo and Ngan-hsien received resident missionaries in 1894; Shih-ts'uen in 1895; Chong-kiang and Teh-yang in 1903; Mao-cheo in 1906. In 1895 the Rev. W. W. Cassels, a missionary of the China Inland Mission, was appointed, on the nomination of the C.M.S., Bishop in Western China, and was consecrated on Oct. 18 in that year.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK.

The district which constitutes the sphere of the C.M.S. may be described as an oblong, some 150 miles long and 80 miles broad, covering an area of about 10,000 square miles.

Both Mien-cheo and Chong-pa are on the Fu River, while Mao-cheo is on the Min River, another tributary of the Yang-tse, farther west. The remaining stations lie in the intervening area. Much territory is waiting to be occupied, especially in the north and west of this district.

The work is still for the most part directly evangelistic, and is carried on by means of meetings in preaching-rooms, lantern lectures, receiving the people in guest-halls and visiting them in their homes, book-shops, and colportage.

The majority of the schools are junior primary day-schools. There are, however, a Diocesan Training Institute at Pao-ning, in which the C.M.S. co-operates with the China Inland Mission, and a Women's School and Boarding-school for boys and girls at Mien-cheo.

The medical work is carried on entirely at dispensaries, of which that at Mien-chuh is under the charge of a qualified doctor.

The work of the Mission is in the hands of Bishop Cassels, thirteen other clergymen, nine laymen, fifteen missionaries' wives, and sixteen other women missionaries. One of the above is a doctor and one a nurse. With these are associated forty-five Chinese Christian lay agents.

Death of Rev. Dr. W. Squibbs.

THE Rev. Dr. W. Squibbs was called to his eternal rest at Southfields on Dec. 5, 1909. A student under the Edinburgh Medical Missionary Association he greatly distinguished himself during his professional training. After a brief residence at Islington College he sailed for Western China in 1896, and was at first assigned to Ngan-hsien, afterwards being transferred to Mien-cheo. He was admitted to deacons' orders by the Bishop of London during furlough in 1901. On his return to China he was located to Mien-chuh, where he laboured until his return to England in May, 1909. His death occurred suddenly of angina pectoris at Southfields, where he had taken a temporary curacy.*

Reinforcements.

The Mission has been reinforced by the Rev. Reginald Charles Taylor, B.A., Emmanuel College, Cambridge, and Ridley Hall, curate of All Saints, Sheffield, a brother of the Rev. H. H. Taylor of this Mission, and of Miss M. J. Taylor, formerly of the Punjab Mission; the Rev. Frederick John Watt, B.Sc., London University, Islington College, and L.Th., Durham University; Miss Jessie Margaret Leete, trained at The Willows, a cousin of Miss E. M. Piffin of the Uganda Mission; and Miss Mildred Eleanor Stewart, trained at The Olives, a daughter of the late Rev. R. W. Stewart, and a sister of the Revs. A. D. and J. R. Stewart, who are working in the South China and Western China Missions respectively. Miss F. P. Schneider, who since 1906 has been working in the Mission in local connexion, has been accepted as a missionary in home connexion. The Committee have accepted the resignations of the Rev. W. Andrews, Mr. E. A. J. Thomas and Miss R. Hudson.

A Boxer outbreak. The Province of Si-Chuan was the scene of a recrudescence of the Boxer movement in the spring of 1909. In the previous year there had been rumours in the Ngan-hsien district that an outbreak was imminent, and on March 13 Tsao-hai-gai, about five miles from Ngan-hsien, was attacked; the houses of the Christians were looted, the mission premises and church were damaged, and the schoolmaster's wife was wounded in twenty-four places, and her child badly cut on the face. A few weeks later another rising occurred near Chong-pa; an out-station was assailed in the middle of the night, and two of the scholars and a man who was sleeping on the mission-premises were killed, and the house was burnt down. Happily the authorities dealt with the matter energetically and the rising spread no further.* It is thought to have been caused by the dissatisfaction of a certain number of the people at the evident determination of the officials to suppress opium-smoking, at the great advance in education and in the construction of railways, and at the increased taxation on almost every possible source of income. The work of the Mission was naturally affected by the outbreak. Visits to the out-stations of the disturbed districts had to be discontinued until it was clear that the danger was over; people who had been more or less in touch with the missionaries drew back for fear lest, in the event of another rising, the Boxers should mistake them for Christians or adherents of the Church; and some of the converts endured petty persecution from their relatives for the same reason.

Pastoral Work. While some, who perhaps might almost have been classed as adherents, thus fell away, the converts, with very few exceptions, stood firm. The faith of the woman (a catechumen) who was so severely wounded seemed even to have been strengthened by what she went through; while another woman, so far from desiring to conceal her faith, on hearing that some women among the Boxers were not imprisoned in the yamen, but remained at an inn, watched over by a couple of soldiers, set off to see them, and earnestly exhorted them to repent and put their trust in God, assuring them of His love and mercy. Again, at Shih-ts'uen, where for a time all sorts of wild rumours of approaching attack were circulated, the evangelist helped others greatly by his quiet faith. Whenever he was asked whether he was alarmed, his reply was, 'I'm not afraid; I have God; He is responsible for me, and I have peace.' A certain number of cases of backsliding are reported, and at one out-station the work received a set-back through the fall of the evangelist, while at another, to which a new agent was appointed in the place of one who was unsatisfactory and slovenly in his conduct of the services, the Church members absented themselves from divine worship when the new worker refused to conform to the old methods. In several parts also of the Mission the observance of Sunday is only partial. The converts attend at the morning service and then spend the rest of the day in their ordinary avocations, and it is said that even while they are at church their assistants carry on their business. The difficulty concerning intervention in behalf of the converts when they get into trouble with the authorities, which was referred to in last year's Report,* continued to be felt. A case occurred in the Sin-tu district which well exemplifies the hardship of the situation in certain circumstances. The Rev. H. H. Taylor wrote in December :—

* The outbreak was fully described in the C.M.S. Gazette, July, 1909, p. 214, and the C.M. Gleaner, ibid., p. 99, where accounts were also given of the initiatory rites of the Boxers. See also C.M. Gleaner, Sept., 1909, p. 142.

'I'm not afraid; I have God.'

A hard case.

During the last few weeks some of our adherents have got into trouble with the mandarin. They have broken the law and are suffering for it. They have appealed to the evangelist and to me for help, but though I tried to avoid needless severity, all I could do was to point out to them the disgrace that they had brought on the name of Christ, exhort them to repentance, and pray with them and for them. It is worth while, however, to notice that these men, though they deserve punishment, suffer more severely than others because they are Christians, or are supposed to be so. Other transgressors of the law can get the leaders of their secret societies or the head-man of their street to stand security for them. But no one will stand surety for these men. 'Go to your pastor,' they say. We, however, forbid our evangelists to meddle in such matters, and urr position as foreigners precludes us from doing anything. If, however, we did speak a word, it would most likely be effectual, but by so doing colour would be given to the slander that we interfere in law cases. To take a case in point. A Mr. Feng, of Han-cheo, in common with a number of other innkeepers, had his inn closed for keeping bad characters in it. The new mandarin made a raid on the place, and seeing suspicious characters there, had the man beaten and closed his inn. Some other inns suffered in the same way. These inns, however, are now opened. The innkeepers have got friends to stand surety for them. Mr. Feng, however, being a hsioh iu (catechumen), cannot get anyone to undertake his case. 'You have your pastor,' they say; 'let him speak to the mandarin for you.' This, however, with every sympathy for the man, I cannot do. If I did I should prevent an injustice, but I should be acting contrary to international law as I understand it.

Over against these instances of difficulty and trial must be put the liberality shown by some of the converts in contributing towards the upkeep of the churches, and the simple faith displayed in several cases, e.g., by an old woman who, when speaking about her funeral, said, 'I do not want any one to open the road for me' (referring to the custom of paying a priest to open the road for the soul after death); 'I trust the Lord Jesus and am not afraid.' Besides the ordinary methods adopted in pastoral work use was made of special services for the Christians, which were held for several days in succession at some of the stations.

Educational Work.

Male agents for the C.M.S. Mission are trained at the Diocesan Training College at Pao-ning, while provision for the training of C.M.S. Bible-women is made at the Women's School at Mien-cheo, where systematic instruction is also given to other women who appear likely to profit by it. In addition a ten days' school for Bible-women was held at Mien-chuh, and a similar opportunity was given at Chong-pa to the mission evangelists. The only secondary schools are the Boarding-schools for boys and girls at Mien-cheo; these at present are on a small scale, but six of the twenty-five girls have been admitted to the catechumenate. The number of pupils in the primary schools shows a slight increase. Nineteen of them are catechumens, and the teacher of the boys' school at Shih-ts'uen, who knew but little of Christianity when he took up the post, displays great keenness to learn all he can about the 'doctrine,' and exercises a good influence over those under his charge. One of the senior boys at Chong-pa was baptized, and also a former pupil.

Medical Work.

The medical work is carried on entirely at dispensaries, only one of which, that at Mien-chuh (where, however, a regular medical mission is being established), is under a fully qualified doctor. The simple remedies which are used at most of the stations are much appreciated by the people, and serve to bring the missionaries in contact with many whom they might not otherwise reach. Some of those who originally visited the dispensaries for treatment continued to attend the services after their ailments were cured, and at Shih-ts'uen a young soldier who had been treated for a slight injury showed a marked interest in the Gospel. Mr. T. Caldwell says of him: 'If in China there are sudden conversions his is a case in point. He was the most easily taught man I have met, and from the first he had a clear spiritual perception; he never seemed to tire of studying his Bible.' *

A 'sudden conversion.'

Evangelistic Work.

Although, as already intimated, the evangelistic work was materially affected by the Boxer troubles, yet these brought with them some compensation in that they led to friendly relations with the mandarin at Shih-ts'uen and to the entrance of the Gospel into his yamen. There was little sign of any general hostility towards the missionaries. Lantern lectures were given in several temples without demur on the part of the Chinese; numbers of visitors were received in the guest-halls; at the time of the city-god festival at Mien-cheo crowds of women listened to the 'Old, Old Story,' and were informed by the Christians who were assisting that the missionaries were 'sign-posts' to point out the heavenly road; while in the villages as well as the cities there were often large gatherings, attracted sometimes merely by curiosity to see the foreign ladies or the mechanical toys which they had brought, but willing to pay some attention to the Gospel message. At Chong-kiang students of the Government High School and of the School for Police Cadets were reached, and a class was set on foot for young Chinese ladies, who are forbidden by their rules of etiquette to attend any place of public worship. A new out-station was opened from Sin-tu at Kin-tang, the centre of an extensive district eighty English miles in length and containing thirty-two market towns, and another is being occupied in the Mao-cheo district. There are many other opportunities for extension. Song-pan, on the borders of Tibet, where the Society for ten years has had a mission-house but has not been able to place any agent, was visited for a few days, but then the missionaries had to leave, much to the disappointment of the friendly inhabitants; in the region around Chong-pa calls came from a number of mountain villages; and Mr. E. A. Hamilton of Sin-tu speaks of wonderful opportunities, but also, alas! of 'opportunities that are lost to us, because we cannot avail ourselves of them.'

* An account of some of the patients at Mien-chuh was given in Mercy and Truth, Feb., 1910, p. 53.

'Sign-posts' to point out the heavenly road.

The readiness to give a patient hearing to the Gospel does not necessarily imply a general acceptance of it. 'Approval is usually given, but there is apparently no conviction,' is the verdict of one missionary; and another, telling of the presence of many outsiders at the services, adds, 'There is an unwillingness to come for definite instruction.' Nevertheless there were a good many inquirers and catechumens. Twenty-two persons were received into the catechumenate at Chong-pa and twenty at Ngan-hsien; among the latter were an old blind woman who was first influenced at a feast given a few years ago to the poor. At Sin-tu a great change was seen in the mother of one of the Christians. Mr. E. A. Hamilton writes:—

Inquirers.

> She was steeped in idolatry and all kinds of queer practices. Women with ailments used to come to her to have her charm their pains away, and she observed hours, both night and day, when she used to chant the praises of her special gods. After much persuasion we got her to visit us here, and it was commonly said, 'If they can get hold of her heart it will indeed show forth God's power.' To our great joy she has given up these practices and has returned home, and the neighbours all say, 'Why, after that visit to the Gospel-hall your words are the same as your son's.'

There were some interesting inquirers at Chong-kiang also. A man whose wife and son were already catechumens destroyed his idols, and a woman gave up her Buddhist beads and the indentures showing how long she had kept her vegetarian vow, at which temples she was to worship, and the seasons at which she was to attend festivals.* Some adult baptisms are reported from most of the stations. Mrs. Cheng, whose story was narrated at length in last year's Report,† was received into the visible Church at Chong-kiang, together with another woman; at Sin-tu, an old lady of seventy-seven years of age, who was scarcely fit to attend the service, and who, when asked whether she would be able to be present, replied, 'I must come even if I have to crawl'; at Shih-ts'uen a graduate, the father of the master of the Boys' Boarding-school at Mien-cheo, who had long been under instruction; and at Hua-kiai-tsi, one of the Ngan-hsien out-stations, a woman of whom Miss S. E. Bryers (now Mrs. R. A. Whiteside) says:—

Converts.

A marvellous insight into the Gospel.

She was baptized privately just before her death. She was only a believer of fifteen months, but she had a marvellous insight from the very first into the spirit of the Gospel, while her thirst for knowledge was a joy and delight to me. Being able to read, she read her Bible by herself, marking the difficult passages for me to explain to her when I came. Not only was she a power among the other women, but having been a devout Buddhist herself previously, she sought to influence the many Buddhist women of the place.

The total number of adults baptized in the Mission during the year was eighty-five.

* Further details about these inquirers at Chong-kiang will be found in the C.M.S. Gazette, Feb., 1910, p. 52.

JAPAN MISSIONS.

THE PAST HISTORY.

For 230 years, in consequence of the political intrigues of the Jesuit missionaries in the sixteenth century, Japan was practically closed to the outer world. In 1853 the long-sealed Empire began to open to European influences, and since that time the country has made most extraordinary progress in the adoption of Western civilization. Still more recent is the toleration now fully accorded to Christian effort. In 1889 a new Constitution, formed somewhat on the lines of that of our own land, was promulgated. At the first General Election under this Constitution, held in 1890, fourteen Christians were elected to seats in the House of Representatives; and a Christian was subsequently appointed Speaker. In 1899 new treaties came into operation by which the country was thrown completely open to foreigners.

American missionaries arrived in 1859, but for several years they could do scarcely any direct evangelistic work. In 1869, just after the wonderful revolution which restored power to the Mikado, the first C.M.S. missionary landed at Nagasaki. He also could only use quiet and indirect methods of making known the Gospel, and the few converts vouchsafed to his labours were baptized secretly. Since 1873 the Mission has been gradually extended and strengthened. In HONDO, the Main Island, Osaka was occupied in 1873; Tokyo, 1874; Matsuye, 1888; Gifu, 1890; Fukuyama, 1891; Hamada, 1893; Hiroshima and Toyohashi, 1896. Nagoya, previously worked by the Wycliffe College, Toronto, Mission, became a C.M.S. station in 1896; Yonago was occupied in 1902; Sakai, 1904; Kure, 1907; Saigo, 1908; and Choshi, 1909. In SHIKOKU, Tokushima was occupied in 1888. In KIU-SHIU, Nagasaki was occupied in 1869; Kumamoto and Fukuoka, 1888; Kagoshima, 1895; Nobeoka, 1897; Kokura, 1898; Taketa, 1906. In HOKKAIDO, Hakodate was occupied in 1874; Kushiro, 1889; Sapporo, 1892; Otaru, 1897; Muroran, 1907; and Asahigawa, 1909.

Arrangements were made by Archbishop Tait for the establishment of an English Bishopric in Japan, and his successor, Archbishop Benson, nominated the Rev. A. W. Poole, C.M.S. missionary in South India, to be the first Bishop. He was consecrated October 18, 1883; but in the mysterious providence of God he was permitted to labour for a few months only; he died in July, 1885. He was succeeded by Bishop Edward Bickersteth, of the Cambridge Delhi Mission, son of the then Bishop of Exeter. In 1893 the Committee undertook, on the invitation of Bishop Bickersteth, to support two new Bishops for the southern and northern islands respectively. Accordingly, in 1894, and 1896, the Rev. H. Evington and the Rev. P. K. Fyson, C.M.S. missionaries of twenty and twenty-two years' experience in this Mission, were consecrated—the former Bishop in Kiu-Shiu, and the latter Bishop in Hokkaido; they retired in 1909 and 1908 respectively. In 1909 Dr. A. Lea, a missionary of the Canadian C.M.S., was consecrated Bishop in Kiu-Shiu, and Dr. W. Andrews, a C.M.S. missionary, Bishop in Hokkaido. In 1894 Bishop Bickersteth agreed with Bishop McKim, of the American Episcopal Church, upon a division of the Main Island into the dioceses of North and South Tokyo, Kyoto and Osaka. Bishop Awdry was appointed to the diocese of Osaka in 1896, and was transferred to South Tokyo on the death of Bishop Bickersteth in 1897, being succeeded at Osaka by Bishop Foss, of the S.P.G., which Society undertook to provide their stipends. Dr. Awdry retired in 1908, and has been succeeded by Dr. Boutflower. Bishop Partridge, of the Protestant Episcopal Church of America, was consecrated to the diocese of Kyoto in 1900.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK.

The Society's work in Japan is carried on in three sections. One comprises the stations on the Main Island and the island of Shikoku; another those on the island of Kiu-Shiu; and the third, those in Hokkaido.

I. The chief stations on the Main Island are Osaka, the centre of native trade in Southern and Western Japan; Fukuyama, to the west; Hiroshima, a large city on the Inland Sea; Kure, a naval port, a few miles distant; Hamada, the chief town of the Western Province of Iwami; and Matsuye and Yonago to the north-east. Tokushima is on the island of Shikoku, and Saigo on the Oki Islands. All these are in the diocese of Osaka. In the diocese of South Tokyo, Tokyo, the largest city in the Empire and the seat of the Emperor's Government, is occupied, as also are Gifu, Nagoya and Toyohashi, to the west, and Choshi to the east.

The educational institutions include a Divinity School, the Momoyama School for boys and the Bishop Poole Memorial School for girls at Osaka, a Bible-women's Training Home at Nagoya, and a Training Home and School for the Blind at Gifu. There are Hostels for Chinese students at Tokyo.

Evangelistic work throughout Japan is prosecuted largely by means of English and other classes. Public meetings of an evangelistic character are regularly held at the Whidborne Hall, Tokyo, the Warren Memorial Hall, Osaka, and at all the stations and out-stations; special services are frequently conducted in, or in connexion with, the various churches; and preaching tours are made in the country districts as opportunity offers.

II. In Kiu-Shiu, Nagasaki, Fukuoka and Kokura, to the north, Kumamoto and Taketa, to the east, and Kagoshima, in the south of the island, are the stations.

III. In Hokkaido, Hakodate, Sapporo and Kushiro are the chief stations, the last-named in the east of the island. There is an Ainu Girls' Home at Sapporo for boarders attending Government schools.

The staff engaged in the Mission consists of twenty-six European clergy, twenty-four Japanese clergy, twenty-five missionaries' wives and fifty other women missionaries. The Japanese lay teachers and evangelists number 157.

Semi-centennial of Protestant Missions in Japan.

On May 2, 1859, the first Protestant missionary to Japan, the Rev. J. Liggins, of the American Episcopal Church, landed at Nagasaki. The Semi-centennial of the event was celebrated in Tokyo during the year under review by a Conference which lasted from October 5 to 10. In a paper read before the Conference by the Rev. Dr. Imbrie, of the American Presbyterian Mission, in which the vicissitudes of the work were traced, he described the broad results of the half-century of effort in the following terms:—

> Fifty years ago notice-boards were standing on the highways declaring Christianity a forbidden religion; to-day those same notice-boards are seen standing in the museum in Tokyo as things of historical interest. Fifty years ago religious liberty was a phrase not yet minted in Japan; to-day it is written in the Constitution of the Nation. Less than fifty years ago the Christian Scriptures could be printed only in secret; to-day Bible Societies scatter them far and wide without let or hindrance. Fifty years ago there was not a Protestant Christian in Japan; to-day they are to be found among the members of the Imperial Diet, the judges in the courts, the professors in the Imperial University, the editors of influential newspapers, the officers of the army and navy. Even forty years ago there was not an organized Church in all Japan; to-day there are synods and conferences and associations with congregations dotting the Empire from the Hokkaido to Formosa.*

Statistics of Protestant Christianity.

Descending to detail, Dr. Imbrie gave the number of Protestant Christians in Japan as 75,000, with many more allied to them by conviction, if not by confession, and the number of men ordained to the ministry as exceeding 500. He said that there were some 200 congregations financially independent and paying the salaries of their pastors; about 1,500 other congregations; and nearly 1,200 Sunday-schools with some 90,000 teachers and scholars; and that the contributions of the Churches in 1908 amounted to 260,000 yen.†

* Dr. Imbrie's paper was printed in full in Church Missionary Review, Dec., 1909, pp. 754–8.

† The value of a yen is from 2*s.* to 2*s.* 1*d.*

But the progress of Christianity is not to be measured alone by the number of Church members. A correspondent of the Times has quoted with approval the observation of a missionary that 'if there are less than 200,000 professing Christians in Japan, there are more than a million educated Japanese who think in terms of Christian ethics, and who try to live up to them more truly than many millions of professing Christians in the West'; and several incidents have recently occurred which point to the hold which Christianity is gaining in the Empire. It is seen in the recognition by the Japanese of the social work of Christian Missions.* It appears in the striking fact, mentioned by Bishop Ingham, that an English lady, a Christian by conviction as well as profession, is a member of the Crown Prince's household for teaching purposes. It is shown by the readiness with which Bibles are bought by the priests of Buddhist and Shinto temples, as well as by the people in general.† It is witnessed by the remarkable opening in a Buddhist Theological College near Gifu, where the Rev. H. Woodward teaches once a week and generally has four priests and about twenty students listening to an exposition of the Bible. And it is seen in the prescription of 'religion' to one of his male patients by a prominent non-Christian Japanese doctor, and his recommendation of Christianity as best for the purpose. Truly, as one missionary remarks, 'The leaven of Christianity is spreading.'

Signs of the spread of Christianity.

Bible-teaching in a Buddhist Theological College.

At the same time it is useless to refuse to recognize that as yet but a comparatively small proportion of the people profess and call themselves Christians. Not long since, when inquiry was made of 409 students as to their religion, four declared themselves to be Christians, fifteen Buddhists, one a Confucian, one a Shintoist, forty-six atheists, 260 agnostics, and the remainder had not made up their minds as to what they believed; while at a recent meeting of headmasters of middle and other schools, when the opinion was expressed that the teaching of ethics was insufficient, there appeared to be no disposition to look abroad for that which should supply the lack, but it was suggested that the Shinto priests should be invited to perform some ceremony on the great occasion of the year when the Emperor's portrait is unveiled. There are, of course, many who have heard about the Saviour but have refused to accept Him, but there are numbers also—30,000,000, it is said, i.e. two-thirds of the whole population—who are entirely unreached by Christian effort, while the villages and small towns, in which the great majority of the population reside, are almost untouched by the Gospel.‡ Some of the fields in the occupation of the C.M.S. are sadly undermanned, and reinforcements are urgently needed in the Kiu-Shiu and Hokkaido Jurisdictions.*

30,000,000 people unreached by Christian effort.

* The testimony of Baron Kanda, a member of a Japanese Commercial Commission to the United States, on this head will be found in the Church Missionary Review, Dec., 1909, p. 767.

But there appears to be another cause, besides the lack of missionary effort, for the somewhat slow progress of Christianity in the Empire. The General Review of the Central Japan Mission says :—

Difficulties in the way of confession of Christ.

'The hindrances which the social conditions in Japan present to the acceptance of the Gospel,' so writes a missionary of experience, 'arise chiefly from the social organization. It is without doubt the most closely knit communalistic system on a large scale that the world has ever seen. For many hundreds of years the Japanese have lived under a system by which "personality has been wholly suppressed by coercion," the life of every individual being so ordered by the will of the rest as to render free action, free speaking, free thinking out of the question.' The same writer continues : 'Of course, that was old Japan. Feudalism was abolished by law a generation ago, but you cannot destroy feudalism in a generation. We have it to-day in every family, in every public office, yes, in every church in this land. In theory the individual has become free ; in practice he is not much more free than his ancestors.'

We quote the above statement as giving some idea of actual conditions in this country, so far, at least, as the greater part of the adult population is concerned, but we do not forget that ideas savouring strongly of individualism are increasingly finding expression, and in some aspects this has been especially noticeable since the beginning of the recent war with Russia.

Mention should also be made of a question perplexing the minds of all thinking Christians to-day ; we refer to the difficult question of the 'Worship of Ancestors,' or 'Commemoration of the Departed,' which forms an integral part of Japanese family life. Many a man is hindered from confessing Christ in baptism because of difficulties in this matter.

A critical time.

The lack of foreign missionaries, which has been referred to, is the more to be regretted in that the present is in some respects a critical time for Christianity in Japan. Miss D. S. Wynne-Willson, of Nagoya, writes of the situation as follows :—

A recognized fact which is always being brought home to one here is the extremely complicated nature of the work just now. Problems of Church government, of the relations between missionaries and Japanese workers, of backsliding Christians, of leaking churches, of a population of which the upper stratum, from which our Christians are mostly drawn, is continuously moving, and the lower stratum is either sunk in superstition or hardened through money-making, problems of women's social position and of the place of Japanese women workers in the work of the future—all acute, thorny to touch, complicated with age, long custom and methods of thought—these questions rise at every point of one's work. To be a missionary in Japan just now is a tremendous responsibility, and needs, indeed, a double portion of the spirit of wisdom and understanding.

The Rev. J. Hind, the Secretary for the work in Kiu-Shiu, confirms Miss Wynne-Willson's view. He says :—

Judging from reports, Christianity in Japan seems to be going through a crisis. Doubts on some cardinal doctrines are prevalent, owing to the strong influence of Unitarian and materialistic views set forth by some men of power, and doubtless many will be affected, at any rate for a time. Prayer, however, here and at home, will have much to do with the final results. Many say that Japan will only accept a Japanicized Christianity. What is needed is the simple preaching of Christ, not of Christianity, as is, alas! too common.

* See infra, pp. 234–5.

It is a cause for thankfulness that this need of which Mr. Hind speaks is increasingly becoming recognized by the more thoughtful and spiritual Japanese themselves. Miss H. J. Worthington refers to a Japanese pastor, not of the Nippon Sei-ko-kwai, as affirming that missionaries of spiritual rather than of intellectual power are wanted in the Empire, and she adds :—

Simple Bible-teaching 'is what sticks.'

I was greatly struck by hearing the Methodist and Presbyterian pastors at Kure lately say to each other that the simpler teaching, full of the Bible, is what really sticks and holds people. One remarked that it was not his deep studies in theology which remained with him, but the simple teaching which first led him. The Presbyterian said that their famous leader in Tokyo, whose preaching is crammed full of the Bible, is filling his church to overflowing nowadays; while the leading Congregational orator seems to have lost his hold and preaches his New Theology to an emptying church.

Literary Work.

Much importance attaches at the present time to the provision of good, pure and, above all, Christian literature. A few years ago philosophical treatises were in request in Japan. Then interest was transferred to mysticism and subjective religion, followed by a reaction and a swing of the pendulum to the opposite extreme; but this now appears to be gradually dying out and giving place once more to a spirit of religious inquiry. At the book-lending shops novels have the greatest measure of popularity. Those by Japanese authors are most sought after, and they are often 'of an erotic character, treating of free love and kindred themes in the spirit of realistic "naturalism" after the fashion of the French realists, but with less restraint and delicacy.' The C.M.S. missionaries do not take a prominent part in the provision of Christian literature, but the Rev. J. Hind reports that in 1909 new editions were issued of his translations of Trench on the Parables and The Practice of the Presence of God, and that the third and final volume of Edersheim's Old Testament History was printed, and also a Commentary on St. Matthew's Gospel. He spent some time during the year in revising a translation of Turton's Truth of Christianity, made by a Tokyo man at his instigation. The Rev. C. T. Warren brought out six picture leaflets, each containing a pointed Gospel message, and continued to edit the monthly evangelistic paper the Light of the World, which has an increasing circulation. One of the masters of the Momoyama School, Osaka, translated Girdlestone's Why I believe in Jesus Christ, and the Rev. P. Y. Matsui, of Osaka Divinity School, rendered into Japanese two lectures on Lessons from English Church History which were delivered by Bishop Ingham during his visit to Japan.

Consecration of Bishops Andrews and Lea.

The episcopal vacancies in the dioceses of Hokkaido and Kiu-Shiu have been filled by the appointment of the Revs. Walter Andrews and Arthur Lea respectively. They were consecrated in Westminster Abbey on St. Andrew's Day (November 30), 1909. Dr. Andrews was a C.M.S. missionary in Japan for twenty-five years from 1878, and for the greater part of that time was stationed at Hakodate. Dr. Lea was a missionary of the Canadian C.M.S. Since 1897 he has laboured first at Gifu and latterly in Tokyo.

Reinforcements.

Besides Bishop Andrews, the Mission has been reinforced by Misses Ethel Agnes Carlyle and Inanda Lindley, both trained at The Olives. The latter offered to the Society through the South Africa C.M. Association. The names of the Revs. Noriyuki Honda and Paul Bujiro Nagano have been added, on their ordination, to the list of Japanese clergy connected with the Society, and that of the Rev. K. Kuroki, who worked under the Society for a year from his ordination in 1898, has been restored. On the other hand, the following names have been removed: the Rev. A. R. Fuller (who has since been appointed on the staff of C.M.S. Organizing Secretaries at home), after twenty-seven years' service; Dr. W. W. Colborne, after twenty years' service; Mrs. C. F. Warren, widow of the late Archdeacon C. F. Warren, who went to Japan as Miss S. L. Fawcett in 1890, and who continues to reside there; Miss C. L. Burnside; and Miss K. M. Peacocke.

and Mrs. Poole.

Mrs. A. W. Poole, the widow of Bishop Poole, the first English Bishop in Japan, died at Eastbourne on August 25, 1909. She was married in 1877, the year in which her husband sailed for South India, where he worked as Rugby-Fox master in the Noble School, Masulipatam, until invalided home three years later.

A missionary decorated by the Emperor.

The Rev. J. Batchelor, who has laboured for thirty years among the Ainu, has been decorated by the Emperor of Japan with the Fourth Order of the Sacred Treasure 'on the merits of your self-sacrificing labours among the Ainu, and of your contributions to the knowledge of the Ainu language and traditions.' Mr. Batchelor's translational and literary labours have also been recognized by the Archbishop of Canterbury, who has conferred on him the Lambeth D.D. degree.

I. CENTRAL JAPAN.

Educational Work.

Divinity school.

SOME sickness prevailed among the students at the Divinity School, Osaka, and one or two who gave much promise had to discontinue their course in consequence. Three women, the first to complete their course at the Bible-women's Training Institution at Nagoya, or the Holy Messengers' Teaching Hall, as it is called in Japanese, left in the spring of 1909 for various posts under the C.M.S., and nine were admitted, making a total of thirteen in the institution at the close of the year. One of the new students, who attends during the day and does not board at the institution, is a daughter of a prominent official at Nagoya, 'absolutely selfless and humble,' but 'perfectly fearless when it is a question of standing out for a principle.' The three senior students were sent out for six weeks' practical training in the autumn, and good reports of them were received from the missionaries under whom they worked. Steps were not only taken to equip future workers in the Mission, but also to help the present agents, and two summer schools were held in September—one at Nara, for the clergy and catechists, attended also by many of the British and Colonial missionaries, and the other at Nagoya, for Bible-women. Bible-women's Training Institution.

A marked improvement in their attention to Christian duties was seen among the Christian boys, who number fifty-five out of a total of 450 lads, in the Momoyama School at Osaka, and very few of them gave any anxiety as to the genuineness of their profession. Ten of the lads as well as two old boys received baptism, and between thirty and forty were under preparation for that rite. The morning Bible-classes were well attended.* Momoyama School.

There was a decrease in the number of girls at the Bishop Poole Memorial School, which also is at Osaka, due partly to the closing of the Lower Secondary Department, partly to the general commercial depression in the city, and partly to a cause which affected girls' high schools all over the country. Miss K. A. S. Tristram says:— Bishop Poole Memorial School.

> Four or five years ago it was the thing for a girl to go to a high school whether she were studious or not, and whether the education was thought likely to be useful to her afterwards or not. The little knowledge, and far more the freedom given to the modern schoolgirl, have proved dangerous things, and parents, who hoped that the education, with ethics thrown in, would work wonders in character, complain of conceit and wilfulness, and in an appalling number of cases the freedom and wilfulness have meant being led astray into the evil abounding in every city of the land. One can hardly wonder at the pendulum swinging, and many parents thinking it wiser to keep their daughters at home after the primary school education is over.

The school obtained the Government recognition which it was mentioned in last year's Report † as seeking; the recognition does not interfere with perfect freedom for Christian teaching in school hours to all pupils. Thirty girls graduated from the school in the spring of 1909, five entering the Bible-women's Training Institution at Nagoya, four taking up mission work elsewhere, and three contemplating a course of training in the kindergarten school at the town named. Nearly all of these belonged to the boarding-house, which was full notwithstanding the decrease in the number of pupils; the day-girls who graduated were less satisfactory, and some of them, though living in Osaka, seldom attended the Church services. There were fewer baptisms in the school than usual; not that there were fewer pupils desiring to be admitted into the visible Church, but because the parents, without whose leave it is impossible for the girls to be baptized, were less willing to give their consent. All but two of the teachers are now Christians, two more having accepted Christ during the year. Of one of these, who was an agnostic when she was first appointed to the school,* 'the most thoughtful Japanese woman I have ever come across,' Miss Tristram writes :—

* A description of these Bible-classes, attendance at which is voluntary, was given in the C.M. Gleaner, Sept., 1909, p. 142, and some notes on the school by Bishop Ingham appeared in the C.M.S. Gazette, Nov., p. 328.

Baptism of two teachers.

The great change seemed to come when she could really accept the miraculous Birth and Resurrection of Christ, which had been great stumbling-blocks. She said then it was as if wonderful light came immediately to her soul, and for the first time she accepted the Bible as the revelation of God speaking to her individually. It was before this she had said one day when we were speaking of the great salvation, 'But if these things are true, how can Christians sit still? Why are they not always telling it out?' She could not take them as true then. Now she told me God Himself was speaking to her and showing her how the answers to all her questionings were in Himself and in His book.

The next week there was, what one had been sure must come, real conviction of sin. She asked for extra time when school for the day was over, for she had something on her mind, and could be silent no longer. I thought of the time a few months before when she said she had no sense of sin at all, that education should make people strong enough to keep themselves straight. She now had a deep sense of sin before God, and one thing specially on her mind she told me of in detail, and how for five years it had been on her conscience, though she had tried to forget it. It was something concerning the principal of a former school, and she had a feeling she ought to confess it to him, but it was an intensely difficult, humiliating thing to do, as I could quite understand from the nature of it. Most humbly she confessed her many sins to God, and I believe then and there really trusted in Christ's atoning work for forgiveness, and went home with the resolve to write a letter of confession about this one thing. Two days later, however, she told me her husband had advised her to wait till she knew more, and could explain all about her faith, so she was putting it off, but she said she was not at rest about it. That very day, however, the letter went—the confession, followed by the simple statement that she now believed in God, that He had forgiven her sin through Christ, and that nothing but His power could have made her confess.

The case of the other teacher referred to was very different. She joined the staff in April, having heard nothing of Christ before, and at once received the good seed in an honest and true heart. A new building was opened for the Blind School at Gifu, which has now been carried on for fifteen years. Four of the girls were baptized, and two men and a girl were expected to be baptized in December.*

The ordinary methods of evangelistic work, which were described in some detail in last year's Report,† were pursued. It sounds paradoxical, but it is almost correct to say that 'special' efforts are among the ordinary methods, but such 'special' efforts have been common in Central Japan. In 1909 the Semi-centennial of Protestant Missions in the Empire was celebrated not only by the Conference at Tokyo which has already been noted, but also by 'special' meetings at a number of centres. These were well attended, and at several places a certain number of people gave in their names as desirous of learning more about Christianity, but unhappily, at Kure at all events, their interest soon subsided. Special evangelistic meetings, not in connexion with the Semi-centennial, were also held at Yonago, Matsuye, Tokushima (on the occasion of the twentieth anniversary of its promotion to the dignity of city rank) and Muya.‡ Crowds of people assembled to listen to what was said, and tracts were freely accepted. Moreover, advantage was taken of one or two exceptional opportunities which presented themselves. Thus at Muya Miss J. Mackie was invited in the summer to speak at a meeting of the regimental ladies on 'England,' but it was stipulated that she should not mention religion. She replied that she could not assent to any such condition. Later on the restriction was withdrawn, and she spoke on English life, saying that St. John iii. 16 and the fifth Commandment were the basis on which it rested. Now and again, too, the missionaries had facilities afforded them for delivering the Gospel message in Government schools.§ One, when paying his customary visit to a middle school, which has some 500 students, in order to teach English,|| found that the winter literary and rhetoric meeting was being held. After a number of the boys and others had spoken, he was asked by the headmaster to give a short address on any subject he chose, and accordingly he spoke on Heb. ii. 3. Once more, at the request of the local authorities and of the Archbishop of the Russian Greek Church, the Rev. P. T. Arato conducted a dedication service for a little cemetery on the island of Saigo where were interred the bodies of some Russian sailors which had been washed ashore. More than 500 persons were present, including all the chief officials of the island, and after conducting the service Mr. Arato delivered an address. Of another unique opportunity the Rev. H. Woodward, of Gifu, wrote in November :—

In the beginning of May there was a remarkable funeral service in Gifu church. The daughter of one of the officials of the court-house had died in a hospital some distance away, and her mother being a Christian, and acting as nurse during her daughter's illness, had led her to accept and trust in Jesus as her Saviour. She had passed away peacefully, 'rejoicing in hope.' The church was packed, almost entirely with officials, mostly of senior rank, viz., those appointed by the Cabinet and the appointments reported to the Emperor.

Funerals in Japan give good opportunities for preaching the Gospel to the heathen relatives and friends of the deceased, and this is in perfect harmony with the spirit of the service, for one is giving an exposition of the grounds of the hope with which the deceased departed this earthly life. I gave half an hour's sermon on the text, 'I am the Resurrection and the Life: he that believeth in Me, though he were dead, yet shall he live.' To this congregation of men educated with regard to the things of this world, but with no settled religion aud no definite philosophy of life, I expounded some of the passages of Holy Scripture declaring Jesus to be the Son of God, and showed the meaning of His life and death, with the Resurrection as the crowning proof of, and the historical testimony to, His authority to be the One sent by God to reveal His will to men.

Two days afterwards, as a result of this service, I received a call from one of the officials who was in great trouble of mind. He said he had been contemplating suicide, and would most probably have carried it out, had not that hope of life expressed in the funeral sermon given him the idea that there might be something for him still to live for. His incipient faith was greatly strengthened the following week, for the cloud he had been under passed away and he was called to some higher work in a neighbouring town. I introduced him to the church there.

Public preaching was regularly carried on in the ordinary course of the work, and new efforts to reach the women more effectually were made by appointing a Bible-woman to work at the Whidborne Hall, Tokyo, and by opening a women's meeting-house at Tokushima near a tobacco factory where 600 women are employed. In some cases the public meetings appear to have suffered from the frequency of the 'special' meetings which have been described. On this head the Rev. W. P. Buncombe writes :—

Danger of 'special' efforts.

It seems to me that there is a great deal of dulness and deadness apparent in the ordinary Church work and daily mission work. The Sunday services are very badly attended as compared with past years, and we have to work hard to get our mission-halls filled as in times past. I am aware that waves of indifference and then of enthusiasm come over the Japanese alternately, but I think that the present dulness is in part due to the number of large special efforts that have been made, such as missions and meetings addressed by visitors with well-known names or got up to celebrate special occasions. These ought, of course, to result in a deepened interest all round, but such is not always the case.

Individual work.

Work among individuals was diligently prosecuted in various forms. Visits were paid systematically in the military and naval hospitals at Hiroshima and Kure respectively, resulting in a favourable reception of Christian workers by many former patients in distant parts of the country, and also in the homes of people belonging to all ranks of society. The visiting list of Miss D. S. Wynne Willson at Nagoya included wives of judges, army officers, doctors, town councillors, schoolmasters great and small, bank clerks and business men of all descriptions, shopkeepers of all kinds, farmers, carpenters, commercial travellers, blacksmiths and policemen. Much was done, too, by means of English classes for doctors, medical students, policemen, higher normal students, judges' wives, hospital nurses, etc., and by cooking classes; while among those who visited the missionaries for individual teaching were the director of police in one province, professors of a medical school, and so on.

Children's meetings.

Mention must also be made of the work among the young. Children's meetings were well attended—at one, held at Tokushima, 1,000 were present—and Sunday-schools throughout the Empire received a great impetus, partly through the visit of some enthusiasts on the subject. Fruit of the teaching given was seen in the evident realization by the children of the power of prayer to God, and in three girls, former Sunday-school pupils, placing themselves under instruction for baptism. The work among the young goes farther than appears at first sight, for the children carry to their homes the truths of which they hear; while at Hiroshima some young men and, for a time, one or two Buddhist priests might have been seen listening to the address.

A station opened at Choshi.

A new station was opened at Choshi, a large fishing town east of Tokyo, with a population of about 40,000, where Miss L. A. Galgey took up her residence in May, 1909; and Shimonoseki, the chief city of the most western prefecture of the Main Island, 140 miles from Hiroshima, was occupied as an out-station.

It is difficult to give any adequate description of the results of evangelistic work so varied in its character. One missionary speaks of the future as 'bright with hope,' and another sums up her experiences by saying, 'If one considers numbers merely, the work seems disappointing and progress slow; but there is no doubt that at the present time we are getting a much closer hold on individuals, and regular teaching during the week and definite preparation for baptism form a much larger proportion of our work than was formerly the case.' The statistics given at the end of this chapter show the number of baptisms at each station in the Mission, but certain individual cases call for notice. Among them are those of an ex-school teacher at Hiroshima, a former member of a class for girls, in whom the 'love of Christ conquered and Buddha fell into the background'; at Kure a bluejacket and a woman who had been an earnest believer in one of the modern religious sects, neither Buddhist nor Shinto, which are now so common in Japan; and at Hamada a soldier who was won by a fellow-soldier. The baptisms at Tokushima included those of a high-school girl, a telephone exchange office girl, and a girl from one of the elementary schools, for whom names signifying 'Glory,' 'Goodwill,' and 'Peace' were chosen; while at Tomioka a couple of middle-school students were received into the visible Church.

Passing on to the diocese of South Tokyo, from Tokyo itself comes a deeply interesting story, which is told by Mr. Buncombe as follows:—

On November 14 I had the privilege of baptizing thirteen adults and two children in the house of a Mr. Saita, who lives on the outskirts of Tokyo, in a part called Shimo-Shibuya, which is about five miles from St. Paul's Church. It was exactly one year since on a Saturday night Mr. Saita, passing by our mission-hall (the Whidborne Hall) in the Ginza, was led to come in to listen to what was going on. He was much impressed by what he heard and convicted of sin. The words 'Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved and thine house,' came as a message from God to him, and he said, 'I will believe.' He went home and found a little five-sen (penny) Testament, which his daughter had received when at the Poole Girls' School in Osaka. He stayed up reading this till a late hour that night, and believed and was saved. He then came frequently to the mission-hall and told of the change that had come to him. He belonged to some firm which practised the usual means, not always honest, of carrying on business, but he cut himself loose from them and, in spite of much opposition, purified everything that was wrong in his business and life. This entailed considerable loss for a time. Claiming the salvation of his family he was able at once to lead his wife and daughter to Christ. They got a small organ and began singing hymns and gathered some of the people in the neighbourhood, some of whom began to believe also. He was being prepared for baptism and expected to have been baptized at St. Paul's at Christmas, 1908, but some things the pastor said offended him, and he would not go to the church any more. He then came to think that baptism was not necessary, but acknowledged his mistake after hearing a Bible-reading on baptism I gave one night at the catechumens' meeting. Then he wanted me to baptize him by immersion in some river. Meanwhile he was working and bearing witness everywhere he had an opportunity.

An inquirer purifies his business.

Mr. Saita and his family afterwards removed to Shimo-Shibuya, and there he offered his house for regular meetings. His old mother, an earnest Buddhist, took up her abode with him, and was soon brought to faith in Christ through the teaching she received, backed as it was by the witness afforded by the altered lives of her son and his family. Other candidates for baptism came forward, and thirteen adults, as already stated, were received into the visible Church in November. Among those baptized at Matsuye were two men who died soon afterwards, one exclaiming to his wife just before he passed away, 'It is all by love, the love of God! Don't you forget! Serve Him; you too serve Him!' Three men and two women were baptized at Choshi; and at another place a judge's wife, who had previously read many Buddhist books without deriving any help from them, but who says of the Bible: 'It is a living book and gives me life,' and the wife of an army official. Miss Wynne Willson writes of the last-named lady:—

In the summer Mrs. Toba, my fellow-worker, went to stay a night with them at Tokyo, whither they had removed. The wife was poorly and in bed, and the husband doing everything for her, and attending to the cooking and housework too. His wife said to Toba San, 'Now I know his heart is changed. He never used to be like this to me when I was ill'; and he himself said to Toba San, 'I don't know how it is, but I can't sit still and see my wife get up when she is not fit to. In old days I did not care, but when one believes in Christ everything seems different.' He said it was his wife's sweet, consistent life and his little boy's earnest prayers that had led him, too, to trust in Christ.*

Influence of a wife's consistent life.

Besides those who confessed Christ in baptism there are many others who have been enrolled as catechumens and are under instruction for baptism, and others, again, who are inquirers in a greater or less degree of definiteness. Such are reported from most of the stations, but there is no space for reference to more than a few cases of special interest. From Osaka come tidings of the young wife of an officer to whom, when he was a student, a Testament and Prayer-book had been given by an American Episcopal missionary; she is said to be 'most promising,' and he is 'more than willing' that she should be taught. At Hiroshima a man with whom the missionaries had been in touch in former days returned stricken with a mortal disease. He longed for some sure hope, and appeared to accept Christ as his Saviour. 'Oh!' he gasped out on one occasion, leaning over his Bible, 'if only I had begun to read this ten years ago, how happy I should have been!' Among the inquirers at Yonago were several relatives of a young Christian who passed away. When asked whether he had any anxiety, he replied, 'Yes, there is one thing I am anxious about, and that is that none of you are ready for the heavenly country whither I am certainly going. Do prepare for the future!' His exhortations bore fruit, and his grandmother, father, mother and sister are now earnest seekers after truth. An advertisement in a magazine was the means of bringing the missionaries into touch with some anxious souls. Miss A. Roberts, of Tokyo, narrates the circumstances as follows:—

Inquirers.

Results of an advertisement in a magazine.

During the last month or two I have been much struck by the number of letters I have received through an advertisement in a magazine. These letters show that there are many longing hearts in lonely country places. One letter was received a few days ago from a woman in the north; she is quite unknown to me, but she had seen my name and knew I was a Christian worker in Tokyo. She wrote telling me that a brother of hers had died a short time ago, and that in looking over his things she had found a Bible, which she began to read, and becoming interested in it and feeling that it was a good book, though she could not understand it, she took it to a school-teacher to see if he could help her, but, as he was unable to do so, she made up her mind to write to me. I wrote at once and told her of the work of Christ as plainly as I could, and sent her some papers, and I am hoping to send her more and write again soon.

Opposition from relatives.

In some instances inquirers met with much opposition from their relatives. This was notably the case at Hamada. An officer's wife there was admitted to the catechumenate, but her husband was so teased by his fellow-officers in consequence that he refused to allow her to be baptized or even to attend meetings. Very similar was the lot of the wife of an army doctor, while another official threatened to divorce his wife, who had been admitted to the catechumenate, unless she gave up every connexion with Christ and His Church, and he once went so far as to turn her out of doors. Unhappily she succumbed to the pressure put upon her, and now, to all appearances, is leading the life of a non-Christian.*

Pastoral Work.

The opposition of relatives not only kept some back from baptism, but also led one or two converts to deny their faith in Christ. Thus a school teacher, when a missionary proposed to visit him at his village home, wrote saying that as all his relatives were Buddhists it was impossible for him to remain a Christian, and that he had decided to revert to Buddhism. There were a good many declensions also through marriages with Heathen, while at Toyohashi the lay pastoral agent threw in his lot with a German Universalist Mission.† The converts have much difficulty in the matter of Sunday observance, especially those belonging to the upper and middle classes. Miss E. B. Boulton says :—

> Sunday, being a holiday in Government offices, banks, and most large commercial houses, becomes the day for visiting and pleasure. Parents take their children for excursions or to visit relatives and friends, and thus both church-going in the case of the adult and Sunday-school attendance for the children is seriously interfered with. One lady, a catechumen at Osaka, says that it is almost impossible for her to come to church, for just as she is ready to start one or other of her husband's friends is nearly sure to come in, and then, of course, she must stay to see after their entertainment. Though there are several servants in the house, the mistress is expected to oversee everything at such times.

A good account, however, is given of many of the Christians, and their gifts during the year amounted to 8,999 yen (£937), an increase of more than 11 per cent. over the total for 1908, and of 260 per cent. over that of 1899. At Kure the converts, almost without exception, took boxes for 'Thank-offerings for answered prayer,' and at Matsuye a very poor woman who earns only 3*s*. a month contributed 2*s*. towards the expenses of the Semi-centennial meetings, while a man in great poverty, who found it hard to provide for his family, gave 1*s*. At Tokushima the daughter of a master at the middle school resolved to give up her special luxuries, oranges and cakes, during Lent. Soon afterwards her father received an appointment, and quantities of farewell gifts were sent to him, including a number of the delicacies in question. The mother accordingly suggested that the child need not deny herself any longer, since no outlay of money was required for the oranges and cakes, but the girl replied, 'Mother, the Lord Jesus Christ, in Whom I believe, denied Himself even all food entirely for forty days and forty nights, and won't you let me go on giving up this that I have promised until the end of Lent?' In this connexion it may be recorded that though the Committee have raised the salaries of the Japanese agents so that they may have a living wage, no demand for an increase was ever made by the workers, albeit it had been evident for a good while that with the majority of them it was a hard struggle to make two ends meet.

Work among Chinese students.

The work among Chinese students in Tokyo, of whom there are estimated to be about 3,000, was continued by the Rev. W. H. Elwin. A Bible-class held in his house had an average attendance of between fifteen and twenty, and the little hostel which was opened for the men* had five inmates. Mr. Elwin was privileged to baptize nine men, one of whom started a 'Preaching the Word Society' in the Y.M.C.A. to prepare men for preaching on their return to China, while another was the means of leading two of his companions to Christ. Mrs. Elwin opened a hostel for Chinese girl students. Regarding one of the youngest of the four inmates, but their acknowledged leader, she writes:—

Nine men baptized.

I had got to know her through a former Poole Girls' School student with whom she was sharing a room in a Y.W.C.A. boarding-house. The Japanese girl, herself an earnest Christian, had already had many talks with her on the subject of Christianity, with the result that the Chinese girl's prayers, consisting of repeating the name of Buddha a thousand times every night, were discontinued, and the Buddhist books were left neglected at the bottom of her box. But for some time nothing seemed to take the vacant place in her heart. When she first came to us I used to notice that a little hard look would come into her face whenever I spoke of Christ, and she refused to pray, as it seemed 'ridiculous.' But by degrees the light has been dawning. Once, when in hospital for a slight operation, a Christian Japanese girl friend was visiting her, and on their talking together about Christ, the nurse remarked to the Chinese girl in some surprise, 'Oh, do you belong to the Church?' 'Yes,' she said, simply, 'I am a Christian.' On her return from hospital, at prayers that night she prayed in English, thanking God for bringing her back, and asking Him to help her 'to be kind to everybody.' Her father is a very high official, and much opposed to Christianity. She says that if he knew that she had leanings in that direction he would almost certainly send for her to go home and put a stop to all teaching. So she has not as yet dared to tell him of her faith, and at this early stage I cannot urge it. She is a most gifted girl in every way; she can understand most of the dialects of China, and speaks Japanese like a native and English very fairly well.†

'I am a Christian.'

II. KIU-SHIU.

Pastoral Work.

For the greater part of the year under review there were only two ordained European missionaries to superintend the work at the six stations of the Society in Kiu-Shiu, for the Rev. A. C. Hutchinson was engaged almost exclusively in language study. The consequences were not entirely bad, for the conduct of services and preaching being perforce left more than before to the Japanese brethren, they were enabled to understand better the responsibilities which ordinarily rest upon those in charge of the work, and to appreciate more fully the value of the foreign worker—at all events, less than usual was heard of the approach of an era when the foreigner will no longer be required. It is clear that in Kiu-Shiu that time is still far distant, for the Japanese Church there as a whole is not able to carry on effective evangelistic work without C.M.S. help. Here and there Japanese pastors and laymen are doing what they can. In at least two cases English classes were started by Japanese with a view to enrolling inquirers; at Kagoshima certain young Christian men among the congregation formed themselves into a society for getting hold of young men and lads and for conducting the Sunday-school; at other places isolated Christians set Sunday-schools on foot of their own initiative; and now and again a woman sought to win her neighbours. But there are many who are drones in the hive. Comparatively few of the converts have enough knowledge of the Bible to enable them to teach others properly, and unhappily in not a few cases there appears little desire to study the Scriptures or profit by the means of grace. The Christians are surrounded by many temptations, and 'lack of perseverance and inclination to yield to present conditions, failure to preach Christ positively, and the substitution of a merely ethical Christianity, are too often met with.' On the other hand, at some stations the attendance at the services improved and the Christians seemed to wake up to the necessity of Bible study; while most of those who seceded at Nogata in 1907* rejoined the Church. Miss H. S. Cockram is able to tell of a woman on the island of Tanegashima who walked twenty miles to the port with her, and stayed until the boat sailed, in order to get more teaching and introduce her to some friends in the place; and Miss C. L. Burnside, while recognizing that the Hakata Church is still weak, yet speaks of the 'living faith' shown by some of its members.

Isolated Christians open Sunday-schools.

Evangelistic Work.

The existence of a reaction against Christianity was felt in the evangelistic work. In the country districts, it is true, the people heard gladly; but in the towns the attendance at many, though not all, the classes which were conducted fell off, the work of visiting the people in their homes made but slow progress, and few showed any real desire to listen to the Gospel. The special meetings held at the time of the Semi-centennial of Protestant Missions in Japan brought the missionaries into touch with some new people, but the failure to obtain suitable preaching-places in the Kokura district caused the audiences at the open-air meetings to be small.* There was no increase in the number of girls in the Hostel at Nagasaki, but one of the inmates seemed to be brought to faith in Christ. The work among the children went forward, and one of the adult baptisms of the year, that of the woman already mentioned as accompanying Miss Cockram so as to gain further teaching, was in reality the fruit of Sunday-school work, since she was first led to Christ by her son, a pupil in a Sunday-school.

* See Report, 1907–8, p. 235.

A woman won by a Sunday-school pupil.

The largest ingatherings during the year were in the Kagoshima district—six adults on the island of Tanegashima; seven persons, including an old couple of eighty-two and eighty-four years of age, at a place called Naeshirogawa; and three ladies in other parts of the district. At Kokura a doctor's wife was received into the visible Church, but baptisms were fewer than for many years past, and at Nobeoka a man, whose wife has been a Christian for some time, was baptized together with two of his sons. Four adults were expected to be baptized at Christmas at Omuta, a coal-mining town with a large cotton factory, where Miss F. M. Freeth and the catechist were invited to address the hands and visit the homes of the officials. Most of the stations report some new inquirers as having come forward.†

Baptisms.

III. HOKKAIDO.

Pastoral Work.

On the departure of the Rev. J. Batchelor on furlough in April, 1909, the Society was left with only two male missionaries in Hokkaido, one of whom had not then finished his probation; they had three Japanese clergymen, one in deacon's orders, as colleagues, but the condition of affairs, the Rev. D. Marshall Lang says, was as though 'Christians in Penzance were dependent on the visit of a clergyman from London twice a year at the most for the Sacraments, or those in Cork on one in Belfast who has the whole island to minister to.' But the annual letters received from the Mission show how great is the need of regular pastoral oversight of those who bear the name of Christ. Self-support is said to have gone back, and esprit de corps to be lacking among the converts. At Sapporo the Christians as a whole are 'indifferent and callous'; there is 'such want of love to Christ, such lack of service and of a

An insufficient staff.

'Lack of service.'

* The three hundredth anniversary of the death of Kato Kiyosama, a national hero, was celebrated at Kumamoto during the year. A great concourse of people was attracted, among whom preaching was carried on as opportunity offered, and Christian literature was distributed. Cf. C.M. Gleaner, Nov., 1909, p. 174.

† In the C.M.S. Gazette, Jan., 1910, p. 9, Bishop Ingham refers to a case of great conscientiousness on the part of an inquirer.

feeling of responsibility as regards what a Christian should do and be, such contentment in staying indoors and taking no active part in anything concerning the things of Christ.' All but a few at Muroran 'seem engrossed in business or pleasure.' At Piratori the Bible-woman gave way to dishonesty, and there was a 'general deterioration among all the young women of the village'; at Asahigawa the position is shown by the statement that from eighty to one hundred backsliders were helped in eight months; while at Otaru many of the converts led inconsistent lives and proved stumbling-blocks to others. Miss G. S. Stevenson gives an example. She writes:—

Inconsistencies of Christians a stumbling-block to others.

> The wife of an official, who we are told used to be a seemingly earnest Christian six or seven years ago, helping in the Sunday-school and so on, has shown very plainly that she does not wish to have anything to do with Christianity, though she is generally pleasant enough when we go to visit her. Living near to her is the wife of a clerk, whom we have been visiting for some months at the request of her mother-in-law. This Mrs. K. for a long time appeared to take no real interest in what we taught her, but at last in the spring there seemed to be a change, and she said that she was beginning to understand when she read the Bible by herself. I felt really encouraged, but after a few weeks there was a change again, and I was sure that something had occurred to upset her. As I thought she would probably be more likely to speak openly if my Bible-woman went without me, I sent her alone one day to visit her. The Bible-woman told me what I had been fearing all along, viz., that the lapsed Christian mentioned above, with whom Mrs. K. is intimate, had been scoffing at Christianity, saying that there is no God, and so on. This had, of course, unsettled Mrs. K., and I am sorry to say that she does not seem to have regained the glimmering of faith which she had.

But while the missionaries do not hesitate to show the dark side of the picture, in the hope that it may call forth earnest prayer in behalf of the Japanese Christians, they are able also to mention many bright and cheering incidents. A student at Sapporo was led to inquire by the fact that in his class at an agricultural school were two Christians who, he was conscious, were different—he called them 'broad of heart'—from his other companions, though he could not exactly explain wherein the difference consisted. Other students in that city were earnest in bringing their friends to hear about the Saviour, and some desired to enter the service of the C.M.S.; while in the country districts many of the converts are 'lights which cannot be hid' and 'give light to all that are in the house.' At other stations also there were not a few who walked consistently—a man in the Muroran district, converted while in prison and now zealous in preaching the Gospel; a schoolmaster in a Japanese-Ainu village, who until his death faithfully worked for Christ in that remote spot; and the wife of a leper at Hakodate, who after supporting her husband, her child and herself for thirteen years, working in a factory for twelve hours a day and preparing the food and tending the poor, loathsome invalid night and early morning, now that her husband has

The last link with Heathenism severed.

One of the children died nine years ago, and as at that time the father alone was a Christian, their friends urged that the child should have a Buddhist funeral. As the mother and the rest of the family are now Christians, they felt it was not consistent to leave the child's name-tablet in the temple any longer. Accordingly the mother went bravely to the Buddhist priest, and told him that since she now is a Christian she would be glad if he would give her the child's jhai (a tablet with a Buddhist posthumous name inscribed). He promised to do so, but as nine years had elapsed since the funeral took place it meant a little searching before it could be found! She was asked to call again, and finally received it. We went with the family to the cemetery last month and removed the Buddhist post which marked the child's grave, and planted in its stead a cross, with the words, 'Except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God,' and 'I am the Resurrection and the Life', written on it.*

Educational Work.

The mission-schools in Hokkaido are few in number. The kindergarten school at Otaru has been so successful in influencing, not the children alone, but also their parents, that a similar school has been opened at Hakodate, and another, apparently a private venture on the part of Mrs. Takatsu, the widow of the Rev. M. Takatsu, whose lamented death has already been recorded, at Sapporo. Hopeful work is carried on also at the Sunday-schools.

Evangelistic Work.

As in other parts of Japan, the Semi-centennial of Protestant Missions in the Empire was celebrated by special evangelistic meetings; notwithstanding the great heat there were good audiences at many places, and some came forward afterwards and gave in their names as desirous of further instruction, but at Sapporo the results were disappointing, for all the would-be inquirers dropped off in a short time. A good deal of energy was thrown into the work among women students at Hakodate, where an important opening was gained among girls attending the Government Higher School; but at Otaru this branch of missionary effort came to an end through the girls, owing, it was thought, to opposition, ceasing to visit the missionaries. Unhappily nothing could be done to carry the Gospel to Saghalien, but a few new preaching-places were opened in various parts of the Hokkaido, and Asahigawa, a town with more than 30,000 inhabitants, six hours by rail from Sapporo, with a large number of Ainu within ten or fifteen miles,† was occupied for the first time by a C.M.S. missionary in April, 1909.‡

The work in the last-named district yielded fruit. An old Ainu who worshipped both Japanese and Ainu gods gave them up and appeared to become a humble believer in Christ, several patients at the military hospital became inquirers, while a couple of students were baptized. Among the other converts were a banker and his young wife, led to study Christianity by feeling a 'lack in their life,' and a Japanese at Sapporo belonging to the old warrior class, of whom the Rev. W. E. Reeve wrote in December, 1909 :—

One of the old warrior class baptized.

After his baptism he continued his studies of the Scriptures as earnestly as ever, and when in July last he left Sapporo to commence farming in a small village, some seventy miles distant, he expressed his desire to assist the catechist of that place and devote his spare time to the spread of the Gospel. Since then he has had the joy of seeing his wife and child receive baptism, and has himself been confirmed. Every week he opens his house for a meeting, to which all are welcome, and which is devoted to Bible-study and prayer. His parents, who are strong Buddhists, and live with him, are much opposed to his (to them) strange hallucinations. Opposition is also met with from certain of the villagers, behind whom are the Buddhist priests.

NORTH-WEST CANADA MISSIONS.

THE PAST HISTORY.

The Society's work in North-West Canada is among the remnants of the Red Indian tribes scattered over the vast country formerly known as the Hudson's Bay Territory, but now included in the Dominion of Canada. In 1822 the Rev. John West arrived at a trading settlement on the Red River, a little south of Lake Winnipeg, and began to gather the Indians round him. Now the Red River District is the flourishing colonial Province of Manitoba, and a large part of the Society's work has developed into the settled ministrations of the Church in the Colony. One of the Society's churches has become the Cathedral of the diocese of Rupert's Land, which was founded in 1849. That diocese was divided in 1872 into four parts, the three new dioceses being those of Moosonee, Athabasca and Saskatchewan. In 1875 these dioceses were constituted an Ecclesiastical Province with the Bishop of Rupert's Land as the Metropolitan. In 1884 the Provincial Synod divided the diocese of Athabasca, forming the new diocese of Mackenzie River, and at the same time the diocese of Qu'Appelle was formed out of Rupert's Land and Saskatchewan. In 1887 the diocese of Calgary was formed out of Saskatchewan; in 1890 Selkirk (now known as Yukon), on the west of the Rocky Mountains, out of Mackenzie River; and in 1902 Keewatin out of Rupert's Land and Moosonee. Rupert's Land had for its first Bishop Dr. Anderson (1849), then Archbishop Machray (1865), and now Archbishop Matheson (1905); Moosonee, Dr. Horden (1872), Newnham (1893), Holmes (1905), Anderson (1909); Keewatin, Dr. Lofthouse (1902); Saskatchewan, Dr. McLean (1874), Pinkham (1886), Newnham (translated from Moosonee, 1903); Qu'Appelle, Dr. Anson (1884), Burn (1893), Grisdale (1896); Calgary, Dr. Pinkham (1887); Athabasca, Dr. Bompas (1874), Young (1884), Holmes (translated from Moosonee, 1909); Mackenzie River (now vacant), Dr. Bompas (1884), Reeve (1891); Yukon, Dr. Bompas (1891), Stringer (1905). All the present Bishops of these dioceses, except Rupert's Land and Calgary, have been missionaries of the C.M.S.

The Society labours in all the above-named nine dioceses except that of Qu'Appelle. In RUPERT'S LAND DIOCESE the Society's work was commenced in the Red River district in 1823; and Rainy Lake district was occupied in 1874. In KEEWATIN DIOCESE, York was occupied in 1854; Fort Alexander, 1864; Churchill, 1886. In MOOSONEE DIOCESE, Moose Fort was occupied in 1851; Albany, 1855; East Main Coast, 1877; Lake Harbour, 1909. In SASKATCHEWAN DIOCESE, Cumberland and Devon were occupied in 1840; Stanley, 1852; Sandy Lake (Asisipi), 1875; Battleford, 1877; Prince Albert, 1879; Grand Rapids, 1881; and Fort Pitt, 1888. In CALGARY DIOCESE, Fort McLeod was occupied in 1880; Blackfoot Crossing in 1883; Sarcee Reserve in 1886. In ATHABASCA DIOCESE, Fort Chipewyan was occupied in 1867; Fort Vermilion, 1876; Lesser Slave Lake, 1886; Upper Peace River, 1888. In MACKENZIE RIVER DIOCESE, Fort Simpson, 1858; Fort McPherson, 1871; Fort Resolution, 1875; Fort Norman, 1885; Herschel Island, 1893. In YUKON DIOCESE, Rampart House, 1882; Buxton, 1887; Selkirk, 1892; Moosehide (Klondyke), 1897; Carcross, 1900.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK.

The majority of the Indians in North-West Canada have by this time embraced Christianity, and the work among them is largely pastoral. Many Eskimo, however, are still unreached by the Gospel, and a new Arctic Mission, worked from Canada and not England as its base, was established in 1909 at Lake Harbour in Hudson Strait.

The Society makes a grant of £100 per annum to St. John's College, Winnipeg, and gives also £137 per annum in scholarships. Homes for Indian children are found at some stations.

Medical work is carried on at Fort Pitt, in the diocese of Saskatchewan.

The Society continues to be responsible for the salaries of the missionaries in home connexion (four Bishops and nine other clergy), and assists by an annually diminishing block grant the work in eight dioceses.

Death of Mrs. J. Hunter.

THE death of Mrs. Hunter, the widow of Archdeacon J. Hunter, who laboured in North-West Canada from 1840 to 1857 and was the first C.M.S. missionary to reach the Mackenzie River, occurred at Seaton Carew on February 17, 1910.

Apostolic labours.

Archdeacon M. Scott, who has spent nearly twenty-five years in apostolic labours among the Indians, experiencing many hardships and privations, not the least of which has been the enforced separation from his son, whom he has only seen for ten months in the last twenty years, has now been obliged by ill-health to retire.

I. DIOCESE OF RUPERT'S LAND.

THE report received from Shoal River speaks of the simple faith of the older Indians and of good attendances at the services. Three adults were baptized. One of them was an old man who had never taken part in any pagan ceremonies, but had kept aloof from all forms of religion, and the others were a man and his wife, of whom the Rev. T. J. Dobbs writes as follows :—

Heathen leaders baptized.

For many years they had been the leaders of the old pagan religion. The man, a venerable-looking fellow with a long white beard and long white hair, was a most persistent 'drummer.' Every missionary who visited this place had endeavoured to get him to give it up, but all in vain. I had tried him, too, frequently, but all to no purpose. His answer always was, 'It is my religion; I am serving the Great Spirit.' For some time previous to his baptism the drum had been untouched. One Sunday evening his daughter came to ask me to visit the old man. I was rather surprised at the request, especially as she asked me to bring 'the books.' I hastened to see him. When I got there he expressed dissatisfaction with the old religion, saying that it might be all very well in its way, but it lacked 'the one thing needful.' He said, 'For some time past I have been thinking very earnestly over what Christian ministers have told me. My old religion is not a bad one; it has its good points, but it lacks a Redeemer. Your "praying religion" alone can supply that. I have thrown the drum aside, and have been led to believe that Christ alone can save me. Will you baptize my wife and myself? We have been earnestly trying to follow the right road, and the Great Father above has led us to ask you, and we wish to finish our days on this earth as the followers of Jesus.' I put them under a short course of instruction, baptized them, published the banns of marriage, and in a few days afterwards I married them. This old couple must have lived together, man and wife according to their own laws, for at least sixty years, as they have great-grandchildren who are married and have children.*

Missionary hardships.

THE hardships of missionary work in the northern parts of the diocese of Keewatin have as yet been but little diminished. The workers are dependent on the annual visit of a Hudson's Bay Company's boat for their supplies, and should anything happen to prevent its arrival they may be hard put to it for provisions. In 1909 the ship was damaged in a gale, and though she got into

Churchill she could not proceed to York Factory, and in the autumn the Rev. R. Faries, the missionary at the latter station, wrote that they were running short of some things, though they had the actual necessaries of life. Visiting the isolated stations is often fraught with considerable difficulty and danger. In the summer Bishop Lofthouse took four days in a boat less than 30 feet long, with no cabin, to make forty miles, and for forty-eight hours he and his companions were unable to land or even to get a cup of tea. He writes :—

On our eighth day we got off the Nelson river—just an open roadstead. Here a severe gale came on from the east, and we were unable to cross the nineteen miles stretch which forms the mouth of the river. We were obliged to run up the river, and tried to get ashore, but had to remain in the boat most of the night with the heavy seas washing right over us. When the tide had fallen we managed to wade ashore through a quarter of a mile of mud flats, roll ourselves in our blankets, and sleep on the wet ground.

At the northern stations—Split Lake, York and Churchill—'good and faithful work' is being done, and Bishop Lofthouse says that 'it is a joy to see the earnest and devoted spirit shown by the Indians at all their services, and the bringing into their daily life of the teaching of the Bible, in which they have been so well grounded. Religion is a real thing with them.' At the first-named place the Indians showed great liberality, contributing $120 at Easter, and later in the year, after they had received their treaty money, making a special thankoffering of $100. Forty-five persons were confirmed there and twenty-five at York Factory.* At the other stations, where the Indians have come more into contact with white men, the outlook is less satisfactory. Strong drink proves a great snare to many, and other evils besides are introduced by civilization. At Long Sault, however, the Christians were liberal in their gifts, and three half-breeds were baptized.

III. DIOCESE OF MOOSONEE.

Bishop J. G. Anderson visited many of the stations in the summer of 1909. The Indians showed themselves keenly appreciative of the ministrations of the Church, even at places such as Osnaburgh, where they but rarely see a missionary. The Bishop mentions that in the Fort Hope district the people when in camp 'make their toilet' before family prayers both morning and evening, because they are about to meet God.

Preparation for family prayers.

Some of the Indians and Eskimo in the Fort George district display much zeal for the welfare of their companions. The Rev. W. G. Walton writes :—

An Eskimo's zeal.

An Eskimo came to me one day and told me how he prevented another Eskimo from putting away his wife. He sought for an opportunity to speak to him alone, and at last it came while they were off hunting together in their kayaks (skin canoes). There were several of them, but as it came on to blow hard they lashed their kayaks together in pairs and so were able to hoist a small sail with safety. My friend managed it so that he and the other should sail together, and then, after a while, brought out his Testament and found the place where Jesus speaks about a man putting away his wife. After reading the verses to his comrade, he said, 'Friend, I do not want to speak to you, but Jesus; and now you have heard His voice, do you intend to put away your wife still? At last came the answer, 'No,' which gave him such joy.

Testimony of an American Professor to consistent lives of Eskimo.

Mr. Walton also says that four American gentlemen, one of them a Professor at Winconsin University, who met some of the Eskimo were so much struck with their lives, that they asked the traders if the people were really what they appeared to be; the reply was in the affirmative.

A new Arctic Mission.

The new Arctic Mission, which was referred to in last year's Report,* was set on foot in the summer of the year under review. The base of the new Mission is in Canada, the Society lending the services of two of its missionaries, the Revs. E. J. Peck and E. W. T. Greenshield, and the other workers being selected by the Bishop of Moosonee. On July 30 Mr. Peck left from St. John's, Newfoundland, with Mr. Bilby, a former missionary of the C.M.S., and Mr. Fleming, a Canadian, in a sailing schooner hired from Dr. Grenfell, of the National Mission to Deep Sea Fishermen, their objective being Big Island, in Ashe Inlet. After a voyage of about four weeks, they disembarked at Lake Harbour, and, finding that the Eskimo whom they sought to reach were in larger numbers there than at Ashe Inlet, some thirty miles distant, they proceeded to build a mission-house and to hold regular services. Mr. Peck was greatly cheered to find many traces of the work at Blacklead Island in the past. He wrote of the welcome which they received at Lake Harbour in the following terms:—

Light-bearers' for their own people.

As we walked up from the beach we were soon surrounded by a crowd of expectant people. Heartily were our hands grasped, and cries arose on every hand such as, 'How joyful!' 'How loving!' 'We wanted ministers and now they are come.' And what was the cause of this hearty welcome? Surely the Lord God had gone out before us and prepared the way. But how? The influence of the work at Blacklead Island had spread even to here, and not only so, but God had sent some of the Christian adherents before us to this very spot. I looked, therefore, into the faces of some old friends and heard with joy that they had become 'light-bearers' for their own people. Surrounded by this Arctic throng I told them how God had sent the Gospel to them, and how we had come as God's messengers to do them good. After each clause of my speech a mighty shout of joyful assent arose, so much so that I felt quite embarrassed by the volume of sound.

Concerning the first service, which was held under the shadow of some high rocks, Mr. Peck says:—

As I looked at the people I saw several with books in their hands. These they had obtained, as I afterwards found out, from Eskimo whom they had met in their travels, who had met us at Blacklead Island and Frobisher Bay, and had, therefore, been able to obtain these silent but effectual messengers from us. Having sung a few hymns, in which some of our friends heartily joined, I read the opening verses of the third chapter of St. John's Gospel. Dwelling upon the main truths of this wonderful portion of God's Word I was led to speak of man's fallen state by nature, and the absolute necessity of a total change, even a new birth, wrought in the soul by the power of the Holy Spirit. It may well be asked, How could these people understand the truths proclaimed? Here we see again the leading of God. One of their number, with the help of a copy of the Gospels which she had carefully read and studied, had tried to teach her neighbours. Sunday after Sunday she had gathered the Eskimo together and had taught them what she could. I told her how delighted I was to hear of her work, but she replied, 'I feel like an unbeliever, because I know so little.'

An Eskimo woman teaches her neighbours.

On another occasion, late at night, Mr. Peck heard the sound of oars, and found a boat drawing near. He writes:—

I called out in Eskimo, 'Nakit pevese?' i.e. 'Where do you come from?' Immediately I heard voices saying, 'Is that he?' And soon our sturdy friends were clambering over the ship's side. Coming close to me and looking into my face, they said, 'Truly it is he.' Grasping my hand they gave me a hearty welcome, and soon, in the interchange of greetings, I recognized some Eskimo who years ago had paid a visit to Blacklead Island. These poor creatures had, as I soon discovered, in no wise forgotten the truths they had heard, and one woman, in particular, was able to read remarkably well. Touching was it to see the manner in which she had carefully kept a copy of the Gospels, and not only so, but she evidently knew the contents and could quote passages and confirm my statements by what 'the Book said.'

After a stay of some three weeks at Lake Harbour, Mr. Peck left Messrs. Bilby and Fleming to carry on the work there while he himself returned to Ontario. It is hoped that Mr. Greenshield, who sailed in the summer to visit his old station at Blacklead Island, will eventually join the other workers at Lake Harbour.*

IV. DIOCESE OF CALGARY.

GREAT progress has been made in the work in the diocese of Calgary since it was set on foot at Macleod in 1880, and there are now nearly 600 Christians on the four Indian reserves.† But, according to Archdeacon J. W. Tims, a stage has been arrived at where progress is delayed. The immigration of white settlers has greatly affected the Indians, who seek to emulate them; the increased opportunities for earning money cause the natives to scatter in search of work and make it difficult for the missionaries to find them at home; and the larger earnings of the people enable them to buy liquor more frequently. The ordinary Sunday services at Sarcee Reserve were not so well attended as in 1908, though the Indians made a special point of coming in for the great Church festivals and Thanksgiving Day. The health of the children at St. Barnabas's Home and indeed of all the children on the Reserve, caused much anxiety, owing to the prevalence of tubercular disease, with which nearly every one proved to be affected. One woman was baptized on her death-bed.

V. DIOCESE OF SASKATCHEWAN.

THE inrush of settlers into Saskatchewan has brought the usual evils in its train, and the Indians are now exposed to temptations, especially from strong drink, from which until lately they enjoyed immunity. Many of them, happily, stand fast and display increased zeal in the Saviour's service, and at Fort Pitt some advance was seen in the attendance of the white people and half-breeds at the services. Sturgeon Lake, in the Prince Albert district, still remains a 'stronghold of Satan,' not so much, however, because of heathen superstition as because of indifference to things spiritual. The Rev. J. Hines says that the people know enough of Christianity to shake their faith in the efficacy of heathen incantations, but the evil example of white men deters them from accepting the Saviour. Still, they have begun to observe Sunday as a day of rest, and show a more favourable disposition towards Christianity than in past years.

Faith in heathen incantations shaken.

VI. DIOCESE OF ATHABASCA.

A VALUABLE work is done by the boarding-schools in the diocese of Athabasca, notably at White Fish Lake, where nearly all the young converts are former scholars. The men at that station who were brought to Christ during the revival at Easter, 1908,* continued steadfast in their faith, notably one who had been 'one of the most hardened and hopeless sinners of the militant type,' and another who in former days was the leader at all the heathen feasts and gambling orgies. Bishop G. Holmes writes of the latter as follows:—

> Describing to me some of his experiences and temptations, first in the death of his mother, then, soon after, in the death of his child, he said, 'By God's grace and from the Great Spirit's book, I have learned to understand and experience that in submission and humble resignation to God's will we may have, as St. Paul says, "joy in tribulation."' Speaking of his attitude towards the world, he said, 'I have learnt from the Great Spirit's book this lesson, that if I would live in communion with God I must be out of communion with the world. For instance,' he said, 'Some time ago some of my old companions invited me to a feast, assuring me that there would be nothing bad there. My answer was, "You know that if you had given me this invitation before I knew the grace of God I would have been the first to accept, and if bad had not been there I should have made it; but now, I must tell you that I have lost the taste for all such things of the flesh. And if your desire is to make me happy, I must tell you that you have nothing to give me greater happiness than I have, for I am like a vessel that is full to overflowing."[2]

A man at White Fish Lake who had been opposed to Christianity was led to become an inquirer by the restoration of his health in answer to prayer. One adult was baptized in the Wapuskaw district.

VII. DIOCESE OF MACKENZIE RIVER.

HAY RIVER had the privilege of its first episcopal visit for three years in July, 1909, when Bishop Stringer passed through it en route for his own diocese and confirmed twenty candidates. An Indian residing at a place eighty miles from the mission-station preferred an earnest request that work might be begun among his friends, and reported that three other bands of natives were anxious to be taught the Gospel. Unhappily it was impossible to take advantage of these openings. Nine adults of the Mackenzie Bay Eskimo, who in the absence of a resident missionary had been instructed by one of their number, were baptized.

Nine Eskimo baptized.

VIII. DIOCESE OF YUKON.

BISHOP I. STRINGER had a narrow escape from death during the year under review. After his visit to Hay River, which has just been referred to, he proceeded, accompanied by Mr. C. F. Johnson, to Fort McPherson. On Sept. 1 they left that station with canoes, hoping to cross the divide in time to reach the Porcupine River before the winter's rigour set in, but the frost came too soon and they were obliged to turn back. When they again set their faces towards Fort McPherson they had only three days' rations, the snow was already deep on the ground, and neither of them had any knowledge of the trail; a dense fog came on in which more than once they were on the verge of a precipice; they had to spend several nights without fires, and for food they were reduced to cooking and eating their boots, made of raw sealskin. At length, twenty miles from Fort McPherson, just as their strength was giving out, they met a party of Indians, who relieved their wants.*

Narrow escape of Bishop Stringer from death.

A new church, towards the cost of which the Indians contributed more than £400, was erected at Moosehide as a memorial to Bishop Bompas, and the attendance at the services there held was excellent, very few of the natives being absent on Sundays. Intemperance, however, is prevalent among the Indians, notwithstanding the earnest efforts of the Government officials to prevent the supply of intoxicating liquors to them. The Indians of Stewart River showed great anxiety to be taught, and new work was set on foot among those at Teslin Lake.

* An account of Bishop Stringer's adventures was given in Awake, June, 1910, p. 63.

* Many of the stations in these Missions which were on the Society's list a few years ago have been removed because the missionaries are no longer supported from the Society's funds. This accounts for the totals being lower than in 1899.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MISSION.

THE PAST HISTORY.

In 1856 Captain Prevost, R.N., drew the Society's attention to the savage state of the Tsimshean Indians on the coast of British Columbia, and a young schoolmaster, Mr. W. Duncan, was sent out. Great blessing was vouchsafed to his labours, and in 1862 the Christian settlement of Metlakahtla was founded. In 1881, however, Mr. Duncan refused to work on the lines of the Church of England and ceased to be a missionary of the Society, and an unhappy schism among the Native Christians resulted. But peace was in God's good providence ultimately restored, though at a heavy cost. Prolonged disputes about the land ensued between Mr. Duncan's Indians and the Government; and in the summer of 1887 Mr. Duncan removed with some hundreds of the Indians to a place seventy miles distant, within the United States territory of Alaska. After the departure of the disaffected party the conduct of the loyal Indians was so excellent that the Government Commissioners, sent in November, 1888, to report on the condition of these disturbed districts, stated that the Metlakahtla Church Indians were in happy contrast to all others, and were a credit to their instructors.

The diocese of British Columbia was subdivided in 1879, and the Rev. W. Ridley, formerly a missionary of the Society in the Punjab, was appointed the first Bishop of Caledonia, the northern division. The C.M.S. mission-stations, with the exception of that at Alert Bay, are situated in the latter diocese. Bishop Ridley resigned the See in 1904, and was succeeded in that year by Bishop Du Vernet.

Kincolith was occupied in 1866; Massett, 1876; Alert Bay, 1878; Hazelton, 1880; Giatwangak, 1882; Aiyansh, 1883; and Kitkatla, 1887.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK.

Metlakahtla, the headquarters of the Mission, and Kitkatla are on the coast; Hazelton and Giatwangak lie on the Skeena River; and Kincolith and Aiyansh are on the Naas River. At Massett, on Queen Charlotte Islands, the work is among the Hydah Indians. Alert Bay, on Vancouver Island, is far south of the other stations. There is an Industrial School for boys at Alert Bay, and at Metlakahtla a Hostel and the Ridley Home for white and half-breed children who attend the Government School.

The missionary staff consists, besides Bishop Du Vernet, of seven clergymen, one layman, nine missionaries' wives, and three single women, besides twenty-nine native Christian lay agents.

Unrest among the Indians.

SEVERAL of the missionaries in British Columbia speak of unrest among the Indians, caused by their being confined to reserves on which they possess no personal or individual rights, and which they assert were thrust upon them without their being consulted or having the proposed measures properly explained to them. Some trouble occurred at Hazelton, where the police were obliged to arrest six Indians for interfering with a party of white men engaged in making a road; the natives were tried, found guilty, and sentenced to short terms of imprisonment. Eventually the Indians appealed to the King and Privy Council, and at the end of the year they were patiently awaiting the result.

While this spirit of unrest adversely affected work among the people, the influence of the white population was even more prejudicial to its success. Drinking habits were on the increase; and the frequent arrival of pleasure parties, the constant passing and re-passing of steamers and launches engaged in business, and the rock-blasting along the line of railway, all of which were common on Sundays, tended to the secularization of the Lord's Day. Of course there were many members of the white population whose influence over the natives was for good; there were also numbers of Indians who stood firm, and were consistent in their lives. For example, Archdeacon W. H. Collison * says that almost all the Indian fishermen at Kincolith declined to begin fishing on Sundays at the usual hour of 6 P.M., though hundreds of Japanese launched their boats sharp at that hour. On the other hand, the Rev. J. Field, of Hazelton, says that within the last two or three years a change has come over the people, and they make but a cold response to efforts for their spiritual welfare; while from Metlakahtla the Rev. J. H. Keen reports that there is a falling off among the younger Christians in attendance at the Holy Communion. Moreover, there were some indications of a desire to revive the potlatch and the feasts for the dead which were a part of that system.

Converts refuse to work on Sundays.

Baptisms.

The missionaries were cheered by several adult baptisms. At Hazelton one of the school-girls, sixteen years of age, was received into the visible Church, as were two other adults; at Kisgagas eight adults were baptized; and five on the Naas River.

The Committee have accepted the resignation of the Rev. W. E. Collison.

* Archdeacon Collison had a narrow escape from drowning in the summer. See C.M. Gleaner, March, 1910, p. 44.

APPENDIX A.

EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS, ORPHANAGES, ETC.

The first table in the following list includes all Institutions in which men are trained to be clergy, catechists or evangelists, or women are prepared for work as Bible-women; and the second gives those where school teachers are trained.

Colleges are entered as first grade when they prepare for the B.A. and higher degrees, and second grade when they fail to attain to the B.A. standard, although preparing students for University Examinations above that for matriculation.

Upper Secondary Schools are those which read up to a University Entrance Examination or reach a corresponding standard, and in most of them English is taught. Other schools in which the education imparted is higher than that in primary schools at home are entered as Lower Secondary Schools. The teaching in the Secondary Schools in Fuh-Kien which are marked † is of a nature calculated to enable the pupils in after years to become school teachers and Church agents.

Hostels maintained in connexion with schools where only an elementary education is given are not included in the list.

The Institutions are arranged in alphabetical order of the stations in the various Missions.

*The mark * denotes that the institutions to the names of which it is prefixed do not belong entirely, if at all, to the C.M.S., though in many cases they are manned by the Society's missionaries, and in some are managed by them. Most of the institutions for lepers are wholly or partially supported by the Mission to Lepers in India and the East.*

It has not been possible in all cases to obtain exact information as to the number of students, etc., but, failing that, approximate figures are given. The statistics may be taken as indicating the number of students, etc., at the end of 1909.

PROPER FORMS OF A BENEFACTION TO THE SOCIETY BY WILL.

No. I.—Form of a Bequest of a Common Legacy.

I give and bequeath to the Treasurer for the time being of the Church Missionary Society for Africa and the East the sum of Pounds *free of duty for the general purposes of the said Society such sum and the duty thereon to be paid within calendar months next after my death. And I declare that the receipt of the Treasurer for the time being of the said Society shall be an effectual discharge for the said Legacy.

No. II.—Form of Bequest of the Residue or a share of the Residue.

I give and bequeath unto the Treasurer for the time being of the Church Missionary Society for Africa and the East for the general purposes of the said Society my Residuary Real and Personal Estate [or if a share only of the Residue is intended to be given, then, instead of the words in Italics, say "such sum of money as shall be equal to one-fourth or one-half (according to the intention) of my whole Residuary Real and Personal Estate"]. And I declare that the receipt of the Treasurer for the time being of the said Society shall be an effectual discharge for the said Residue [or sum of money as the case may be]. And as to the remainder (if any) of my general Residuary Estate I bequeath the same, &c.

* If so intended.

I.—ANNIVERSARY PREACHERS AND COLLECTIONS OF FORMER YEARS TO MAY, 1909.

NOTICE TO TREASURERS AND SECRETARIES OF ASSOCIATIONS.

End of Financial Year, March 31st.

THE COMMITTEE OF THE CHURCH MISSIONARY SOCIETY beg to remind the Treasurers and Secretaries of Associations that the Society's Financial Year ends on the 31st of March.

No Balances shown.

Sums not received at Salisbury Square by the 3rd April cannot be shown in the Accounts as Balances. The Contribution Lists should, after deduction of any necessary disbursements, agree in total with the amounts actually paid to the Parent Society to that date.

Branches.

Where an Association has Branches connected with it, the Money and Accounts of the Branches must be forwarded to the Association Treasurer or Secretary (and not direct to the Parent Society) a reasonable time before the latest date for forwarding to London.

Contribution Lists and Accounts.

Lists and Accounts (if not sent with the money) must be forwarded not later than April 6th (see last paragraph but one). At the head of the List should be furnished the name of the Diocese, Archdeaconry, and Deanery in which each parish is situate. It is very essential that this information should be given accurately to ensure correct entry in Annual Report. The date at which the Accounts of the Association are closed, and the names of the Local Officers, must be specified. (Very great inconvenience is experienced when this is not done.)

Accurate information essential.

Local Officers.

The Contribution Lists should be written legibly to avoid mistakes in printing, and made up in the manner in which the same are printed in the Parent Society's Report. Forms of Account and ruled paper with directions for filling up the form may be had on application to the Lay Secretary at the Society's House. Where the Account or the List is a printed one, two copies should be forwarded. In compiling Local Reports it would greatly facilitate the work at the C.M. House if under each of the several classes of contributions (e.g., Annual Subscriptions, Boxes, &c.) the items were divided into two parts and printed separately, thus:—

Forms of Account.

Printed Lists.

(1) Items of 10*s.* and over (In alphabetical order.)	With separate totals for each.
(2) Items of under 10*s.*

Governors.

Life and Annual Governors. The names of Governors (which should be furnished by the Treasurers and Secretaries) will be printed at the head of each diocesan list of Contributions.

Appropriated Contributions.

Particulars of Appropriated Contributions and Contributions to Special Funds paid through 'Associations' are printed with the Lists to which they respectively belong.

Special Funds and General Fund.

In order that the Society's General Fund Income for the year may be accurately ascertained before the accounts are closed and audited, it is essential that particulars of amounts paid for each Appropriated head of Account and Special Fund shall be despatched to Salisbury Square not later than April 6th. Should, however, the Contribution List for the year (for printing in the Annual Report) have been forwarded by that date, such particulars will not be needed.

Remittances should be made early in Financial Year.

Association Treasurers should remit to the Parent Committee at the end of every month any sum in their hands, over and above the amount required to meet disbursements, &c., the balance being remitted when the Association accounts are closed for the year. Similarly, Branch Treasurers should remit from time to time to their Association Treasurers. This course would tend to equalise in a greater degree the Income and Expenditure in the earlier months of the Society's Financial year, and save the Society a large yearly sum.

RESPECTING REMITTANCES.

Remittances.

Remittances may be made through Local Bankers, and their correspondents in London, to the account of the Society at WILLIAMS DEACON'S BANK, Limited, 20 Birchin Lane, London, in which case it is requested that advice of the same be sent by post addressed to the Lay Secretary.

Or Drafts may be forwarded direct to the C.M. House, payable to the Church Missionary Society, and crossed WILLIAMS DEACON'S BANK, Limited, acct. C.M.S.

Post Office and Postal Orders should be drawn on the General Post Office, and be made payable to the Church Missionary Society, and crossed WILLIAMS DEACON'S BANK, Limited, acct. C.M.S.
